Pooling U. S. Man Power

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

The Senate Military Affairs Committee, responding to an appeal from President Roosevelt for a "large pool" of men for the Nation's combat forces, yesterday voted to make youths 19 and 20 years of age eligible for military service.

By its action, the committee cleared the way for swift passage of legislation authorizing creation of the largest conscript army in the country's history, but it took issue with the House Military Committee over the question of whether liability for service should start at 19 or 21 years of age.

Floor Fight Forecast

The House bill, scheduled yesterday for two hours of debate on the floor today, would limit military service to men between the ages of 21 and 44, inclusive. The Senate bill sets the age limits at 19 and 44, inclusive. Both measures authorize registration of all men between 18 and 64, inclusive.

In the Senate committee, the vote in an executive session was reported to have been unanimous, but several committeemen have expressed opposition to drafting men younger than 21, and a floor fight on the issue was forecast.

In letters to Vice President Wallace, Senator Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina; the committee chairman, and majority and minority leaders, President Roosevelt called for a military draft of men from 19 to 44.

"I approve it as a means of providing a sufficiently large pool of men available for service in our land and naval forces (including the air force) adequate to meet all contingencies now foreseeable."

The President declared the registration provision of the legislation to be "an essential instrument for the orderly planning of our national effort."

"These two features of the bill supplement each other," he said. "I consider them of equal and prime importance."

Million Men for Air Service

Senator Chandler (Democrat), of Kentucky, said the President's letter "undoubtedly influenced the committee," of which Chandler is a member.

"Under the bill the President is given the right to defer age groups and to terminate the deferments," Chandler said. "If youngsters are not needed, they will not be called.

"But we are operating on a day-to-day basis, and we did not want to tie the hands of the President."

Chandler said that an estimated million men "will be needed in the air service."

The estimate, it was reported, was given the committee by Brig. Gen. Wade H. Haislip, the Army's personnel chief. Haislip appeared as a witness before the secret session which received messages urging approval of the measure from Secretary of War Stimson, Secretary

Dancettes Kick

College Girls Hit at Army Distinctions

It's all wrong, this business of class distinctions and rules of superiority in the Army.

At least that's what the college girls think when it comes to dancing with soldiers, the Office of Defense, Health and Welfare Services reports.

Mark McCloskey, the office's director of recreation, announced yesterday that he had received a report from an Eastern women's college suggesting the Army change its rules of "etiquette" for enlisted men at social functions. Trouble is, it seems, that the "top kicks" are all the time chiseling in on the privates' girls.

The report reads in part:

"A torrent of dissent was loosed when the matter of dancing with soldiers came up for discussion (at a conference on the girls' part in defense). Part of the dissatisfaction has to do with the military rules of etiquette. 'When we dance with a nice boy who is a private,' one delegate said, 'the sergeant cuts in and that's the last we ever see of him!' It seems the Army has a rule that a private can't cut in on a superior."

The matter has not yet been referred to the War Department; it was believed, through fear of violating the secrecy rule on troop movements.

A. F. L. Renews Offer to C. I. O. For Peace

Feeler Is Put Out On Eve of Industry And Labor Parley

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

On the eve of a White House sponsored labor-industry conference to end strikes during the emergency, the American Federation of Labor yesterday renewed its peace offer to the C. I. O., and issued a broad hint that it would abandon its closed shop drive for the duration of the war.

The peace feeler and the suggestion that "neither labor nor management should . . . prosecute either's advantage at the expense of the other, that industrial relations be preserved" during the emergency was made in a statement by a conference of the presidents of the constituent unions of the A. F. L.

Today six representatives of the A. F. of L. and a like number of C. I. O. leaders will meet with 12 representatives of defense industry in a conference presided over by William H. Davis, chairman of the National Defense Mediation Board. Purpose of the gathering is to seek an accord to submit labor disputes in war industry to a process of conciliation, mediation and, if necessary, binding arbitration. It was anticipated that the conference would lead to the establishment of a tribunal similar to the War Labor Board of 1918, which was comprised of equal panels of labor and industry and headed by two co-chairmen.

Council's Proposal Indorsed

The A. F. of L. officers yesterday indorsed a proposal of their executive council for the re-creation of a War Labor Board, and added, significantly:

"We believe the general principles then (in World War I) enunciated for the guidance of this board should be made the policy of this hour."

Major principle agreed to in 1918 by the A. F. of L. was the abandon-

A Return to the Scene

Japanese war vessels have struck again at islands of the Hawaiian group, the Navy announced yesterday, shelling a naval air outpost on Johnston Island and a port 95 miles east by southeast of Pearl Harbor.

Both attacks, launched at dusk Monday, are believed to have done little damage, a Navy Department communique said.

Wake Island, beleaguered Midpacific naval outpost, has been bombed again, the communique also disclosed. Two aerial attacks were made, one light and the other described as "heavy."

But the heroic Marine defenders at Wake and at Midway Island, the Navy added, "are countering the blows of the enemy."

Hint of Naval Showdown

The communique hinted that American warships may be pursuing the Japanese attacking ships or seeking a naval showdown elsewhere in the mid-Pacific. It contained this curt statement:

"Naval operations are continuing against the enemy."

Johnston Island, tiny atoll 717 miles southwest of Honolulu, was bombarded by enemy surface ships, the Navy said. It was the first time that this naval air outpost has figured in the war.

Drive Set for Spring May Be Set Ahead; Kalinin Retaken

By the United Press

London, Dec. 16.—Joseph Stalin has called a war council at Moscow's Kremlin to consider launching immediately the gigantic Russian offensive originally planned for next spring, Stockholm dispatches said tonight, amid new reports of disastrous German defeats on the eastern front.

The Stockholm dispatches, received here by the Daily Mail, suggested that the conference already has been held and that one of the subjects discussed was how much Russia could contribute toward an early knock-out of Japan as well as Germany.

Another report received here by the United Press was that Red Army leaders had held a conference at Kuibyshev and decided that if the present drive against the German gains enough momentum, Russian troops will invade Germany and "beat the enemy on his own soil."

Defeat Approaches Rout

There were indications that the German defeat in Russia was approaching a rout. Tonight's communique broadcast by the Moscow radio claimed that Kalinin, northern anchor point of the Moscow defense line, had been recaptured and that the whole German Ninth Army, comprised of six infantry divisions—90,000 men—had been all but de-

Hitler Has Nervous Breakdown, Turks Hear

Ankara, Dec. 15 (delayed) (U.P.). Adolf Hitler was reported in informed German quarters in Turkey tonight to have been forced by an imminent nervous breakdown to quit the Russian Front and retire to his Berchtesgaden retreat for a rest.

Doctors have told Hitler that he had strained his nervous system to the breaking point for several months, most of which time he spent at field headquarters on the Eastern Front directing the German campaign in Russia, informants said.

German Grip On Northwest Africa Tightens

Reported Building Up Fifth Column in Part Closest to Americas

By Allen Raymond
Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Somewhere in Europe, Dec. 16 (By Wireless).—While the British are pushing their Libyan offensive steadily westward, the Germans are tightening their grip on northwest Africa, the part closest to the Americas.

They have an effective working control for the moment of all French and Spanish territory through the collaboration of the governments in Vichy and Madrid and are swiftly building up that Fifth Column of hidden allies which they usually have prepared in territories they were about to grab by military force.

I have just spent three weeks in Tangier and Spanish Morocco while the United States was still nonbelligerent. I was not permitted even a transit visa through any of French West Africa despite representations in Vichy. The reason was plain

Roosevelt Finds Military Strategy Doing Very Well

President Roosevelt yesterday told his press conference that plans for the coordination of military strategy among the Nations fighting the Axis are coming along very well.

He declined further discussion of possibilities of a unified anti-Axis command, which has been widely discussed here since this country became allied with Britain, Russia, China and other powers in fighting a world-wide war.

The President offered no comment on current military operations, but told reporters that the results of Fifth Column activity in Hawaii were being analyzed in order to prevent recurrence of similar activity anywhere else in the world.

Secretary of the Navy Knox reported Monday that information furnished to the Axis by Fifth Columnists had played an important part in the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

Hawaiian Woman Slays Jap Pilot

Waimea, Kauai Island, T. H., Dec. 16.—It can now be revealed how a Japanese warplane pilot captured the tiny island of Niihau, off the coast of Kauai about 210 miles northwest of Honolulu, and how Benny Kanahele, pure-blooded descendant of ancient Hawaiian warriors, recaptured it after being wounded three times by bullets from the pilot's pistol.

Niihau, 16 miles long and three wide, is inhabited by 180 Hawaiians and two Japanese. The island is without radio or telephone and hence was not aware that war had broken out on Sunday, December 7, when a Japanese plane was forced down there. The pilot, only occupant of the plane, was armed with a machine-gun and side arms.

"We did not know the war was going on," Kanahele said in telling what had happened, "and we received the pilot as a guest."

The Hawaiians disarmed the pilot, but he made friends with the two Japanese on the small island, Harada and Shintani. Harada recovered the arms from the Hawaii-

Singapore And Hongkong Peril Admitted

Malayan Threat Great; British Public Told Island May Fall

By the Associated Press

London, Dec. 16.—A powerful Japanese drive in northern Malaya and Britain's lack of naval superiority have created a serious threat to Singapore, an informed source said tonight, and commentators simultaneously warned the public to be prepared for the fall of besieged Hongkong.

British and Indian troops fought to stop a Japanese mechanized penetration into the lower part of Kedah State in northern Malaya, where the Japanese gained about 50 miles. On the eastern side of the peninsula the Japanese apparently were being held south of Kota Bharu.

[A United Press dispatch from Singapore said British imperial forces were reported to be girding for a big-scale counterattack in Kedah in an effot to prevent the Japanese invaders from establishing coastal bases in that area for use as a springboard to Sumatra, a move indicated by the Japanese thrust toward Victoria Point in the southern tip of Burma.

[The British air force at Kota Bharu sank two Japanese ships

5-Year-Old Son Is Only Help Of Young Crippled Mother

An automobile accident has made her a cripple and she must commute about her little room in "a small express wagon." She has none but her 5-year-old Bobby to help her.

Medical treatment would improve Mrs. H.'s condition so that she could later use crutches, the doctor has said. To be able to afford that treatment would make this the happiest Christmas imaginable for her, and for Bobby, who wants nothing so much as to "see Mommy get well."

Mrs. H. and Bobby are looking for help to contributors to The Washington Post's Neediest Families Fund, as are others in Washington, and readers of The Post are responding.

Senate Group Votes to Oust Langer, but Delays Action

The Senate Elections Committee in secret session yesterday voted overwhelmingly in favor of unseating Senator Langer (Republican), of North Dakota, but withheld its decision at the request of three committeemen who said they wanted to study evidence further in support of charges that the legislator is unfit for his office by reason of "conduct involving moral turpitude."

Shortly after the meeting, Senator Smith (Democrat), of South Carolina, outspoken supporter of Langer, declared he believed "the Senate will set aside the decision of the committee to oust" the North Dakotan.

Smith said that, in his opinion, the committee lacked jurisdiction to consider charges against Langer contained in a petition filed by North Dakota residents and calling upon the Senate to deny him a seat.

Senator Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico, chairman, announced that the committee will meet at 10:30 a. m. tomorrow for a final vote on the case. Hatch declined to disclose the outcome of yesterday's vote, observing that committee members have the privilege of changing their ballots.

It was learned reliably, however, that the count on those voting yesterday was 10 to 3.

Hatch disclosed that the committee voted on this simple resolution:

"Resolved that William Langer is not entitled to a seat in the Senate of the United States from the State of North Dakota."

Noted Men Make Up Inquiry Board

Distinguished Jurist, Military Experts Ready for Quiz

A distinguished justice, two generals and two admirals—all of whom have served their country well—make up President Roosevelt's board of inquiry that will seek the answer to why the Army and Navy were not "on the alert" at Pearl Harbor.

Here are thumbnail sketches of them.

Owen Josephus Roberts, Associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court. A heavy-jawed man of Pennsylvania German and Welsh antecedents, he was born 66 years ago in Germantown, Pa. After being graduated from the University of Pennsylvania Law School, where he was a brilliant student, he taught at his alma mater for a while, then became an assistant district attorney in Philadelphia. In the World War period, he was named a special United States attorney to prosecute espionage cases.

In February, 1924, President Coolidge named Roberts a special prosecutor in the Teapot Dome and Elk Hills oil scandals, a heritage of the Harding Administration. Roberts was little known at the time outside of Philadelphia, but after he had sent Harry Sinclair and Alebtr B. Fall to jail he was a national figure. He was named associate justice by President Hoover in 1930 after the Senate had rejected the nomination of John J. Parker, of North Carolina, because of alleged anti-Negro and antilabor views. Justice Roberts has been described as "liberal" and "liberal conservative." In the last year or so, he has made speeches urging "unity of sentiment" behind President Roosevelt.

Standley Devotee of Action

Admiral William Harrison Standley, U. S. N. (retired). Gray-haired, keen of eye, he was retired in 1936 after 45 years of service, at the end of which he reached the top—chief of naval operations. He was born in Ukiah, Calif., December 18, 1872, and was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1895 and assigned to the U. S. S. Olympia. In the Spanish-American War, he served on the Monterey and the Alert. During the Philippine insurrection, he was commended for bravery in connection with a reconnoitering expedition. He was assigned to Annapolis during the World War. From 1921 to 1922 he was assistant to the chief of staff of the Pacific Fleet. His credo when he was chief of naval operations: "The Navy is ." As far back urged an of war" was cited for "conspicuous conduct" in this and advanced four numbers. He was in command of the U. S. S. Maine in the World War and was awarded the Navy Cross. Known as the "flying admiral," he won his wings at Pensacola when he was 53. This may be one reason he was selected for the Pearl Harbor inquiry.

Carried By Other Ships

Brig. Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, Air Corps, U. S. A. Born in Emporium, Pa., 48 years ago, and was graduated from West Point in 1915, he was a pioneer Army flier. He took up flying at the Signal Corps Aviation School, San Diego, Calif., in 1916. He served 21 months overseas in the World War, and was a flight commander in the offensives at Chateau-Thierry, St. Mihiel, and the Meuse-Argonne. Afterwards he commanded various flying schools in this country. He recently was an American observer in London, and now is on duty here with the Air Corps.

Maj. Gen. Frank R. McCoy, U. S. A. (retired). He was born at Lewistown, Pa., 67 years ago, and was graduated from West Point in 1897. In the intervening 44 years, he has had vast experience as a soldier and diplomat. In the Spanish-American War, he was wounded in the attack on San Juan Hill. A few years later, he was fighting hostile Moros and outlaws in the Philippines. In the World War he commanded the 165th Infantry—the old "Fighting Sixty-ninth" of New York—and led the outfit through the Champagne and Aisne-Marne actions. In 1940, he supervised an election in Nicaragua at the behest of the Nicaraguan government, and was decorated for his services.

Midget Subs Used by Japs Go 200 Miles

The Navy disclosed yesterday that a Japanese "mother" ship of midget "suicide-submarines" probably came within 100 miles of Pearl Harbor in the surprise attack on Hawaii a week ago Sunday.

Details of the little two-man U-boats which took part in the stab-in-the-back raid on Hawaii were made public by the Navy. One of the enemy craft was captured in the Pearl Harbor attack and carefully examined by Navy submarine experts. Another and a U-boat of normal size were sunk.

Only 41 Feet Long

The midget submarine is only 41 feet long, has a beam of 5 feet and a conning tower 4½ feet above the deck. Its size permits it to travel submerged in shallow water and should enable it to go through some anti-submarine nets, experts here say.

"There are indications," the Navy said, after examining the captured craft, "that the personnel operating these submarines will go to any extreme, however desperate, even to self-sacrifice, to carry out their objective."

The "suicide" nature of the midget sub was indicated by its armament. Besides two 18-inch torpedoes, it carried a 300-pound charge of high explosive under its stern. The charge was wired to the U-boat's battery, it was stated, "So it can be used as a demolition charge either for the submarine itself in case of attack or against ships or harbor objectives."

How many of the tiny subs Japan possess, is not known, but it was indictaed that the short-range craft can be carried aboard lagrer war vessels and launched and picked up like lifeboats.

"Manned by one officer and one rated man, the midget submarines have a cruising radius of approximately 200 miles at slow speed," the Navy stated.

The little ship is propelled by electric motors only and has a designed speed of 24 knots.

Hull Streamlined

Both the hull and conning tower of the midget craft are streamlined and painted black. The periscope projects 5 feet above the conning tower and when the periscope is above water the keel is 10 feet below the surface.

The hull is constructed of ¾-inch plate and is divided into five compartments, two of which contain the electric batteries which run the craft's motors.

The U-boat is equipped with underwater sound and listening devices, radio equipment, a gyro compass and a magnetic compass.

'Send Us Some More Japs,' Wake's Marines Answer

Honolulu, Dec. 16 (AP).—Take it for what it's worth, but this is the story that has been circulating in Honolulu:

When Navy officials established contact with the Marine garrison defending tiny Wake Island they asked, "Is there anything you want?"

"Yes," came the reply, "send us some more Japs."

Servicemen to Get Yule Gifts Even Though Shifted

By the Associated Press

Soldiers and sailors will get their Christmas presents even though they have been shifted secretly to some new post of duty, the Army and Navy said yesterday.

If the family and friends of a service man do not know where he is, the packages should be addressed to his last known address and they will be forwarded. Both services request that the packages not be sent to Washington for there are no facilities here and only delay would result.

In the case of sailors at sea, mail should be addressed to them in care of the postmaster either at San Francisco or New York, depending on whether the fighting men were last known to be in the Pacific or the Atlantic.

Pearl Harbor Probers Named

could exonerate all officers concerned in the Pearl Harbor attack from negligence charges, or it could turn in a report recommending official reprimands or court martial trials for certain officers.

The chairmen of the Senate and House Naval Affairs Committees both applauded President Roosevelt's selections for the board of inquiry.

Representative Vinson (Democrat), of Georgia, chairman of the House group, said last night that his committee will make no separate inquiry into the Pearl Harbor attack "since the President has named such an outstanding board to conduct the investigation."

Senator Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, head of the Senate Committee, said the board personnel was "in every way commendable."

The board, it was believed, may call for testimony from civilian officials, as well as Army and Navy officers, in an effort to place responsibility for the apparent ease with which Hawaiian fifth columns were able to collect and transmit information on the disposition of American forces at the island base.

The President's Day

By International News Service

FINE THANKS: In a light gray tweed suit, soft-collared white shirt and black tie, the President went over to his office early, feeling and looking "fit as a fiddle." The endless hours of work, the fierce concentration and crushing burdens of the war combined with irregular meals—if any—and jarring phone calls in the middle of the night have left the President untouched. The present anxiety and future struggle hardened and picked him up considerably. His eyes are dark-circled with lack of sleep, but grinningly alert, and reflect the resolve and high spirit of the wartime President.

SUPPLY: First caller was Sidney Hillman, OPM's laborite, who gave Mr. Roosevelt latest statistics on the skilled labor supply, discussed the problem of labor supply.

NEW JOB OR NEW RULES: In to see the Chief either about the new judgeship rumored for him, or wartime SEC regulations, came Securities and Exchange Boss Edward C. Eicher.

MEXICAN MEDLEY: Briefly and smilingly, Mexican Ambassador Francisco Najera told the President to rest assured that his government was tuned in an American defense, has every intention of making a cooperative medley of the war on the Axis. From Mexican President Comacho he brought personal greetings and official notification that Mexico has broken off all diplomatic relations with the Axis.

CENSORSHIP: As the correspondents stampeded into his office, the President took time out for a laugh with Secretary Steve Early and the front-row boys about a radio commentator's quoting him as describing Japs as "dirty yellow dastards." Mr. Roosevelt laughingly warned the commentator to be careful of that first consonant. At the conference, the President announced censorship for the duration, named Byron Price as director of censorship.

WHO HOLDS THE BAG? Secretary Knox, Admirals Stark and King arrived to begin the discussion on who will sit on the board investigating the reason or reasons that the United States forces in Hawaii were not on the alert when the Japanese attack shattered the dawn on December 7. Ten minutes later Secretary Stimson and Gen. George C. Marshall joined the conference. Just before dinner time, the Army and Navy high command exited gloomily from the President's office and announcement of the board of inquiry was made with Justice Owen F. Roberts of the Supreme Court as chairman.

MUCH HOME WORK: Stuffing a sheath of waiting reports into a folder, the President went over to the White House, relaxed for a half hour and then went down to a late dinner. As usual, the evening, stretching far into the night, was used for work, telephone conferences, report and dispatch reading and reflection on the decisions that crowd every dawn over the white House.

Filipinos Repel Land Push in North

Enemy Using Buses Repulsed By Artillery

By Frank Hewlett
United Press Staff Writer

Manila (Wednesday), Dec. 17 (U.P.).—Japanese invaders, driving inland in buses through a province in northern Luzon, have been thrown back by a rain of fire from Filipino army artillery, but new assaults are expected and all volunteers and air-raid wardens in the province have been armed with rifles to help fight them, it was reported today.

Reports of the invasion were received here in telephone calls to the newspaper Maduahy. The name of the province was not given but it has been known that the Japanese made unopposed landings at Vigan, 200 miles north of Manila, and Aparri, 275 miles north of Manila.

Filipino artillerymen were said to have engaged the invaders at 5:30 p. m. Tuesday, throwing them back with the first barrage. The dispatch did not explain the use of buses.

Meanwhile, persons arriving in Manila told of seeing three Japanese planes shot down by Filipino infantrymen at an unnamed airfield in a northern province. The planes were flying low, strafing barracks. The Filipino soldiers resting on their knees fired their rifles. Three planes fell like dead ducks. One Japanese pilot bailed out, and the soldiers riddled him with bullets before he landed. The Filipinos then tore off the wing of one plane they had salvaged from flames and paraded through a nearby village with it, to the cheers of the populace, it was said.

Alongapo Naval Base Raided by Enemy

By R. P. Cronin, Jr.
Associated Press Staff Writer

Manila, Dec. 16.—The Japanese invaders, apparently having been fought to a standstill in the first phase of their thrust at the staunch island of Luzon, returned to the attack today only by air—with a raid on the Olongapo Naval Base northwest of Manila.

The headquarters of Lt. Gen. Douglas MacArthur, commander in chief, reported no new Japanese efforts either to seize new beachheads or to strengthen their hard-won and costly positions about Vigan and Aparri, in the northwest and northeast of the island, and Legaspi in the extreme southeast.

"No change in the situation on the ground," said the succinct afternoon communique.

The supposition in unofficial quarters was that the enemy was resting his aerial forces, repairing his planes and attempting to poise new forces off the coasts for another major attempt at a landing.

Fleet's Hunt Brings Joy

Word that the American Pacific Fleet was searching for the Japanese fleet to engage it was received exultantly among the Filipino civilians, and almost simultaneously it developed that more than 5000 Filipinos volunteering for service at the front might form the nucleus of the first volunteer division of the Philippine defense forces.

The largest provincial cities near the areas of the Japanese footholds were reported being evacuated in two directions—the oldsters, women and children seeking refuge inland, and the young men hurrying to the nearest army headquarters to volunteer.

Meanwhile, in an anti-Fifth-Column drive the constabulary has taken into custody a total of 86 undesirable Filipinos. Three Filipinos were caught Monday atop a Manila building, accused of signaling with a mirror in the sunlight.

The Philippine secret service announced that Ramon Mantile, the arrested leader of the anti-American "Ganap" organization, had confessed that his organization had plotted to help the Japanese conquer the Philippines.

This confession, it was stated, implicated numerous Ganaps, of whom 27 already have been arrested for illegal associations bordering on treason.

President Quegon today directed the creation of a labor corps, principally to be made up of the unemployed to be placed under the American military authorities, and also decided to put agriculture under strict control to insure adequate supplies of food against any blockade.

Two American Pilots Shot Down Are Safe

Manila (Wednesday), Dec. 17 (AP). Several American pilots previously believed lost during operations in north-central Luzon have returned safely to their units, it was reported reliably today.

Some were forced to bail out during combat with the Japanese, and others made forced landings in sparsely settled areas where there were no communications.

Press reports said that United States Lieuts. Shepherd and Houseman had reached a northern Luzon city yesterday after a week's journey afoot and on horseback from a remote area where they had been forced down.

W. D. Reidy, D. C. Youth, Slain by Japs

W. P. REIDY

William David Reidy, 21-year-old first class seaman at Pearl Harbor, son of Michael D. Reidy, of 53 Seaton Place Northwest, was among those killed during the Japanese attack upon the Hawaiian fortifications December 7, a Navy Department chaplain informed the father yesterday.

Born in Washington, the youth was educated at St. Dominic's School, Jefferson Junior High School, and the Abbott Vocational School. Before enlisting in the Navy in September, 1940, he worked here as a plumber's assistant and for the Associated Press.

His father was informed yesterday that the boy has been buried temporarily in Hawaii, but was assured the body will be brought to the United States at the end of the war.

In addition to his father, Reidy leaves one brother, Michael J. Reidy, jr., of Silver Spring, Md. The mother died 14 years ago.

Reidy was the fourth from the Washington area to be reported killed at Pearl Harbor. Others were Lieut. Albert E. Gates jr., 32; Robert E. Arnott, 21, and Ensign George Anderson Wolfe.

Bomb Kills 6 Gestapo Men In Paris

By the United Press

Vichy, Dec. 16.—Bombs exploded in two German-occupied buildings in Paris today, killing at least six Gestapo agents, and a German officer was reported assassinated in a third attack, bringing the total anti-Nazi incidents for two days to five.

One bomb exploded in a German military police mess hall in downtown Paris early this evening. No further details were revealed, and whether casualties resulted remained unknown.

Earlier, another bomb blasted Gestapo headquarters in the southern Parisian suburb of Ville Juif, killing six Germans.

Details were not available regarding the third attack, in which a German lieutenant was reported assassinated.

On Monday, a dynamite "artichoke" exploded in a restaurant. A German was reported assassinated, and considerable damage was caused.

Coincident with the new attacks it was reported that 6000 French and foreign Jews were rounded up in Paris last week for deportation to Eastern Europe.

They were put behind the high walls of the War College pending deportations to Poland and German-occupied Russia. An additional 2000 to 4000 may be taken, it was said.

The group included some of the most influential and wealthiest Jews in Paris, among them Eugene Dreyfus, former president of the Court of Appeals; Judge Laemle, former president of the Seine Court, and the two Bollack brothers, wealthy members of the Stock Exchange.

U. S. Forces Quickly Catching Up With Japs as Ship-Sinkers

By the Associated Press

Despite Japan's head start in the Battle of the Pacific the second week of the war found the United States Army and Navy moving up fast toward equality in number and tonnage of fleet losses inflicted.

Counting transports, of which the Army claims to have sunk four, the asserted Nipponese ship toll is ten and that of the United States nine. The Japanese torpedoed an Army transport carrying lumber the first day of the war and seized the liner President Harrison, which had been sent to China to remove Marine forces and American citizens.

Mexicans Asked To Permit Entry Of Foreign Troops

Mexico City, Dec. 16 (AP).—President Manuel Avila Camacho tonight asked Congressional approval of measures permitting the passage of foreign troops through Mexican territory and the stationing of foreign ships and naval planes in Mexican waters and ports.

An official announcement said the President put forth these measures to fulfill his promise to cooperate in every possible way with the United States.

The United States already has granted Mexico permission to move troops across United States territory en route to the Mexican defenses of Lower California.

Avila Camacho's measures provide movement of military forces, ships and planes of other American nations. They are for the duration of the war.

which now are known to have carried tanks and enormous barges, the dispatch added.]

Although Singapore still is some 400 miles from the nearest Japanese spearhead, an informed source said:

"British lack of naval superiority has changed the entire situation in northern Malaya. The British land defense was planned on the basis of naval superiority, but both the British and United States fleets have suffered hard blows.

"Now the naval situation has allowed the Japanese to develop an offensive on a large scale. There definitely is danger—a real threat to Singapore by land."

Far up the Chinese coast the Hongkong colony was reported under heavy Japanese air and artillery bombardment. Japanese guns poured shells into the colony from the mainland only a mile away, and the Hongkong garrison was said to lack supplies and munitions for a long siege.

(The German radio said Tokyo reported Japanese forces already had invaded some parts of Hongkong Island).

[International News Service reported Hongkong was threatened on its western as well as eastern flank by a sudden Japanese occupation of the Portuguese south China colony of Macao, only 15 miles across the Pearl River estuary from the British island.

[The Portuguese consul general in Hongkong, a Hongkong dispatch said, announced he was no longer able to contact Macao. The governor of the Portuguese colony, according to the Hongkong message, tried to leave for the British colony Monday, but was removed from a ship by Japanese troops.]

A dispatch from Manila said that Hongkong officials declared three weeks ago that the island could be held indefinitely but for the task of trying to feed its 1,500,000 Chinese civilians.

At any rate British commentators here today apparently were preparing the public for bad news.

Chinese Harass Foe

Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express editorially declared Hongkong has no strategic value and "we must be prepared for its fall." G. Ward Price in the Daily Mail said Hongkong's ultimate loss had been "long foreseen in case of war with Japan. . . . Such a loss would be sad but not serious."

The island is 631 miles northwest of Manila, the Philippine capital.

In Chungking, China, a communique reported that the Chinese, persisting in an attempt to relieve pressure on Hongkong, were harassing Japanese movements on the Canton-Hongkong Railway.

[The Chinese, according to International News Service, were widening their offensive operations, launching attacks in the Hangchow Bay area south of Shanghai where, Chungking communique said, they had recaptured "a number of strategic points." This assault was said to be extending to the district of Shanghai itself. Japanese efforts to land reinforcements west of the Chinese port of Amoy were said to have been defeated with heavy casualties.]

Some criticism of British Far Eastern tactics was developing, it began when the British lost their two big warships, the Prince of Wales and the Repulse, to Japanese bombers off the Malayan coast a week ago.

Jap Losses Are Heavy At Hongkong, Chinese Say

Chungking, Dec. 16 (U.P.).—At least 3000 Japanese, wounded in fighting in the Kowloon area of the Hongking Colony, have been taken to hospitals in nearby Shumchum and Tamshui, the Central China Daily News said today.

Meanwhile, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek was reported to have proposed a formal military alliance of the nations fighting the Axis and to be urging that all Allied forces be placed under a supreme command.

Continuous Artillery Battle at Hongkong

Hongkong, Dec. 16 (U.P.).—Defenders of this beleaguered British crown colony returned to their guns today after a night of sporadic artillery fire in which no Japanese air raiders appeared.

There were eight air raids yesterday and artillery exchanges were continuous. Casualties and damage, however, were very slight on the British side.

Australian Bombers Attack Supply Ship

Canberra, Australia, Dec. 16 (INS).—Ranging far at sea over the Japanese-mandated islands in the Pacific, Australian bombers attacked a Japanese supply vessel near Greenwich Island "with visible results," it was reported tonight. The supply ship was a 4000-tonner, the report said.

NIPPONESE REPORT LANDING IN BORNEO—Jap mechanized forces were reported yesterday to have smashed 40-odd miles in Kedah Province, Malaya (1), in the drive on Singapore. A landing in North Borneo (2) was claimed by the Nipponese troops. The War Department reported minor enemy air activity in the Philippines (3). Meanwhile, Army bombers renewed their attacks on Japanese vessels off Legaspi on the island of Luzon, seriously damaging an enemy transport. Although Chinese forces near Canton redoubled their drive on the Japanese flank (shaded arrow), British were resigned to losing Hongkong (4), as well as Singapore

'I'll Capture White House,' Jap Admiral Bragged Year Ago

Tokyo (Wednesday), Dec. 17 (Official radio received by A. P.).—Japan's Domei agency broadcast today a letter written almost a year ago in which Admiral Isoroku Yamamoto, commander in chief of the Japanese combined fleets, said:

"I am looking forward to dictating peace to the United States in the White House at Washington."

Somewhat earlier, imperial headquarters announced that Japanese expeditionary forces had "bucked a gale" to effect a landing on the coast of British Borneo, strategically located on the sea route between Hongkong, Singapore and the Philippines.

The Domei broadcast said:

"The strategy of surprise which was carried out by Admiral Isoroku Yammamoto, commander in chief of the Japanese combined fleets, with such success was planned by him earlier, according to the Yomiuri (Tokyo newspaper).

"The Yomiuri published a letter which Yamamoto sent to a close friend, dated January 24 this year. Therein Yamamoto, who said that humiliation was felt by all the Japanese navy at the time the 1934 naval disarmament conference at London failed, made this statement:

" 'Any time war breaks out between Japan and the United States, I shall not be content merely to capture Guam and the Philippines and occupy Hawaii and San Francisco.

" 'I'm looking forward to dictating peace to the United States in the White House at Washington.' "

(On Monday, President Roosevelt, in his "white paper" to Congress, indicted Japan's war lords for formulating the real answer to America's peace proposals long before the attack on Pearl Harbor. Even during the long discussions in Washington, Secretary of State Hull had indicated constant apprehension that the negotiations were being used by Japan to cover widespread last-minute preparations for war. Now the Japanese, by broadcasting the Yamamoto letter, prove—consciously or unconsciously—what was in the minds of Japanese war lords at the beginning of 1941.

(Yamamoto personifies these warlords. He is credited with torpedoing the London Naval Conference with his insistence on Japanese fleet parity. Last week the Mikado congratulated him for the sinking, by naval air action, of the two great British capital ships off Malaya, the Prince of Wales and the Repulse.)

Aside from the claim to a Japanese landing on Borneo (British forces are reported to have broken up a similar attempt a week ago), these official claims were broadcast:

Imperial headquarters: Japanese forces completely occupied Guam on December 12, taking 380 prisoners, including the Governor, Capt. George J. McMillin.

Army communique: Military barracks northeast of Manila fired in mass Japanese air assaults on United States air bases near the Philippine capital. Sixteen United State planes declared destroyed. In Malaya, west coast air bases of Ayertawar and Ipoh bombed, eight British bombers destroyed and air bases and other military facilities "set on fire and blown up." One Japanese plane lost.

Domei: "Fierce bombing raid" on Rangoon, Burma capital.

Premier Gen. Hideki Tojo, following his combined military-political speech Tuesday to the Diet, told 3000 persons at a national defense meeting to act calmly in case of air raids.

The Diet passed an extra war budget bill of 2,800,000,000 (about 844 million dollars).

Senate Committee Votes Draft at 19

of the Navy Knox and Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff.

The House version of the bill, Selective Service officials estimated, would affect six million men. The Senate bill anticipates a possible combat manpower of eight million.

Except for their different age limits, House and Senate bills are substantially alike. Both grant the President authority to defer men, temporarily or permanently, by age groups. Both would forfeit the right of nationals of other countries to apply for American citizenship, should they avail themselves of the privilege of exemption.

On the eve of the House debate, Representative Andrews (Republican), of New York, and Representative Faddis (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, made public opposing views on the age issue.

Predicting that ultimately the country will need an air force of two million men, Andrews declared that the European war demonstrated that men under 21 made the best soldiers.

Faddis announced that, although opposed to sending 19-year-olds into battle, he would offer an amendment to lower the draft age in the House bill to 20, and to forbid the Army to send any soldier outside the United States until he has had a year of training.

Reds Reported Mapping Final Huge Blow

The Stockholm dispatches said Stalin was presiding over the war council and that several army commanders flew from the fronts to attend.

Those present were reported to have been: Marshal Semyon Timoshenko and Marshal K. Y. Voroshilov, both of whom flew to the meeting; Admiral N. G. Kusnetzov, head of the navy; Gen. A. D. Loktianov, member of the supreme military council; Foreign Commisar V. M. Molotov; Y. M. Kaganovitch, of the supreme council; and A. A. Andreyev, chairman of the council of the union.

Presence of Kusnetzov and Loktianov, Soviet circles in Stockholm said, presumably meant they were there to offer advice on Russia's naval and air strength in Vladivostok, which is within easy bombing range of Japan.

Soviet circles in Stockholm were quoted as saying that they assumed the advisability of declaring war on Japan was discussed.

Meanwhile, it was learned British-American consultations paralleling the forthcoming Anglo-Russian talks, all of which look to some form of a unified high command of the anti-Axis powers, will be held soon, probably in Washington.

90,000 Germans Shattered in Rout

By the Associated Press

Moscow (Wednesday), Dec. 17.—Red army troops have routed six German divisions of 90,000 men and recaptured strategic Kalinin, 90 miles northwest of here, Russia announced officially today.

This most sensational single victory so far in the great Soviet counteroffensive now in progress over the snow-drifted plains of Russia followed by 24 hours the Russian army's recapture of Klin, 50 miles to the northwest, and the massacre of 13,000 Nazis.

In addition the Russians were said to have occupied several points on the central front before Moscow, and Volovo, a town southeast of Tula on the other end of the Moscow defense arc. [Petrovsk, on the Volokolamsk-Moscow road 15 miles west of Istra was also recaptured, a New York Times dispatch said.]

Special credit was given to Maj. Gen. Fuskievich and Gen. Maslenikov in the fierce fighting at Kalinin which the Germans first captured in mid-October.

"Great booty was taken and now is being counted," the communique said, "and remnants of the divisions of the enemy are withdrawing westwards . . . the fleeing enemy is being pursued and annihilated by our troops."

Meantime, the Finns themselves acknowledged in a communique that the Russians have launched a "general offensive" around the southern bend of Lake Onega, 220 miles northeast of Leningrad, notwithstanding heavy blizzards.

Niihau, a small island in the western portion of the Hawaiian group less than 100 miles west northwest of Honolulu. The reports are being investigated, the Department said.

The night Army communique also reported a "marked lessening of enemy activity" in the Philippines. Advices from Lieut. Gen. Douglas MacArthur, commander of the American Far Eastern Army, it was said, declared that there were no Japanese air attacks of any consequence and that ground operations were of only a local character.

Earlier, in a communique issued at 9:30 a. m., the War Department said that American Army bombers had renewed attacks on Japanese vessels off Legaspi and had "seriously" damaged one enemy transport. Four enemy fighting planes were shot down in attacks on the Philippines, it was stated.

The naval air station on Johnston Island, attacked for the first time Monday evening, has been in operation since last summer. It was formally commissioned August 15. The island, only a half-mile long, is on a coral reef. It was discovered by the British warship Cornwallis in 1807, and the American flag was planted there in 1858.

More than two years ago Congress appropriated $1,230,000 for construction of limited seaplane operations there. The work consisted of dredging a channel and turning basin for a small seaplane tender, and construction of runways, bulkheads, ramps and a pier.

The texts of the war communiques issued during the day by the War and Navy Departments follow:

"Two islands in the Hawaiian area have been shelled by Japanese war vessels within the last 24 hours. The naval outpost of Johnston Island figured for the first time in Pacific action. It was bombarded by ships of the enemy at dusk. On the northeastern coast of the Island of Maui, the shipping center of Kahului was shelled by an enemy submarine at about the same time. Damage in both instances is believed to be slight. Naval operations are continuing against the enemy.

"Wake Island has sustained two additional bombing attacks. The first occurred in the afternoon, the second in the evening. The first attack was light, the second heavy.

"Wake and Midway are countering the blows of the enemy."

"1. Philippine theater: Enemy air activity was of a minor character. Four Japanese fighting planes were shot down. American Army bombers renewed attacks on Japanese vessels off Legaspi, seriously damaging one enemy transport. No ground operations reported.

"2. No change in the situation reported from other areas."

"1. Philippine theater—The commanding general, Far East Command, reports that there was a marked lessening of enemy activity. There were no Japanese air attacks of any consequence, and the ground operations were of only a local character.

"2. Hawaii—Reports that a disabled enemy airplane and a Japanese pilot were found on Niihau, a small island in the western portion of the Hawaiian group, are being investigated.

"3. There is nothing to report from other areas."

ans, and the pilot ordered Shintani to retrieve his papers, which were held by a Hawaiian named Hauila.

Hauila became suspicious and slipped from the island Friday in a whaleboat, which he rowed 15 miles in 10 hours through fierce winds to Waimea, on Kauai Island, to seek aid.

Meanwhile, the pilot, aided by Harada and Shintani, set up the machine gun from his plane in the village.

"Everybody took to the woods," Kanahele said in telling of how this move was received by the islanders.

The pilot threatened to shoot everybody, he said, unless his papers were returned.

Kanahele and his wife, feigning friendship, accompanied the pilot and Harada through the woods in quest of Hauila.

However, the Hawaiian said today, "the pilot became suspicious of me. I jumped him as he was handing his shotgun to Harada.

"The pilot shot me with his pistol in the ribs, hip and groin. And then I got mad. I threw him against a stone wall, kayoing him, and then went for Harada.

"Harada tried to shoot himself with the shotgun and succeeded on the second attempt."

When soldiers arrived from Kauai with Hauila they captured Shintani and Harada's wife and took them to Kauai, where Kanahele now is in the Waimea hospital.

President Voted Powers Greater Than Wilson's

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt yesterday was armed with all of the World War powers of Woodrow Wilson "to expedite the prosecution of the war" by the voice vote action of both houses of Congress acting simultaneously.

Almost unlimited authority to reorganize Government functions, censor foreign communications, make war contracts and commandeer alien property was granted by House and Senate in slightly different bills.

With the same speed that has advanced every war measure since the outbreak of hostilities, a 150,000-ton increase in the Navy moved halfway to enactment, a 310-million-dollar expansion in naval shore facilities was authorized, and both Houses cleared decks for action today on Selective Service registration of all males between 18 and 64, inclusive.

Navy Bill Passes House

The Navy shipbuilding authorization, designed to lay new keels on shipways as fast as warcraft now building are cleared and outbuild in the naval race any combination of enemy powers, was snapped through the House after an explanatory statement by Naval Affairs Chairman Carl Vinson.

The Senate Naval Affairs Committee immediately went into session and reported the 150,000 tonnage increase, cut down from 900,000 tons to conform with immediate facilities anad needs.

The emergency shipbuilding program will be dovetailed with now-building two-ocean construction.

Chairman Walsh, of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee, estimated that advanced work schedules will make it possible for the Navy to complete heavy ships in two years instead of three, and lighter war vessels in one year instead of 18 months. For purposes of speed, no battleships are contemplated in the 150,000-ton program, though the Navy has complete discretion as to type. Roughly, 24 more ships will be built than now are building or authorized, Walsh said.

War powers voted the President in separate action by the two Houses were modeled after the World War No. 1 Overman and Trading with the Enemy Acts but exceeded authority granted Wilson in controls over war contracts and alien property.

Minor Restrictions

Minor restrictions were approved by the Senate following protests by Senators Taft, of Ohio, and Vandenberg, of Michigan, (Republicans), against unlimited contracting authority.

These provided that nothing in the measure should be construed as authorizing removal of profit limitations on defense contracts and that all acts under the contracting authority "shall be made a matter of public record under such regulations as the President may prescribe and when deemed by him not incompatible with the public interest."

On suggestion of Taft, General Accounting Office duties were exempted from the President's blanket authority to redistribute governmental functions to prosecute the war more efficiently.

Subject still to ironing out of minor differences between House and Senate versions, major features of the legislation give the President:

Power to censor all forms of foreign communication, direct or indirect, with specific power to censor communication by mail, cable, radio or any other means of transmission between the United States and any foreign country.

Power to undertake a wartime reorganization of the Administrative branch of Government to promote efficient execution of the war effort.

Power to speed-up production of materiel by entering contracts without competitive bidding or performance bonds, revising contracts if necessary and making progress payments on contracts.

Further power over seven billion dollars worth of foreign property already subject to control and grants wide authority to regulate transactions in alien property and to compel its use in the National interest.

Change Agreed On

Senate leaders agreed to discretionary publication of contracts by the President after Vandenberg called them "a fruitful field in which waste and scandal can occur" and said the unlimited provision "isn't fair to the President."

Chairman Van Nuys of the Senate Judiciary Committee and Chairman Sumners of the House Judiciary Committee, both vigorous opponents of Presidential power grants in normal times, managed the war powers to passage in both chambers.

Nazis Tighten Grip on Northwest Africa

after one glance at the government-controlled newspapers of French Morocco and talk with responsible Americans, British and others in Tangier.

Except for turning over the remains of the French fleet and actually fighting beside their conquerors, the French seem prepared to do anything the Germans want of them to avoid receiving worse punishment than they already have taken.

Just now the French in West Africa are being effectively managed by the German armistice commission, while a host of other German agents, most of them in civilian clothing and many with Dutch, Swiss and Danish passports, are pouring into the territory and taking up their assigned positions in the hotels, restaurants, shops and elsewhere.

The case of Spain is different. The proud Spaniard in Morocco is being spoofed by the wily German with dreams of a greater empire at the expense of France and even of the United States, while at home his bankrupt country averts another revolution only by keeping two million persons in jail and setting 400,000 troops to guard the rest of a hungry population.

The Kentucky colonel is not dead and his type is international. "Yanqui," as printed daily in the Spanish press, means exactly what "damn Yankee" used to mean on the tongue of unreconstructed Southerners.

In Spain the memory of the loss of Cuba and the Philippines still rankles. Spaniards seem to believe the Germans invincible and they hope to share in German loot.

It was the almost unanimous opinion of persons with whom I talked that the open military occupation by the Germans of all this northwest African region, from Tunisia to Dakar, was merely a matter of time unless the British or Americans, or both, arrived first.

The question that was asked of me more often than any other by civilians affected, particularly by refugees from occupied Europe, was "When are the Americans coming?"

The first sign of Nazi-Fascist-Falangist control of the region to meet the eye of a newspaper reporter was the controlled press. French and Spanish are just alike except for language. They minimize or fail to print announcements from Washington or London; they display in great headlines the news from Berlin, and the principal news agency employed is the official German news agency, the D. N. B.

The major newspapers of the French territory are The Petit Marocain and The Depeche Marocaine. Both, according to American and British sources, have been heavily subsidized by Germany for a long time. The leading Spanish newspaper is Espana. It is owned in Germany and its entire makeup is dictated from there with Spanish editors as figureheads.

As against these major newspapers, the British have a small sheet of limited circulation in Tangier called The Tangier Gazette. It is censored by the Spanish who seized the town last year, lending it international status to which Spain had agreed. According to the editor of The Tangier Gazette, the Spanish will not permit any news or editorial which is derogatory in any way to Germany or Italy. They have not permitted during the time of American nonbelligerency any reference to the growing war preparations of the United States, nor publication of remarks by President Roosevelt or Secretary of State Hull.

In such a circumstance, the only recourse of the editor has been to print the "V for Victory" or "Buy British Goods" over large sections of the newspapers otherwise left blank. The American and British population of Tangier understands what these words mean and if persons are interested to see what the Spanish will not permit them to read, he may walk up to the British postoffice where the missing sections are pasted on a bulletin board.

But the native population, French, Spanish and the educated Moors, are left pretty much in the dark about what America has been doing or might propose to do.

The situation in regard to news from America has been so bad from the American point of view that interested Americans in the region obtained a small fund and have had handbills printed from time to time giving the text of statements by President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull and such news as the American abandonment of the policy of economic aid to Fernch Northwest Africa which followed the retirement of Gen. Maxime Weygand.

That was a piece of news that neither the Spanish nor the French permitted to be circulated. These handbills were given to people who seemed to be interested, and they have had an amazing circulation from person to person throughout French and Spanish Morocco.

U. S. to Pay France Later For Normandie

The State Department announced yesterday that the Government is taking over the French luxury liner Normandie and will make "fair and adequate compensation" to the owners.

Formal requisitioning of the 83,000-ton vessel has been anticipated since the department's announcement last week that the French crews had been removed from all of the 14 French ships now in American ports.

There was no announcement as to the use the Government will make of the Normandie.

The department revealed that the French government, in negotiations prior to this country's entry into the war, had expressed willingness to sell the ship, but that the proposed conditions for payment have now "been rendered impracticable."

The department did not explain the method of compensation now contemplated but stated that the Maritime Commission, in taking over the vessel, was acting "under existing law."

A. F. L. May Drop Union Shop Drive

ment of its drive for the closed shop. In return, industry, spoken for by the National Industrial Conference Board, agreed to recognize the principles of collective bargaining and not to discriminate against union workers, guarantees which are now written into the law.

The peace offer was contained in a paragraph which did not mention the C. I. O. by name, but which was seen as referring to the rivalry between the two organizations. It read:

"We regret sincerely and are deeply concerned with the destructive rivalry and organization that has beset the American labor field for the past few years. We hold all such rivalries and jurisdictional conflicts have no place in an emergency such as faces America and the world today. We, therefore, renew our offer for unity in the labor movement and for the common defense of our Nation against mortal danger. We hope our call to this end may not be in vain."

C. I. O. Chiefs Noncommittal

There was no immediate official reaction from the C. I. O. Some officials, however, discounted hope of success, saying that unity between the two organizations required a long process of preparation and that today's conference was not directed at this objective.

The conference will meet at 10 a. m. at the Federal Reserve Board Building, but will immediately proceed to the White House for a session with President Roosevelt.

Davis yesterday issued a statement pointing out that one of the objectives of the gathering, a "cooling off" period before strikes, had already been accomplished voluntarily in most cases which have been certified to the Mediation Board.

Nazi Baron Arrested in U. S. Uniform

Associated Press WIREPHOTO
ERNEST FROLICH DeMEYER

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Dec. 16.—Ernest Frolich de Meyer, 27, identified as an alien German baron by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, was in jail today on charges of impersonating an Army officer and suspicion of espionage.

FBI agents said De Meyer was wearing the uniform of a United States Army officer when arrested yesterday near harbor defenses.

They said his Hollywood apartment yielded uniforms of the United States Army, Navy and Marine Corps; a short-wave broadcasting set and what appeared to be data on coast defenses.

Bund Offices Seized

New York, Dec. 16 (AP).—The joint offices of the Free American and Deutscher Weckruf und Beobachter, the German-American Bund and the German-American Business League have been seized by the United States Treasury Department.

Further publication of the weekly newspaper Weckruf und Beobachter, which has been published since 1935 by the A. V. Publishing Corporation, with G. Wilhelm Kunze as president, was viewed as improbable by Treasury agents, who posted on its office doors this notice:

"This property is under the control of the United States Government. All persons are hereby prohibited from entering the premises under penalty of law. H. Morgenthau, jr., Secretary of the Treasury."

The same notice appeared on the offices of the bund and Business League agencies, all situated in the same building in the Yorkville section of Manhattan, a German district.

Mobile Columns Cutting Rommel's Forces to Pieces

By International News Service

Cairo, Dec. 16.—British mechanized columns, relentlessly hitting the enemy's front, flank and rear, tonight were reported chopping to pieces all the remaining German tank forces near Gazala after smashing desperate Axis counter-attacks designed to break out of a rapidly forming trap.

Piercing to the core of the German-Italian defenses, a mobile British column outflanked the enemy to the south and swept around to drive northwest toward Derna and cut off the Axis from all paths of retreat as the bulk of the Nazi-Fascist army was pinned down to battle along its wavering front.

Forces in Grave Danger

German Gen. Erwin Rommel's Axis infantry as well as tank formations embattled 15 miles southwest of the isolated Libyan port of Gazala were stated to be in grave danger of losing contact with their coastal bases, unless they can break away from the attacking British and get to Derna before the British flanking force can reach that point.

Derna lies 50 miles northwest of Gazala where a German-Italian force has been surrounded.

A British armored column, skirting the right flank of Rommel's main units about 25 miles inland, was declared to have swung behind the Axis forces and to be seriously threatening the enemy's communications between the Gazala sector and Derna.

British imperial headquarters in Cairo announced that British tank and motorized infantry contingents southwest and west of Gazala Monday "continued their steady advance in the face of resolute opposition."

With admittedly strong aerial support, German and Italian infantry and tanks, it was stated, undertook "repeated counterattacks" in efforts to disengage the main Axis forces and escape threatened entrapment.

No Respite Permitted

Beating back the counterattacks, the British imperials gave the Axis no respite and no chance to break off the engagement.

Launched exactly four weeks ago today, the British offensive in Libya thus entered what appeared to be its final decisive stage, closer than ever to its goal of destroying the whole Axis mechanized corps in Libya.

The battle was surging toward the Jebel el Akdar hills between Derna and Bengasi on the Gulf of Sirte where Cyrenaica, or east Libya, adjoins the western half of the tottering Italian colony which is known as Tripolitania.

Outcome of the battle now raging southwest of Gazala may lead to the quick British conquest of all Cyrenaica, Cairo sources pointed out. The subsequent conquest of Tripolitania, which borders French North Africa on the west, would be a relatively easier matter, it was added, inasmuch as Germany and Italy are believed to have massed their principal strength in Cyrenaica.

Save to Balk Inflation, Britons Told

Copyright by New York Times

London, Dec. 16.—In obtaining an additional grant of a credit of one billion pounds today, the chancellor of the exchequer, Sir Kingsley Wood, announced that the war expenditure has now reached £11,750,000 daily which means that the war costs the British government something like $312.50 every time the clock ticks.

He also announced the adoption of a system of tax anticipation warrants similar to the one already in use in the United States to facilitate the collection of income and other taxes.

The chancellor of the exchequer stressed the necessity for even greater savings on the part of the people as being a major instrument in the avoidance of inflation and estimated that the year's expenditures, ending next March 31, would probably exceed budget provisions by 200 billion pounds. His figures excluded aid under the lease-lend program which is primarily a bookkeeping item so far as budgeting is concerned.

Sir Kingsley declared, however, that the probable increased expenditure over the estimates of last spring did not indicate that the deficit would mount by that such because on the basis of incomplete returns, taxes were yielding more than had been anticipated even though a major portion of the income and excess profits taxes was yet to be collected.

Larry Allen, War Reporter, Hurt in Africa

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Dec. 16.—Larry Allen, Associated Press Correspondent who has been aboard and described for Associated Press members virtually every major action of the British fleet since the start of the war in the Mediterranean, has been injured. The manner in which the injury occurred has not been ascertained.

ALLEN

(The Germans announced Tuesday they had sunk a British cruiser off Alexandria. Allen, in his latest dispatch, reported the Germans were beaten off. There were indications, however, the Germans might have returned to the attack later and sank the cruiser he was on.)

Allen is in a hospital bed in Alexandria suffering from painful but not critical face and body bruisers, having been rescued after 45 minutes in the water during which he swallowed much oil and water.

Allen, 33, a native of Mount Savage, Md., went to Egypt in midsummer 1940 when the Mediterranean loomed as an active war sector upon Italy's entrance into the war.

Since then he has ridden aboard Britain's men of war in encounters with the Italian fleet, their numerous sweeps of the Mediterranean, their raids on Axis transports and commence and their several bombardments of Axis harbors in Africa and on the mainland.

War Sidelights

Nazi General Visited British Relief Station

Wellington, New Zealand, Dec. 16 (AP).—The story of how Gen. Erwin Rommel, the Nazi North African commander, visited a British dressing station, then German-held, but ignored British surgeons working in it reached the official archives today in a report from Maj. Gen. B. C. Freyberg, New Zealand commander in the Middle East.

The story, first told early in December when the North African battle scene was confused and swiftly changing, was this:

New Zealanders were operating a dressing station near Gambut when the Germans captured it. The surgeons continued with their work and when Rommel visited it he did not speak a word to them. Later it was recaptured and the British found it occupied by German and British wounded on whom doctors of both sides were working.

Nazis Wreck Shrines

Moscow, Dec. 16 (AP).—Three of Russia's most famous cultural shrines—the home of Author Count Leo Nikolayevich Tolstoy, the cottage where Dramatist Anton Pavlovich Chekhov lived, and a museum to the memory of composer Peter Ilich Tschaikowsky—have been laid waste by the German armies, according to a dispatch to the newspaper Pravda broadcast today by the Moscow radio.

President Names Director of Censorship; Voluntary Ban Counted on for Present

President Roosevelt yesterday appointed a Federal director of censorship and announced the broad outlines of a censorship policy to be carried out "in harmony with the best interests of our free institutions."

Byron Price, executive news editor of the Associated Press, was named to the censorship post and will be responsible directly to the President. He is expected to take over his new duties within a few days.

The President told his press conference that the censorship machinery will be set in motion as soon as the war power bill, which was passed by Congres yesterday, has gone into force. That bill, he said, gives the President powers almost identical with those granted in 1917.

Mr. Roosevelt, in a formal announcement of the new policy, declared that Americans "abhor censorship" but that "some degree of censorship" is essential in time of war.

He indicated that the Government will count on newspapers and the radio, at least for the present, to abstain voluntarily from dissemination of military information.

Press and radio coverage of the war news to date "has indicated a universal desire to cooperate" with the Government, the President said.

The chief immediate effect of the Government censorship, it appeared from Mr. Roosevelt's announcement, will be in the establishment of strict inspection of messages crossing the country's borders through the mails, radio or cable transmission or any other means. No censorship of domestic mail is contemplated, the President said.

Meanwhile Postmaster General Walker disclosed that censorship of foreign mail, both outgoing and incoming, is already under way.

Official information whic might be of value to the enemy must be "scrupulously withheld at the source," Mr. Roosevelt explained.

Other types of information which might be of aid to the enemy and at the same time may be matters of common knowledge in certain communities, such as ship and troop movements, are expected to be excluded from press and radio reports on the present voluntary basis.

The text of the President's statement follows:

"All Americans abhor censorship, just as they abhor war. But the experience of this and of all other nations has demonstrated that some degree of censorship is essential in war time, and we are at war.

"The important thing now is that such forms of censorship as are necessary shall be administered effectively and in harmony with the best interests of our free institutions.

"It is necessary to the national security that military information which might be of aid to the enemy be scrupulously withheld at the source.

"It is necessary that a watch be set upon our borders so that no such information may reach the enemy, inadvertently or otherwise, through the medium of the mails, radio or cable transmission, or by any other means.

"It is necessary that prohibition against the domestic publication of some types of information, contained in long-existing statutes, be rigidly enforced.

"Finally, the Government has called upon a patriotic press and radio to abstain voluntarily from the dissemination of detailed information of certain kinds, such as reports of the movements of vessels and troops. The response has indicated a universal desire to cooperate.

"In order that all of these parallel and requisite undertakings may be coordinated and carried forward in accordance with a single uniform policy, I have appointed Byron Price, executive news editor of the Associated Press, to be Director of Censorship, responsible directly to the President. He has been granted a leave of absence by the Associated Press and will take over the post assigned him within the coming week, or sooner."

Byron Price Has Lengthy Newspaper Background

By the Associated Press

Byron Price, President Roosevelt's director of censorship, and for 10 years chief of the Associated Press bureau in Washington, was transferred to New York and became executive news editor of the entire Associated Press news report in January, 1937.

He was 50 years old last March and has had a lengthy newspaper background since joining the Associated Press in 1912. Price came to Washington from New Orleans. From 1922 to 1927 he was news editor of the bureau here.

Born in Topeka, Ind., Price was graduated by Wabash College with Phi Beta Kappa honors. In the World War, he was a captain of infantry.

One of the most active members of the Washington newspaper corps, Price became known to hundreds of officials and bureau heads in all the Government departments during the critical postwar years. He was assigned to Warren G. Harding when the Ohio publisher was nominated for the Presidency in 1920 on the Republican ticket, and followed Harding's career until several months after he was inaugurated President.

Price was in charge of the staff which covered the Washington naval conference in 1921, and in 1930 went to London with the United States delegation to the naval conference there.

U. S. to Take Area Near White House

The west portion of the Pennsylvania Avenue block opposite the State Department Building will become the property of the Federal Government within three weeks, it was disclosed at District Court yesterday.

The property, which includes the United States Court of Claims, will be used "for unannounced war purposes," according to Government spokesmen who appeared at court in connection with legal preliminaries.

The land to be taken over includes the court site, runs north on Seventeenth Street to H Street, and east on H to the rear of the Stephen Decatur house. It was not disclosed whether present office buildings will be occupied or new structures erected.

Edward R. Witman, chief fiscal officer of the Federal Works Agency, who testified in behalf of the Government's motion for immediate possession, said that details of the project must remain secret "as a matter of Government policy."

Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat gave official notice to owners and tenants in the area that they must vacate by midnight on January 5, and it was reported that the Court of Claims is now deciding where it will take up new quarters.

Federal Attorneys Alexander H. Bell, jr., and Henry F. Mooney, of the Department of Justice Lands Division, commended the cooperative attitude of the area's occupants to the court.

Eventual Government occupation of the area has been projected for some time under plans drawn up by the Park and Planning Commission and the Fine Arts Commission.

Hoover Urges Strong Control Over Staples

Former President Herbert Hoover, food administrator under President Wilson in World War No. 1, yesterday urged strong controls over commodities as well as their prices to bring "total National mobilization to fight a long and desperate war."

Ruddy-cheeked and affable, the now-graying only living former President told the Senate Banking Committee that President Roosevelt must have "the widest latitude in organization" to control commodities and combat inflationary price rises.

In a modulated voice, he drew from his own World War experience as food administrator to stress voluntary controls through cooperation with trade groups before invocation of Government powers but agreed generally with the objectives of the Henderson price bill.

Calls Price Controls Imperative

"Price controls," he said, "are absolutely imperative to win the war; to lessen suffering of our people during the war; to take the profits out of war; they serve to protect the social and economic system as much as possible from destructive aftermaths of the war. But the problem now becomes much wider than price alone."

He termed the problem "one of stabilization and orderly movement on the whole economic front," and he outlined a 14-point program for commodity controls.

Hoover told the Senate committee his World War experience with licensing convinced him it was "useless and vicious," and he recommended against inclusion in the Senate price bill of licensing provisions already stricken by the House. He said he would give the administrator full enforcement powers, with jail penalties and heavy fines for violations, but they should be effected through the courts. Policing entailed by licensing, he said would be "practically impossible."

Penalties Held Too Severe

"The licensing powers I held during the last war, covering only food and related commodities, did not prove useful," he testified. "And the penalties were far too severe. It meant the death penalty for a man and his family for stealing two dollars."

Hoover favored "a single-headed responsible administrator for all executive functions" with a board, separated from administrative duties, exercising quasi-legislative and quasi-judicial functions.

"I would assign certain groups of commodities to a separate administrator or existing administrative agency and give to that administrator or agency the direction of all the 14 measures I have suggested," he said.

He said the same directing hand should decide whether "stimulation," conservation, price floors or ceilings, priorities, rationing or Government purchase of the commodities in his group was needed.

In the World War he said commodity controls were headed up under munitions, food, fuel and war trade, but held that the emphasis has changed in this war. He said a munitions administrator should have direction of all measures affecting commodities in that field, that other administrators or agencies should handle other commodities by groups, and a price appeal board could be made to serve all.

He recommended six specific authorities which he said should be established for each major commodity, to be administered for each commodity as a whole. He said these should provide authority to:

1. Make voluntary agreements with trades and groups as to price, conservation and distribution.
2. Establish wise cooperative measures to bring about industrial and civilian conservation.
3. Enforce regulations against a minority who may not comply.
4. From time to time fix floor and ceiling prices and margins in business transactions.
5. Direct Government buying and selling of commodities.
6. Adopt priorities and rationing as needed.

9 Killed, 13 Hurt In Train Crash

Mont Joli, Quebec, Dec. 16 (AP).—Nine persons were killed and 13 seriously injured late today when a snow clearance train and a freight train collided just beyond the Mont Joli yards of the Canadian National Railways. About 20 others were slightly injured.

The snow train consisted of 10 flat cars loaded with snow, and a bunk car with about 60 temporary employes aboard. It was being pushed eastward by a locomotive, placing the bunk car ahead of the snow car. Those killed and injured were all among the men riding in the bunk car.

D. C. Man Is Held

New York, Dec. 16 (INS).—Joseph F. Vaselli, 27-year-old Washington, D. Corcoran Reveals His Fees in Year Total $100,000, Denies Ever Receiving Brokerage

Thomas G. Corcoran—President Roosevelt's "Tommy the Cork"—revealed yesterday that in approximately a year he has run up a $100,000 total in fees from organizations having relations with Federal defense agencies, and that there is a fair chance his earnings on this account will be higher.

After a 3½-hour session with the Special Senate Committee investigating defense expenditures, however, he remained unshaken in his denial that he ever received, or expects to receive any fee in the form of brokerage or defense contracts.

As the session drew to a close, however, it became increasingly clear that the former White House lieutenant had been given advantages and privileges not often afforded Senate witnesses.

With elaborate courtesy and in unctious tones, Corcoran skillfully turned aside a barrage of questions, and when his interrogators showed signs of getting tough, Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, an Administration leader, came to his aid.

Corcoran received further assistance from the committee itself. Senator Truman (Democrat), of Missouri, the chairman, produced for the record two documents, both of which had been secured by committee investigators at Corcoran's request.

One of the documents was an affidavit from Benjamin A. Dowd, president of the Empire Ordnance Corp., a concern with which Corcoran's name has been linked in rumor, to the effect that the witness neither holds office with nor receives salary from the company.

The other was a letter from Howard L. Vickery, member of the Maritime Commission, which stated that at no time did Corcoran appear before the commission in connection with its award of ship construction contract to the Savannah Shipyards Corporation owned by interests that also control Empire Ordnance.

Corcoran's biggest fee was $65,000 for his part in obtaining a $3,500,000 loan from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for construction of a magnesium plant by a syndicate that included the Todd Shipyards Corporation, of New York. He told the committee that he understood he was to be given additional payment in stock.

His next largest fee was $25,000 for his participation in joint purchase by the Federal Government and the British Purchasing Commission of World War Liberty engine parts from the Vimalert Co., of New Jersey. The total purchase price was approximately one million dollars.

For legal advice on financing Savannah shipyards, an opinion delivered not directly to company officials but to attorneys engaged by them on Corcoran's recommendation, Corcoran said he received $5000. The attorneys were William Koplovitz and William J. Dempsey with offices in Washington. Dempsey's father, John J. Dempsey, was a member of the Maritime Commission.

Corcoran received a similar amount—"I never worked for anything less than $5000 in my life," he said. "Frankly, I can't afford it"—for assistance in the corporate organization of Chinese Supplies, Inc., which supervises all lend-lease arrangements for China.

Half facetiously, half seriously, Republican Senators Ball of Minnesota, and Brewster of Maine, suggested that Corcoran's skill might be used to advantage if he were given a Government post. Brewster suggested a subcabinet position in the Navy Department and Corcoran retorted: "I am willing." The legislator said he was "paying tribute to the wisdom of retaining you," and Corcoran's reply was:

"Thank you, Senator. I hope a great many people heard that."

At one point, Connally objected to a question on the ground that it was "palpably an attempt to embarrass the witness."

Blandly, Corcoran told the committee that he had no understanding of the word "broker," no comprehension of a reference to "intimate" friends in the Government and no realization of the meaning of "influence."

Meanwhile a special Military Affairs Committee in the House heard Leon K. Shanack, of New York, defend a $52,000 profit for ten months work on $262,000 in defense subcontracts. "A lot of people have made a lot more than that," he declared.

Denies Defense Fees

CORCORAN DENIES CONTRACT LOBBYING—Thomas G. Corcoran, former White House adviser, appeared yesterday before the Senate Defense Investigating Committee at his own request. He told investigators that he had "never received a fee and I have no arrangements for receiving fees in the future, on percentage or otherwise, for contract brokerage or for any other form of soliciting defense contracts"

Laundry Striker Freed on Charge Of Hitting Officer

William Morgan, striking Arcade-Sunshine Laundry employe, was acquitted of charges that he had assaulted police officers last July during a fight at the laundry plant by a District Court jury yesterday.

The second laundry strike case to reach court within a few weeks, Morgan's acquittal evened the count between strikers and company at one all. A group of strikers were recently convicted of assaulting delivery truck workers on July 17.

During the two-day trial it was asserted that Morgan, a Negro, became embroiled in a riot which started when two girls—one a member of the picket line and the other a nonstriker—started fighting. He was accused of attacking two Tenth Precinct policemen during the brawl.

Defense attorneys Samuel Levine and Charles E. Ford introduced witnesses who declared that one of the officers was twisting the girl striker's arm when Morgan sought to intercede for her. Morgan was then beaten, according to the testimony, and placed under arrest.

One defense witness told the court that he took pictures of the affray but that police took away his camera and exposed the film.

Zoo's Who Makes Debut As Book, Too

Wild beasts garnished with wilder doggerel will descend upon Washington today.

Published by popular demand, "Zoo's Who in the Nation's Capital" will make its debut on book counters, in toy shops and at The Washington Post.

The volume's profusion of photographs—elephant, tiger, chimpanzees, dragon lizard, hybrid bear and dozens more—should make children from 6 to 60 sit up.

The verses probably will make poets turn over in their graves.

"Zoo's Who" is based upon the series of the same name which appeared in daily installments on The Post's picture pages last spring.

It is due to go on sale (at 50 cents a throw) today at 1:30 p. m. sharp in department stores, book stalls, toy shops and at The Post. One-thirty was picked because that is when Harl, the collar model who posed for the book's cover, is customarily fed. Sentimental gesture. ture.

Harl, by the bye, is a Sumatran tiger, whose abundant whiskers and schoolboy complexion are attributed to the fact that he was reared on cow's milk.

Dr. Willilam M. Mann, director of National Zoological Park and hence the overseer of all specimens depicted in "Zoo's Who," wrote the book's introduction. Photographs are by Harry Goodwin, Arthur Ellis, Randolph Burruss and William O. Klemm, of The Post staff, and the verses by Gerald G. Gross, likewise.

U. S. Seeks Bids to Supply School Children's Free Milk

Free milk for the Capital's underprivileged school children moved closer to actual operation yesterday when the Department of Agriculture began soliciting bids for dairies to supply the large quantities required.

Scheduled to be launched in 64 public and parochial schools and seven settlement houses on January 5, when the holiday vacation ends, the program calls for delivery of 35,500 half-pint bottles daily, except Saturdays and Sundays.

Approximately 28,000 boys and girls from families subsisting on public or private relief, work relief or submarginal incomes will benefit by the federally subsidized milk.

Accounting for an apparent discrepancy in figures is the fact that some 8000 undernourished children in public schools who now receive free lunches will be included in the new milk program, receiving two bottles a day: One during the morning recess period and another at noon.

Farmers supplying the Washington milkshed will receive $2.39½ a hundredweight for the Class I, Grade A milk which will be served free to the needy youngsters. This is the same special price which the Department of Agriculture pays, under its relief milk program, for the "nickel quarts" which are sold to certified needy families in the Capital.

In his report of November, released yesterday, C. I. Dunn, Federal marketing administrator for the Washington milkshed, revealed that 24,552,475 pounds of milk and cream were sold on the local market during the month. The aggregate value was $782,895.

The average minimum price per hundredweight for milk with a 4 per cent butterfat content was $3.19 per hundredweight.

Gunman Shoots At Store Owner And Then Flees

A gunman walked into Rachmeil Kuzminskey's grocery store at 1418 Twelfth Street Northwest last night, drew a pistol from his pocket and fired a shot at Kuzminskey.

Kuzminskey, unhurt, ran to the rear of the store. He expected to hear another shot ring out. It didn't. Hastily looking over his shoulder, he saw the gunman flee through the door, apparently as frightened as Kuzminskey.

No attempt was made to rifle the till.

Hawaii Ready Now; 'Let 'Em Come Back'

Nights in the Islands Are Long and Dark But Everyone Is Set for the Enemy

By Francis McCarthy
United Press Staff Writer

Honolulu, Dec. 16.—"Let 'em come back and get what's waiting for 'em now!" Hawaii has been battered—but she's up from the canvas and ready to start swinging.

The nights are long and dark, as they must be in war.

The hot spots are closed—from the famous Royal Hawaiian Hotel to the sailors' hangouts on Hotel Street. People go to bed these nights.

"Honoluluans are going to live healthy lives—sleeping at night and digging in the daytime," an Army officer said.

Gasoline was rationed yesterday — ten gallons a month. There is plenty of food. Every man must build bomb shelters for his family. Newspapers carry plans showing how to build them.

Buildings are sandbagged. Barricades and trenches meet the eye everywhere. Windows are taped to keep them from shattring when and if bombs fall again. Territorial guards, with glistening bayonets fixed to their rifles watch every strategic point.

Life during the day goes on almost as usual. Pineapples still grow. Sugar cane is cut, and bathers frolic once again on the beach at Waikiki.

Patrol ships steam along the blue horizon, planes roar overhead—friendly planes this time. They seem to shout:

"We're ready—come on back and get it."

Evacuees have returned to their homes in military areas. The big guns boomed the other day all around this island of Oahu for four hours. Their blasts were welcome ones. The guns were being "proofed"—tested.

Sale of liquor is prohibited.

Crime is at an unprecedented low, it was announced.

Blood is flowing every minute—not in the streets, but into test tubes. The rate of donors during the last week was maintained at nearly one a minute. The first 2000 donors furnished about 700 flasks of plasma. And the populace cheerfully is building up a large "blood bank."

Sabotage is just a word in the dictionary.

The Stars and Stripes flutter everywhere—"They can't lick us."

These islands no longer are a tourists' paradise—they're an outpost of democracy's defenses, a twentieth century Bunker Hill.

Sunday night two officers left their headquarters at Fort Shafter to get a cup of coffee. It was pitch dark when they returned. They got off the path and fell head first into a newly-dug trench in front of their headquarters. All concerned had a good laugh.

Sunday morning a civilian guard was posted at the door to the engine room of a sampam (Japanese fishing boat). He was ordered to let no one enter. And he obeyed those orders. He held off five men and an officer assigned to run the engine.

Later the same guard saw some Japanese sticking their heads out from behind a nearby lumber pile.

"Come out—with your hands," the guard ordered.

About 30 little Japanese stepped out. The guard thought he was the Sergeant York of this war. It later developed that the Japanese were aliens who had been rounded up and already were under guard. They took refuge behind a lumber pile when they thought an air raid was on.

Messages are pouring in from all over the world—of sympathy, condolence and congratulations—for the manner in which the people of Hawaii took the first treacherous blow against a nation at peace.

JOE COOK'S Swedish Meat Balls

1 pound ground beef
1 egg
1 teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons grated onion
2 teaspoons Lea & Perrins Sauce
4 slices bread
¼ cup water
2 tablespoons shortening
2 tablespoons flour
1 cup milk

Combine meat, egg, salt, onion and Lea & Perrins Sauce. Toast bread slowly until dry and brown. Break in small pieces; add water to toast. Combine softened toast with meat mixture. Shape into small balls and brown in hot shortening. Remove meat balls from pan. Add flour, stir until smooth, then gradually add milk, stirring constantly until smooth and thickened. Place meat balls in gravy, cover and simmer about 15 minutes. Makes 4 to 5 servings.

The humble meat-ball calls for rounds of applause when served up in this delicious disguise. Credit Lea & Perrins Sauce with the elusive and oh-so-satisfying flavor.

4 Young Ensigns Take Ship To Sea in Pursuit of Japs

Secretary of the Navy Knox yesterday revealed additional details of heroic action on the part of United States naval personnel in repulsing the treacherous Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor Sunday, December 7:

In the action to repel the Japanese attackers one destroyer was gotten underway with four United States Naval Reserve ensigns aboard as the only surviving officers on board. The young reserves, who had never had such responsibility, got the destroyer underway and took her out to sea to pursue the enemy, with the senior ensign in command. The young officers met all emergencies and operated the ship like veterans.

One enlisted man who went to sea after the attack on his own ship, said on leaving the harbor, "After that stab in the back I hope to live to show them what an American can do." Another said, "I know what the big shots meant when they spoke of the treachery of the Axis."

While preparing his compartment for divine services one chaplain was killed when the attack was launched. Church services would have been held on all the large vessels of the fleet had the attack not taken place a short time before "church call" was to have been sounded.

Officers and nurses on the hospital ship stationed in the harbor had considerable difficulty in restraining several men under treatment from leaving instantly so they could rejoin their shipmates and help in repelling the attack. Some of the men did manage to leave the hospital ship and join up with fighting units of the fleet.

A number of women, many being wives of officers and men and even in some cases women widowed by the attack, volunteered their services in the hospitals.

Ship handling was excellent throughout the action, and among destroyers, working at high speed and in close quarters, there were no collisions.

A gun captain noticed a powder case had jammed in his gun. He quickly obtained a hacksaw and cut off a section so the breech could be closed. The gun continued in service throughout the action.

On a destroyer tender some spare machine guns were broken out. These guns were speedily placed on top of deck houses and welded into place by welders who carried on their work at the height of the attack and amid a storm of bullets and bombs. All of these guns were in the final action.

Communications functioned perfectly throughout the action. Although many lines were cut by shrapnel, communications with the mainland was maintained throughout. Men remained at their posts in radio rooms of some ships until the last.

Master Strategy Parleys Start Here

Supreme Council For Conduct of War Is Held Unlikely

By Everett R. Holles
United Press Staff Writer

Informal consultations were under way in Washington last night, simultaneously with Anglo-Russian talks in London and Moscow, looking toward the drafting of a "master plan" of Allied strategy and a long-range victory program.

A master board of strategy, likely to have its headquarters here, may be created to correlate the war efforts of 27 governments which are at war against the Axis. These include ten American republics and nine Axis-occupied European countries.

Echoing President Roosevelt's radio warning and British predictions of a long, hard struggle, military experts believed it will be 1943 before the Allies will be strong enough in men and weapons to unleash a general offensive. They add that it may be five years more before a final, full-strength victory offensive can be undertaken by land, sea and air.

Supreme Council Unlikely

Although diplomatic quarters buzzed with speculation of the possible creation of a supreme Allied war council, it appeared on the basis of responsible reports that there would be no over-all joint authority for military action.

President Roosevelt at his press conference yesterday said consultations on joint conduct of the war have been under way and are coming along well.

In Congress, a number of influential supporters of the Administration's foreign policy were urging creation of an Allied council.

Talk spread that British Prime Minister Winston Churchill or Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden might come to this country to join in setting up such a council. This talk was increased by London dispatches saying that "statesmen of the most responsible type" were needed for such organization.

U. S. Backs Master Plan

The United States is believed to favor a master plan for general strategy to prevent overlapping and wasted energies, and perhaps unified commands for the various theaters of war. Under this tentative proposal, the general board of strategy would lay out a program but would not have blanket authority to order or direct military operations.

The plans would be carried out under formal war alliances which are expected to develop.

Great Britain and the United States already have the beginnings of such an alliance with many of the mechanics in operation here and in London.

The question of an alliance with Russia likewise has a nucleus in Soviet Ambassador Maxim Litvinoff's statement that the United States and Russia are fighting "a common battle against a common enemy." A more definite alliance with the Soviet must await Russia's decision as to when and how it will join Britain and this country in war against Japan.

Latin Nations Considered

Likewise, any definite plan of grand strategy probably will be delayed until after the Pan-American conference of the 21 American republics in Rio de Janeiro early in January, inasmuch as the United States is determined that all matters of allied war effort shall be drafted with the full association of this country's hemispheric allies and anti-Axis friends to the south.

Before any complete plan of strategy is agreed upon, it was said, there is likely to be a joint "declaration of solidarity" signed by the United States, Great Britain, Russia, China and the Netherlands government and containing pledges that none of the countries will sign a separate peace.

Cross-Town Bus Line Expected To Be Announced

Establishment of a cross-town bus line connecting the Catholic University region with Westmoreland Circle Northwest will be announced today, it was said at the District Building last night.

The Public Utilities Commission, according to Chairman Gregory Hankin, will meet this morning and the new bus route will probably be ready for operation "within a few days."

There were some doubts at the Capital Transit Co., that "immediate" arrangements for the new service could be made because of the necessity for transferring buses from other routes.

The cross-town plan has been pending for several months—first because of a nonquorum of the PUC and second because of recent defense demands on its members.

Massachusetts New Dealer Wins

Lynn, Mass., Dec. 16 (AP).—State Senator Thomas J. Lane, staunch supporter of President Roosevelt and the New Deal, tonight overwhelmingly won the Democratic nomination—usually tantamount to election—in a speical primary in Massachusetts's Seventh Congressional District.

The 43-year-old attorney polled 17,275 votes in the heavily industrial district to win with a plurality of 8281 votes in the nine-man field.

County Commissioner Nelson Pratt won the Republican nomination easily with 5268 votes.

The special election, two weeks hence, will be to fill the seat of the late United States Representative Lawrence J. Connery, Democrat.

No Fumbling!

Words Await White House Eve Singers

There'll be no fumbling for the words of the four carols which a massed assembly will sing in the White House grounds Christmas Eve.

The public will be admitted into the south grounds of the Executive Mansion next Wednesday at 4:30 p. m. to hear the President's holiday message to the Nation. It will be not only the first time that the National Community Christmas Tree lighting has been held there during this administration but also the first time that the public has been invited to join in the carol singing.

Four of the most beloved yuletide songs are on the program: "Joy to the World," "Adeste Fidelis," "It Came Upon the Midnight Clear" and "Silent Night." The words to these carols, and seven more besides, will be contained in a folder which is being printed by The Post.

To be distributed free, the folder will be available to choral groups and individuals who are planning neighborhood or community carol sings, as well as those persons who simply wish to brush up on the words so that they will be able to join in the White House chorus Christmas Eve. The folders will be ready tomorrow afternoon. They may be called for at The Post's lobby counter.

Three of the four carols which the massed audience will sing at the White House Christmas Eve will be carried on the coast-to-coast broadcasts of the radio networks. The fourth, "Joy to the World," will be sung immediately before the President emerges onto the south portico at 5 p. m. and the program goes on the air.

It was announced yesterday that the Elizabeth Sommers Glee Club, led by Miss Mary Burnett, will march through the halls of the Railroad Retirement Building at 10 a. m. December 23, singing Christmas carols. The building houses the Quartermaster General's office, War Department.

At 3 p. m. on the same day, a similar serenade will be given there by the Lovette Choral Club, directed by Mrs. Eva Whitford Lovette, who is music chairman for the White House exercises Christmas Eve.

Eicher Confers With Roosevelt; May Be Justice

Edward C. Eicher, chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, conferred with President Roosevelt yesterday, and it was reported he would be appointed to the District Court to succeed Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat, who resigned last week.

Eicher declined to comment, but denied he had talked to the President about capital control. A proposal to limit capital issues has been prepared by the SEC, the Federal Reserve Board and the Treasury.

Secretary Morgenthau disclosed Thursday that capital control may come in the future. His statement gave credence to reports the Government was considering setting up a counterpart of the old World War capital issues committee.

Eicher succeeded Jerome N. Frank after the latter was appointed to a judgeship for the Southern District of New York.

Christmas Party Shifted

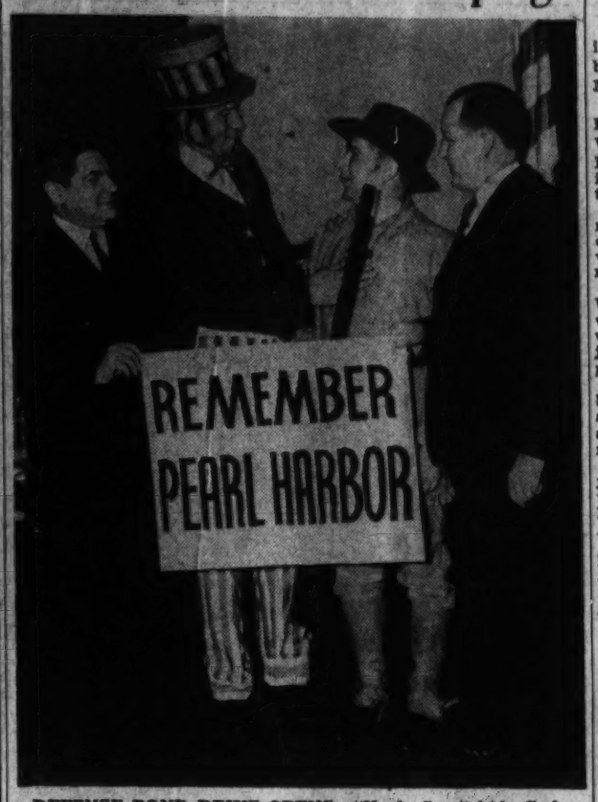
Law Binds Industry's Desire To Build 500,000 U. S. Homes

Belief that private industry and capital can and will build 500,000 defense housing units before the end of 1942 or sooner, if certain legislative "shackles" are removed, was expressed yesterday by the Home Builders Emergency Committee in a letter to Charles F. Palmer, defense housing coordinator.

The latter, copies of which also were sent President Roosevelt, members of Congress and Government bureaus concerned with housing and welfare, stated obstacles may be removed first by adjustment of the Federal Housing Administration's valuation policy to recognize present existing costs.

The committee also recommended that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation through its Defense Homes Corporation advance equity money to builders in the construction of rental projects and suggested that the National Housing Act be amended to raise the ceiling of mortgages from $4000 to $5000, extend term from 20 to 25 years, reduce insurance premium and permit occupancy by employed defense workers, thereby eliminating credit investigation and making it possible for private builders to compete with public construction.

'Remember Pearl Harbor' Cries TradeBoard in Bond Campaign



DEFENSE BOND DRIVE OPENS—"Uncle Sam" bids Godspeed to "the Frontiersman," symbol of the United States Defense Bond drive opened yesterday by the membership committee of the Board of Trade. Handling the admonition, "Remember Pearl Harbor," are Fred A. Smith (left), board president, and Thornton W. Owen, membership committee and drive chairman. Al W. Lee is Uncle Sam and Edward T. Offutt, jr., the Frontiersman

With "Remember Pearl Harbor" as its theme, the Washington Board of Trade's membership committee yesterday forsook conventional duties and rallied to the support of a new cause—sale of defense savings bonds.

Heeding a request of Fred A. Smith, board president, the 100-man committee mapped a campaign to sell thousands or even millions of dollars' worth of bonds between now and January 6.

A full report of sales will be made at the board's next regular meeting, January 6.

"The time has passed," Smith told committee members meeting at the Board of Trade headquarters, "for a 'take-it-or-leave-it' attitude toward the sale of defense bonds."

Now, he added, it has become a fundamental and patriotic duty for everyone to take active interest in the Nation's defense, particularly members of such organizations as the Board of Trade.

Smith said that as far as he knew the Washington board was the first private organization to launch an ambitious drive of this sort.

"Remember Pearl Harbor," Smith declared, "and let's buy bonds for bombs."

Thorntown W. Wilder, chairman of the membership committee, said eight teams would participate in the campaign. Two leagues of four teams each will compete with each other, with the league selling the largest amount of bonds scheduled to be guests at a dinner to be financed by the losing league.

Captains appointed are M. C. MacKinnon, Edward T. Offutt, jr., S. Eugene Madden, Garrett A. Pendleton, J. Merrill Conner, David C. Colladay, Howard C. Drake and S. Dolan Donohoe.

Owen told committeemen they should work not only with members of the Board of Trade but also with the general public.

Participating in the meeting were Hugh Lynch, administrator of the District of Columbia Defense Savings Committee, and his assistant, Walter D. Barkdull. One of the volunteer speakers of the savings committee, Leslie Garnett, former United States Attorney for the District of Columbia, outlined the purposes and theory of defense bonds.

D. C. to Name Rent Czar Today; Laudick, Cogswell Mentioned

Washington will have an administrator of its new rent-control law by noon today, Commissioner Guy Mason said last night.

Mason and Commissioner John Russell Young yesterday visited the White House and talked over with President Roosevelt problems facing the city in its enforcement of the rent regulations.

"The President made no recommendations," said the Commissioners later, "but appeared pleased with all phases of the emergency rent-controlled plan."

Soon after returning from the White House, Mason and Young were closeted for nearly an hour with two likely candidates for the job of administrator—a $7500-a-year position.

They were Louis Laudick, retired businessman and former broker, and Robert Cogswell, local lawyer and brother of Theodore Cogswell, registrar of wills.

Also interviewed by Mason—late yesterday after Laudick and Cogswell had left—was William C. Bowen, an executive with the American Red Cross.

In promising a final answer today, Mason last night said he "still had an open mind," and selection of a man for the rent post "was a tough job."

He added, however, that he would study "for another few hours" the qualifications of all candidates and reach a decision today.

It was agreed during the meeting with the President yesterday that Mason, because of his experience as an attorney, would, as District Commissioned, be in charge of the rent-control program.

Under recently enacted legislation, rents in the District are "frozen" as of last January 1. The law becomes effective January 2, 1942.

Smithsonian Reports Antiwater League

Peck's bad boy and Tom Sawyer are not the only ones who figure in history as dryly indifferent to water. The Smithsonian Institution yesterday reported that certain animals can live without even drinking it.

Mostly desert animals, pocket mice, kangaroo rats, jerboas, grasshopper mice to name only a few, these "abstainers" obtain the necessary moisture through chemical processes in the body which convert food into moisture by oxidation. Some carnivorous rodents like the grasshopper mouse receive moisture from blood and other body fluids.

Selectee's Death In Poison Case Called Suicide

A certificate of suicide was issued by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald yesterday after an autophy revealed hat Private Nichola Crowley, 27-year-old selectee, died of poison.

The soldier, whom police said was A. W. O. L. from Fort Belvoir since October, collapsed in the apartment of Mrs. Thelma Clugston at 2809 Fifteenth Street Northwest, early yesterday. He was dead when an Emergency Hospital doctor arrived.

Mrs. Clugston told Detective Sergt. George Darnall that Crowley had been despondent for several months and that he went for a walk Monday night. He returned about 3 a. m. and when she opened the door he fell inside, gasping:

"I've taken poison."

Sergt. Darnall said he was unable to determine any reason for the act other tha . the despondency spoken of by Mrs. Clugston.

A sister of Crowley's Mrs. Antoinette O'Brien of 1011 North Capitol Street, was notified by police.

Broker Guilty Of Murder Effort

White Plains, N. Y., Dec. 16 (U.P.). Isaac Brown, 42, New York insurance broker, tonight was convicted of attempting to murder Matilda Le Boyer, 18, his office protege, who charged him with attempting to kill her after they had had intimate relations.

Miss Le Boyer testified that Brown lured her to a spot in Mount Vernon on the pretext that he would perform an abortion. Instead, she said, he slashed her throat and left her for dead. She recovered and subsequently gave birth to a stillborn child.

Area C. I. O. Asks Labor Unity During War

Promotion of labor unity in Maryland and th District through formation of a joint labor committee representing the American Federation of Labor, the Railroad Brotherhoods and the C. I. O., was asked yesterday in a resolution unanimously adopted by the convention of the Maryland-District C. I. O. Industrial Union Council.

"It has been deemed essential by President Roosevelt and leaders of the three labor organizations that the successful prosecution of the war depends in a great measure on unity of all labor groups to fulfill labor's role of increased production, industrial peace, and participation in planning of the national war efforts," the resolution stated.

Adoption of the resolution on the eve of the conference of leaders of labor and industry called by President Roosevelt was interpreted by observers as a move to bring the proposal before the conference.

In apparent disregard of the resolutions and other peace feelers advanced at the convention, attention was called to the immensity of the breach still separating the C. I. O. and the A. F. of L. by R. J. Thomas, president of the United Automobile Workers, who told the convention that the A. F. of L. representatives to attend the conference today do not represent workers "in any vital defense industry." Thomas, who is to be one of the C. I. O. conferees, spoke at the banquet session of the convention last night at Harrington Hotel.

Allan Haywood, organization director of the C. I. O.; Frederick Myers, vice president of the National Maritime Union, and Leo Krzycki, vice president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, and other speakers at the banquet urged full support of President Roosevelt and the war effort.

An unusual note was injected into the session by Jan Stanczyk, minister of labor in the Polish government in exile, who described in Polish the sufferings of Polish workers under the Nazi regime. Following the speech, Krzycki read a translation of Stanczyk's remarks.

Earlier, the convention turned to problems of civilian defense and asked that corporations provide suitable air-raid shelter and civilian defense training to employes at their own expense.

Conversion of C. I. O. shop stewards and grievance committees into air-raid precautions and antisabotage groups was suggested. A demand for labor representation on local defense councils was also made.

Use of Government mediation machinery and voluntary efforts to adjust labor disputes was promised. The Government was asked "to strictly enforce every favorable labor law and to protect labor's rights against the attacks of war profiteers."

A "more equitable" distribution of defense contracts to prevent unemployment and mass migrations of woskers to defense areas was requested.

Other resolutions opposed discrimination against Negroes, daylight saving time, and dismissal of Government workers on the basis of Dies Committee charges. Support was urged for the Government drive to sell defense bonds and stamps, the C. I. O. organizing drive in Bethlehem Steel and shipbuilding plants in Maryland, British and Russian war relief efforts, antilynching legislation, and efforts to prevent the deportation of Harry Bridges, West Coast C. I. O. leader.

OPM Radio Series Loses Out to War

An OPM sponsored series of radio broadcasts over Station WBAL in Baltimore by Charles Mitzel, associate labor representative in OPM, have been abandoned over Mitzel's protests "to make room for war bulletins," it was learned last night.

Mitzel, who has broadcast his program for 15 minutes every Saturday for the past six weeks charged that the station deprived him of radio time because of the "pro-labor" nature of his comments. Mitzel made his charges at a convention session of the Maryland-District C. I. O. Industrial Union Council yesterday.

A hurried OPM investigation immediately followed. WBAL officials told OPM that they needed the time to make room for additional broadcasts of war news but promised to make time available for special broadcasts at OPM's request.

Son, 5, Is Crippled Mother's Only Help

check on the counter and remarked, "I just got to thinking how lucky I really am to have what I have and to be in the country I'm in and I wanted to help some really needy family this Christmas."

Contributions of $680.61 yesterday brought the total to $1539.37.

But more and more contributions are required if all the neediest families are to be taken care of.

With Christmas only a few days away it is important that contributions come quickly to make this a season of hope rather than one of misery for these families.

It should be remembered that these families are ordinarily self-supporting and with financial help now can be that way again. Bad luck—accident, illness, or something of the sort—has taken them from their independent status and with smashing swiftness placed them in desperate, immediate need.

Look now into the lives of two more of these families.

Family No. 64

Hearing about Mrs. H., introduced above, the family agency sent a worker to her small room. The worker saw a 25-year-old woman using a small wagon to go from one part of the room to the other and having no other help in anything than 5-year-old Bobby, her son, could give her.

Behind this scene was a record of courageous endurance of suffering and inconvenience. Mrs. H. had been crippled in an automobile accident. Her husband lost his job and was sent to Occoquan.

Being a cripple, Mrs. H. is totally at the mercy of other roomers who may or may not choose to assist her.

Taken to a clinic, she was told by a doctor that her teeth should be extracted and after skin and bone grafts she might later use crutches.

Financial help now would enable Mrs. H. to have the medical treatment she needs to be brought to the point where she could use crutches. The $125 needed would also include enough to buy the crutches. Family certified by Salvation Army.

Family No. 65

Mrs. B. isn't wondering if she will have any money to give toys to Eileen, 4 years old, and Frankie, 2, this Christmas. She hasn't got that far. She's considering whether she will have food for their undernourished bodies and whether she will be able to take them from the miserable, damp room which is ruining whatever chances at health they have.

She is wondering, too, about a terrific dilemma in which she finds herself—on one hand the doctor says if she goes to work she will develop tuberculosis, and on the other hand she can hardly bear her children's need for food and their harmful living conditions.

Mr. B. is already in a sanitarium receiving treatment for tuberculosis. The doctor says Mrs. B. should rest seven months or she, too, will find herself in a sanitarium.

For $1.5 the family can be moved to a better environment and kept together until the parents' health improves sufficiently to support the children. Family certified by Catholic Charities.

Each of the neediest families is recommended by one of five agencies: Family Service Association, Salvation Army, American Legion Welfare Department, Catholic Charities and Bureau of Rehabilitation.

These agencies, members of the Community Chst, will expend The Post's Fund without charge.

Contributions received up to an early hour yesterday are as follows:

Red Cross Cables $100,000 to Islands

Million Surgical Dressings, Other Supplies to Be Sent

The American Red Cross yesterday cabled $50,000 each to the Philippine and Hawaii chapters and prepared to fill requests for:

Five hundred hospital pajamas, light clothing for 10,000 women and children, 10,000 sweaters for men, women and children, 5,000 wool blankets and a million surgical dressings.

Previously the Red Cross sent $25,000 to Hawaii and $50,000 to the Philippines together with large stocks of clothing, medical supplies and 50-bed first aid stations. These were shipped before Japan attacked, as a preparedness measure.

Garments requested yesterday by Alfred Castle, Hawaii chapter chairman, will be shipped from stocks provided by women volunteers in Red Cross chapters and now on hand in the American Red Cross warehouse. It was not disclosed

Big Checks Are Sent For War Relief Fund

Contributions and pledges of support for the 50-million-dollar special Red Cross war relief fund are continuing to pour in at headquarters, Chairman Norman H. Davis reported last night.

Ten Red Cross chapters in widely separated communities already have passed the goals set for their counties, he said.

Special Service Trainees Asked to Report at Once

Faced with immediate wartime expansion, the District Chapter of the American Red Cross yesterday asked that anyone with Red Cross training in any of the nine voluntary special services report at once to the Chapter House, 1730 E Street Northwest. Volunteers also may phone National 1910.

The following information about the services was given for the benefit of trained workers who wish to volunteer.

Production—Volunteers may form sewing and knitting groups. Miss Wooley at desk in production room, phone National 1910, branch 285; Mrs. Fishback, chairman, branch 249. Surgical dressings—These must be done exclusively at Walsh House, 2020 Massachusetts Avenue. Mrs. Harbold is chairman. House is open daily from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m.; evenings, from 5:45 to 9. Phone Hobart 5800.

Canteen corps—Class in emergency mass feeding given for women experienced in nutrition, dietitics and mass feeding being held at D. C. Chapter house this week is completely filled. Other classes to follow. Mrs. Frowbridge, chairman, National 1910, branch 265. Nutrition, phone Mrs. Leary at National 1910, branch 360, for information as to classes starting. First aid classes will be given as instructors are available. National 1910, branch 278.

Nurses aides—Great need for trained women. Anyone who has had this course and has time, please report to chapter house, National 1910, branch 291. The chapter is giving courses.

Braille—Mrs. Revell, chairman, would appreciate it very much if those women who have been trained in this highly specialized course will give all their available time.

Staff assistant—If those staff assistants on the inactive list will communicate with the chairman, Mrs. C. B. Mickelwait, it will be greatly appreciated. National 1910, branch 289.

Motor corps—Mrs. Harris, chairman, reports that at the moment local demands have been filled. After the first of the year, courses will be given as needed. Requisites for this course are: An applicant must have a car, a driver's license and must be between the ages of 20 and 50. There are two courses in the motor corps. In one, a motor mechanic's course is necessary and a first aid course. It is necessary to give 100 hours a year in this auxiliary course, which is for employed people who can drive nights and Saturdays and Sundays. The regular course is for those available at all time and requirements are the same plus the fact that a staff assistant course must be taken and 300 a year be given.

Gray Ladies (hospital and recreation corps)—Mrs. Bazzs, chairman, reports that the inactive Gray Ladies have offered their services. Also women from out of town now stationed in Washington who have had this course, have offered their services. Mrs. Bazzs will interview applicants at the chapter house for this highly specialized course, 1730 E Street Northwest. National 1910, branch 290.

Public Must Look to Bunions for Its Weather

The United States Government yesterday clamped down a ban on all weather information that may be of use to the enemy.

Until yesterday Mr. John Q. Public could dial WE. 1212 on his telephone and receive the forecast, temperature and wind reports. But now WE. 1212 can't say a word about wind direction—and neither can the newspapers. Radio stations have been asked to eliminate all weather reports, except warnings or emergency weather conditions like floods, hurricanes, cold waves, severe storms and heavy snows.

The action also calls for radical restrictions on air pressure, fogs, clouds and other elements. Weather maps no longer will be published at field stations nor in newspapers. The Washington weather map will be printed, but it will be mailed a week late to a restricted list for record, training and reference purposes only after it is no longer useful for current forecasting purposes.

Commander Francis W. Reichelderfer, Weather Bureau chief, in announcing the new regulations, said they will be in effect for the duration of the war "to prevent use by enemies of the United States of data which might be useful in air or naval operations against American coasts and shipping."

"All our facilities are now geared to serve the war program to the fullest possible extent," he said, "and we are doubling that advantage to our own forces by withholding it completely from our enemies. Meanwhile, we will continue to do everything we can to reduce public inconvenience from these restrictions to a minimum and we will resume the full regular service as soon as that can be done without detriment to the national defense.

Storm warning lights along the seacoast will be discontinued and pennants will be used—one red pennant to warn small craft, two red pennants for storms and two red pennants with black centers for hurricane. The storm warnings will no longer tell wind direction.

Other limitations were ordered for crop, winter sports and fire-weather forecasts.

8 Home Inmates Burned to Death

Schenectady, N. Y., Dec. 16 (INS).—Investigators expressed belief tonight that a cigarette being smoked in bed started a fire which early today destroyed the Riverside Convalescent Home and burned to death eight aged inmates.

The home, 4 miles west of Schenectady, was destroyed within an hour, and the flames spread so rapidly most of the victims were trapped in their rooms. Nine patients were carried to safety through the flames, but two were in a critical condition from burns and shock.

Norway Calls Up Its Boys

London, Dec. 16 (AP).—The Norwegian government in exile issued regulations today making all Norwegian citizens over the age of 18 and outside Norway liable to either military of civilian service.

Income Tax In D. C.

Washington won a partial victory in the decision of the Supreme Court in the local income-tax cases. Apparently the opinion handed down on Monday means that the District may tax many Government employes who have taken up residence here for indefinite periods. The Court makes a distinction between permanent residents and Federal workers who come here for temporary employment with the firm intent of returning to their home States when their tour of duty in the Capital has been completed. Permanent residents are subject to the District income tax and temporary residents are not. The perplexing problem which the Court leaves unsolved is just where the line between the two groups should be drawn.

The opinion thus leaves the local authorities with a complicated administrative task. The Court has laid down a great many tests to be applied to persons living here who seek to avoid the local tax. Do they cling to the intention of returning to a former home? Do they pay taxes in the State where they claim to be domiciled? Do they vote there? Are the roots they have sunk into the community life of the District deep or shallow? Have they moved their families here and established homes? Have they purchased property here? Have they acquired church, club and social ties which suggest settled residence? All these and other factors must be taken into consideration in determining who should pay the tax, but no one of them is to be regarded as conclusive.

The Court makes it plain that no mere sentimental attachment for the old home will sustain a claim of exemption from the income tax in the District of Columbia. The intention of returning must be fixed and definite and must be supported by positive evidence. For the Court clearly says that "the place where a man lives is properly taken to be his domicile until facts adduced establish the contrary."

The opinion is certain to give rise to many controversies. But it saves the District income tax from the ruin that would have been visited upon it by the Court of Appeals decision which the Supreme Court has now reversed. And as precedents become established, the administrative task will probably be lightened. Still it is doubtful whether the income tax law will ever be fully equitable or satisfactory until Congress applies it to all residents making use of the municipal services which this tax helps finance.

Labor Peace

The industry-labor conference which will convene today reflects the new spirit of unity which has now come over the country. But to win agreement there can be no mere reliance upon patriotism. Many knotty problems have to be solved. And there is no time to solve them all at one parley. The aim of this conference probably will be limited, therefore, to the ironing out of guiding principles attached to a no-strike and no-lockout formula. For this task the conferees are well equipped, for they are representative enough to assure the country that at least they will speak for all industry. And they will be helped to agreement by Moderator William H. Davis, whose patience has become proverbial since he became chairman of the National Defense Mediation Board.

The choice of Senator Elbert D. Thomas, chairman of the Senate Labor Committee, as associate moderator is a sign that legislation is envisaged. Out of his committee has just come the Ball bill as a less restrictive alternative to the Smith bill which already has passed the House. The war, if no other consideration, should give the right of way to the Ball bill. Under that measure notice must be given when either employers or employes desire a change in their working relationship. If direct negotiations fail after 30 days, then the disputants would be required to call in experts of the Conciliation Service. If the experts fail, the dispute would be certified to the National Defense Mediation Board. If the board cannot effect a final adjustment, the dispute would be referred to a labor disputes commission for findings of fact and recommendations of a settlement. The procedure might sound long-winded, but in all the circumstances its wisdom seems beyond question. The important clause overhanging all others is that in the course of this exploration both employers and employes "shall continue production of the work in which they are engaged." This bill, we hope, will get the approval of the industry-labor conference.

Whether there will be time to lay down a wage policy among the labor principles is doubtful. Yet the absence of a wage policy will handicap the men in charge of mediating future disputes. Many times we have called attention to such a need, and, if this conference cannot work out a wage policy, the task should be undertaken by a similar conference after the Ball bill or something like it has been legislated. The main purpose of this conference, after all, is to show the Axis that from now on there will be no more of those interruptions in work which already have piled up a sizable bill of unpreparedness.

Great Of Heart

The 7th of December, 1941, may be, as the President said, a date that will live in infamy, but it is also a date that will live in glory. No one can doubt that who reads Secretary Knox's account of the behavior of American sailors throughout the battle of Pearl Harbor. Two weeks ago possibly not one American in twenty had ever heard the name of Pearl Harbor. Hereafter no American will ever forget it. For the coming generations it will have emotional associations equal to such names as Valley Forge, Lundys Lane, Gettysburg and Chateau Thierry. Whatever humiliation we may now feel over the carelessness or overconfidence that made possible the surprise attack by the Japanese will pass. Even the grief we feel for the thousands of brave men who perished in the battle will pass. But the pride we feel in their heroism will endure. Never have the traditional fortitude and resourcefulness of American soldiers and sailors been more amply demonstrated than in the past 15 days. The question of whether the American character has been softened or enervated by prosperity has now been answered and the answer is no.

Courage in battle has never been, of course, the peculiar possession of any particular people. Courage is perhaps the most universal of all virtues. But there are certain aspects of the courage of the sailors at Pearl Harbor that we like to think of as specially American. In what the enemy had hoped and calculated would be an hour of the most profound confusion these sailors exhibited the coolness, the initiative, and the capacity for improvised teamwork in moments of great emergency that belong to the American genius. These are cultural rather than racial qualities—qualities, that is, engendered and nurtured by the special circumstances of American life. One of the finest details in Mr. Knox's story is the one about the navy yard employes of Japanese origin who joined the Marines in the machine-gun nests.

While speaking of race and courage, the occasion must not be allowed to pass without a word of admiration for General MacArthur's Filipinos who are more than holding up their end of the defense of Luzon. Where the American Regulars in the Philippines, like the indomitable Marines of Wake Island, are living up to long-established traditions of their services, the Philippine native army is experiencing for the first time the ordeal of combat. And, to judge from all reports, no soldiers have ever endured it more valiantly and nobly.

Lend-Lease

A new kind of isolationism is growing up which is just as shortsighted as the old. It is said that now we are in danger, we must keep our military supplies at home. Nothing could be more dangerous. The defensive importance to this Nation of the Pacific and the Atlantic approaches to this hemisphere is no longer susceptible of argument. They have proved to be just as vital to our Nation as our very soil. Singapore, as we showed yesterday, is in this category, and Gibraltar and Dakar are equally cases in point on the Atlantic side. The "world-wide strategy" of which President Roosevelt wrote in his quarterly report on lend-lease requires imperatively that these approaches shall have the consideration which an army gives to its front-line trenches.

That is why there must be no relaxation in the aid we are supplying to our fighting Allies. The help we have already rendered is little enough. Aside from the supplies shipped in return for cash, only 595 million dollars of aid had actually been consigned under lend-lease up till November 30. Of this sum only some 303 million dollars worth of fighting equipment and industrial raw materials had been sent out of this country. How much even of this amount actually arrived at destination, there is no means of knowing. For the consignments were made only to our own tidewater for conveyance across the seas in Allied bottoms. Spread among 29 nations, moreover, the aid cannot have been of very real assistance in the war effort. Yet we now see, with the war thrust upon this Nation, that every nickel's worth has been amply repaid in the better preparedness of our Allies to keep the Axis onslaught from our shores.

Naturally our Army and Navy will seek desperately to keep more supplies within our own territory. That is their job. The only way to offset this understandable selfishness—which might well be disastrous—is to commit the apportionment of supplies as well as the war strategy to an allied board. At the same time we must curtail civilian consumption to the bone in order to keep up shipments and remedy our own domestic unpreparedness. President Roosevelt comes near to such a goal when he says "We must use the weapons from the arsenal of the democracies where they can be employed most effectively."

Hawaii's Fifth Column

From the businesslike way in which the Japanese concentrated on Oahu's strategic objectives, it was apparent, even in early reports of the debacle, that the enemy had a detailed knowledge of island defenses. Seemingly rehearsed for their job, Japanese planes approached Oahu from several directions simultaneously. They wasted little or no time hunting for military installations, some of which were camouflaged. Instead they dove with merciless precision on the key defenses of our Pacific bastion. That they could not have had so clear a blueprint of Oahu without information supplied by persons on the island was generally taken for granted. And now Secretary Knox confirms this assumption by declaring that, with the exception of Norway, the most effective Fifth Column work of the war was done in Hawaii.

There has been no official elaboration of the Secretary's statement. But whatever Fifth Column activity existed must have been of two categories: cooperation with Tokyo long before and during the attack. Neither the Navy nor the Army had any illusions about Japan's long-standing interest in Oahu's topography. Nor could they sensibly have supposed the Japanese to be without information which, until recently, was available to anybody who wanted it. Pearl Harbor is now and always has been closely guarded. But part of the naval base, with repair shops, docks, and anchorages, is visible with the naked eye from the public highway which skirts the restricted area. Government maps of Oahu have never been hard to come by. To be sure, those maps have omitted military details. Yet many such details could easily have been filled in before the recent stepping up of military supervision. Until comparatively recently Japanese laborers helped construct many of the private military roads. Japanese women worked as maids in officers' homes within restricted areas. Japanese fishermen, stories of whose espionage activities are legion, operated deep-sea-going sampans, some of which turned up, contrary to regulation, in the midst of offshore naval maneuvers or in the restricted area near the entrance to Pearl Harbor.

Unauthorized Japanese naturally had difficulty in obtaining admission to Pearl Harbor, for the Navy in Hawaii has traditionally regarded persons of Japanese blood, whether or not American citizens, as suspect. Yet German and Italian nationals, more than a score of whom have been arrested since the attack, have frequently penetrated Pearl Harbor without arousing the suspicion which ordinarily falls on those of Japanese countenance. Navy and Army officials, too, have been perfectly aware of the impossibility of concealing the location of many objectives from a potential enemy. And, as a matter of fact, both services are on record as stating that professional journalists visiting Oahu in search of defense stories probably found out about one-tenth as much as is known in Tokyo.

Thus there is no doubt whatever that espionage on behalf of Japan, prior to the attack, could have been considerable, in spite of coordinated protective measures by Navy and Army intelligence officers and by the FBI. Whether cooperation by Japanese or other Axis nationals on Oahu included actual sabotage of military communications or equipment just before or during the attack probably won't be known until the promised investigation of the attack—if then. The fact remains, however, that whatever Tokyo had learned through the years would have availed little had the armed forces been given advance warning of the enemy approach. Without such warning, which had been simulated dozens of times in practice maneuvers, island defenses, as would be expected, were literally helpless during the all-important seconds which opened the slaughter.

THE BLOWING OF LEAVES

The blowing of leaves is in my heart tonight,
Octobers and Decembers I have known,
Crisp leaves along the air in golden flight,
Lost embers smoldering like a garnet stone.
The door is fast, my windows locked securely,
The wind tries at the latch and hurries by;
Frost on the frozen pane hangs white and pearly,
The orchard marks the hours with a sigh.
Forget, O mind, that autumn holds the world!
Pretend, O heart, no wind-torn leaves are blowing
Across your barren meadows, red leaves curled
To yellow edges bright as lanterns glowing!
Be kind, O sleep! Let me, till break of day,
Believe, in truth, these leaves have blown away.

Pearl Harbor Heroes

I read this morning on page 1 of The Washington Post Secretary Knox's excellent report of the magnificent conduct of our Navy's forces at Pearl Harbor. I was thrilled and immeasurably proud to be an American, when the American Navy has just written such a glorious page of history.

Minutes later I read the first of the day's grist of "Letters to the Editor," and I was humiliated and ashamed that my country, although able to produce thousands of men whose deeds of valor will thrill readers of history for countless generations, has found no way to prevent the occurrence, at rare intervals, let us hope, of individuals who will stoop to such shameful and baseless insinuations as are contained in that letter.

I have read everything that has been printed about what happened at Pearl Harbor, and listened to many radio broadcasts regarding the events of December 7 there, and not one word has been uttered or printed, to my knowledge, which would lead a clean mind to ask the question stated by your correspondent, "Could a Saturday night's dissipation have lost us the first major engagement of the war?"

Remembering President Lincoln's reaction when told by men unfriendly to Gen. Grant that the latter drank whisky, it is timely to suggest that if the countless deeds of heroism recorded at Pearl Harbor that Sunday morning were even in small part a result of "Saturday night's dissipation," then the navies of a number of countries one could name ought to find out the brand of liquor those heroes drank.

Creative Workers

A sense of futility grips the artist, the student, the teacher, the writer and the creative worker as war takes over the Nation's minds, lives and industries.

The artist is inclined to ask "What am I doing in the classroom, at the easel, at the typewriter, when men are fighting?" Men are prone to believe, in their excitement, that they can best serve where the din of fighting breaks the air.

The artist and the student, and every creative worker, however, must continue at his task.

First, because creative workers are a component of the present-day war organization as surely as are the men on battlefields, in factories, and the farmers in the field. Some men fight with planes and guns, but others fight with a song and with ideas. The creative worker must remain at his battle station as the anti-aircraft gunner remains at his.

Second, because the creative worker must lift the fighting spirit of the armed forces, the workers in war factories and the entire population. Men in a crowded air-raid shelter, even more than men on a pleasure journey, need a song and a story.

Third, because the creative worker must continue to keep alive all learning, all art and all thinking in a world where destruction must, unhappily, remain the order of the day till the forces that breed destruction are themselves destroyed.

Fourth, because the artist must now create the beautiful songs, poems, pictures and ideas which will hold back the emptiness and horrors of ruin when war ends.

Therefore, unless called to other war activities, the creative worker must remain at his easel, his typewriter, in the classrooms, in laboratories—teaching, learning, creating, writing.

Their tasks are vital to war, to victory and to the life that will come after victory.

Having a Car

Your local constabulary has just unpounded my car. The fine is $10. A warrant will be issued if I do not pay the $10 within 48 hours.

I have been working night and day at defense work. I am not simply a clerk. I am 57 years of age and have an important position. I had been getting to work late every day, depending upon the street cars. I live 4 miles from my office. So I bought a very small car that could be parked readily in any left-over space. The police seemed rabid in their determination to drive me from downtown free parking so I left the car on the street at home. I have a garage, but I am too busy and too tired to mother the car daily. I work too hard to take this sniping of the police in good grace.

If I leave the city and go where I can drive a car in peace I will make less money, work less hard, contribute less of my earnings to rent bandits, food profiteers, traffic banditry—nothing to organized charity, nothing to the tax collector, nothing to the defense program and I'd probably live longer.

It might be a good idea!

There is still the Bill of Rights. I could quit.

I'd be inviting Hitler, but honestly sometimes I think he couldn't be much worse! Take a look at the penalties for having a car in this city. Hydrophobia! Take a look at the available transportation that is the alternative, and go chew a rug!

Uniform Signals

How about campaigning for a national signal, instead of each community having its own? Last night I heard signals in several towns near here. All were different: some had short and long blasts, others all short and all long; but all sounded like train whistles or ambulance sirens. If every one had the same signal, people who travel from town to town would know that code and recognize it instantly. Three dots and a dash, the British "V"ictory signal, would be ideal because it could be distinguished by the code from any other siren or whistle. Even auto horns could sound this and, in sections where no sirens could be set up, would be successful. Also, coming in the midst of chaos, it might be very effective in calming nervous people by the very thought that despite the bombardment we would gain a "V"ictory in the end.

We already have a song, "Three Dots and a Dash;" let's make them our signal all over the country instead of wondering which ambulance is passing.

Patronage

Have politics been adjourned for the purpose of winning this war? By the Republicans, yes. By the New Dealers, no.

Men with ability and perhaps more love of country than many now in Government offices are being sneered at or given the run-around as usual if it is known that they voted the Republican ticket in 1940.

While, according to testimony before the Dies Committee, many a Communist or a fellow who wears red underwear but keeps it hidden is drawing down $6500, $8500 and even higher salaries, for which the rest of us are taxed.

Puerto Rico and War

Your recent editorial on "Food for Hawaii" makes it proper to discuss a similar situation encountered by Puerto Rico.

There is no doubt that the people of the island will fight with courage and decision against the Fascist and Nazi hordes, and that they have a spirit of endurance and heroism which undoubtedly will be shown again in the present world-wide fight, in which the future of the Western Hemisphere and of mankind is at stake.

But the civilian population will be faced with the problems of food shortages, lack of air-raid shelters, air-raid equipment, such as fire-control aid, gas masks, etc., and means of protection of any kind in case of attacks.

Nobody can put on the people of Puerto Rico the responsibility for the lack of diversification of the crops and for their actual exclusive dependence on sugar. In fact, a long struggle has gone on for years against the corporations which established in the island a diabetic economy and for the enforcement of an existing law for the limitation of the possession of land by corporations to 500 acres.

The immediate question is, however, that right now there is a food shortage in Puerto Rico and that it will be aggravated by any possible interruption of its shipping. The truth is that Puerto Rico, for reasons which I do not care to discuss here, buys all of its food supply in the United States. The Army and Navy in the island maintain their own reserves, but no provisions have been made for civilians. Why not build up reserves now, when there is still time? Why not facilitate, through the lifting of the operation of the coastwise shipping laws, the establishment of emergency communications between Puerto Rico and the Dominican Republic and Haiti, which can provide needed supplies to the island?

As to the protection of the civilians against air raids, for the last two years the people of Puerto Rico have been clamoring for that. During the first months of the year the Insular Legislature passed a joint resolution addressed to the Federal Government asking for the building of air-raid shelters, but the answer was that the same was a problem for the civil authorities of the island, which did not have money to do it. In fact, many newspapermen who went to Puerto Rico from the United States to report on its conditions pooh-poohed the plight of the people and pretended that the same was a Fifth Column activity.

I write this letter in dead earnest, because I think that something can still be done.

GILBERTO CONCEPCION.

Seeds of Vengeance

To win the war it is essential that our Government should have the full support of its Christian population. This will be impossible if it corrupts its purpose by setting it in direct opposition to Christian principles. We of the United States feel that our cause is just. The reasonings of Christian people in reaching this conclusion may differ and even conflict. As Christians, however, we must agree on one score: We are not in the war to avenge Pearl Harbor or any other Japanese, Italian or German violence, treachery or inhumanity.

Any propaganda which tends to stress the theme of vengeance is not aiding our cause. For the Christian it is only another force to fight against, and creates unnecessary division in our Nation. In the days ahead the cry for vengeance will become increasingly bitter. If we work ourselves into a spirit of insane hatred at the very beginning, what will be our attitude after three or four years of bloodshed? Will we have a chance of making a just or lasting peace? We can enter this war with love and a desire to serve all mankind. Love is more powerful than vengeance. This is the spirit the church will demand of its members.

In Passing

Seeing that no seat was occupied by more than one person, I looked them over and took my choice, which was by the side of a very sweet-looking lady wearing a stylish hat and a blue and white dress under a plaid coat. She was par excellence in looks. She was reading the morning paper, and as she turned a page right under my nose, my eye fell upon my favorite "funny." "Oh," I exclaimed, "I'm so glad you turned that page so that I may see what Mr. Jiggs is doing today. My paper hadn't come when I left home." But as I glanced toward Mr. Jiggs—all sweet and smiling—the hardest, meanest, shrillest voice I had ever heard came from the throat of that attractive-looking person whom I had chosen to sit by.

It said "I buy my papers to read not to lend to passengers on the streetcar." I never said a "mumblin'" word, but every eye in that car was upon that well-dressed woman, and I have an idea that every passenger on that car felt sorry for her poor little pinched soul.

The only vacancy was by the side of a very fat man with big arms, big hips, big legs and big feet. She wasn't a stripling herself. Down she sat by him with her bundles, umbrella and all. She had red hair and wore large brass jewelry on her ears. She looked at the man several times and then looked away. She thought at least he could get his knees closer together—but there he sat—never batting an eye nor moving one iota. Finally she sort of swelled up till she had no neck at all—you know the way. Then with all her strength she let him have the weight of her body on his left side. He still didn't change expression nor move an ounce of his flesh—but in the mildest voice we heard him say, "I ain't collapsible, lady, or I'd done it then."

We were skirting Dupont Circle when a rasping voice in back of me said, "Well, it's a funny thing to me that they can't spell."

"Who can't spell?" came back the query from one of the two ladies in the very heated argument.

The rasping-voiced one said, "Look at that sign which says 'USE ROUTE 29' and yet they never have put the 'E' in the word USE. I've been coming along here for two years looking at the sign, wondering every time why they don't correct it."

"But that is United States Route 29," was the reply.

While I was sitting in the family gallery of the Senate one day, two very attractive but very flossy young girls, perhaps 17 or 18 years of age, came in and sat by me. Their blond hair fell carelessly but prettily at the back of their necks. They wore those adorable soft hats with feathers. Their cunning suits were of brown and white. They were good to look at. Their keen eyes flashed with excitement as they sat on the edges of their seats—not really to hear what was being said there on world affairs but to see how the Senators looked. It was a new experience to them. Suddenly one of them, almost clapping her hands with delight, exclaimed, "Oh, there is Mr. Jesse Jones down there. He is the only Senator whom I recognize. Isn't he grand looking?"

"Where is he?" asked the other.

"The gray-haired man" (pointing to Senator George). "Isn't he just too darlin' for anything?"

In her excitement she gave me a jab in my side, saying, "Isn't Mr. Jones the handsomest man you ever saw in all your life?"

"Yes," I said. "I think so. You know Mr. Jones, of course."

"No, I don't know him personally, but I know all about him. We are from Texas and so is he. They say he sometimes takes Texas gals and movie gals to lunch. I wish to goodness he would take us," she said.

"Maybe I can arrange it for you," I said; "I am Mrs. Jones."

I didn't wait to see the expression on their faces but got up and slipped out as if I might be going to make the date. I glanced back through the swinging door and could see both youngsters. They had fairly wilted. They had slumped in their seats. Their heads were hanging over the backs of their chairs. Not a word was being spoken.

As I walked down the corridor there was a mirror in which I saw myself. I was wearing my old last-summer clothes, old hat, no gloves, and my face was shiny, and a voice inside me whispered, "The goblins will get you if you don't watch out." But they won't, for those kids soon caught on to that joke and have told it many times down in Texas.

It was on a Pennsylvania Avenue car, going west. The bell rang furiously. The stop was so sudden that we were almost thrown from our seats. An elderly man with gray hair, gray mustache—one of the old-fashioned, long variety—wearing a black derby, very round, with narrow brim and wide band; dark blue broadcloth overcoat with velvet collar, and carrying a black cane with gold knob on the end—got up and walked to the door. When the door opened he leaned far out and expectorated a large, in fact, a very large amount of tobacco juice across the street to a grassy spot which his eye had centered upon. That man could have aimed at a spot 20 feet away and hit its center. With the most gracious smile and charming manner, he turned to the motorman, said "I thank you, sir," and went back to his seat. No one spoke a word. There was not a sneer on the face of anyone. He was a gentleman.

Pearl Harbor Report

By Ernest Lindley

Fighting Spirit Proves True

FROM A NEWSPAPERMAN'S viewpoint, Secretary Knox's report was a model of clarity and propriety. It contained all that can be asked at this time by the citizen who puts the security of his country above his own curiosity.

LINDLEY

Neither the Army nor the Navy was on the alert at Hawaii, and the responsibility for this tragic failure will be ascertained by the formal investigation initiated by the President. Unless this court of inquiry results in a whitewash, there will be no need to resort to the clumsier mechanism of a Congressional investigation.

The report on actual naval losses in the initial attack at Hawaii—one battleship, an old target ship, three destroyers and a mine-layer—may be accepted as accurate. However, Knox said "lost," not "sunk." The battleship Oklahoma and perhaps other ships were sunk, but in the shallow waters of Pearl Harbor, from which they can be raised and reconditioned. Naturally, details as to sinkings and damage, other than vessels lost outright, were withheld, since all such information is of high value to the Japanese.

There is good reason to think, moreover, that a substantial part of the Pacific fleet was not in Pearl Harbor when the attack came. In addition to the battleships, aircraft carriers, cruisers and destroyers which had been detached for Atlantic service, other vessels were absent on special missions, which probably included the convoying of reinforcements to the Philippines. Our strategy in the Pacific as war approached was chiefly defensive, except as the air arm might prove able to reach out to Japan. This was determined finally when the main battle fleet was divided to strengthen our naval forces in the Atlantic. The division was a heresy bitterly opposed by apostles of the classical naval school, which envisaged our fleet rushing across the Pacific to seek out and engage the Japanese battle fleet in a single decisive action. This school had to bow to a more modern school which placed greater weight on air power and, above all, recognized the danger of sending a battle fleet into an area dominated by the land-based aviation of the enemy. Considering what happened at Pearl Harbor, we can be thankful that the entire battle fleet was not there when the Japs attacked.

NEITHER important naval repair installations nor oil depots were damaged, Knox reported. This is decidedly good news. The severe losses to Army planes can be quickly replaced—and, for the most part, have been replaced already. Fortunately, the Army losses were much heavier in planes than in pilots and ground crews.

The most significant part of Knox's report was summed up in a sentence: "Men fought with the cool confidence that comes from complete indoctrination for battle." We expected presence of mind, precision, and courage from the Navy. All those qualities, and more, were there.

THE FIRST DAYS of the war have revealed in the Navy, the Marine Corps, and the Army (including the Filipinos) in our distant outposts, the superb characteristics which mark fighting peoples. These characteristics appear also on the home front: in the dry-eyed courage of the relatives of the dead, in the rush of young men to enlist in the most dangerous services, and in the anger and resolution of the ordinary citizen. For a generation we may have sunk into soft habits, but as a Nation we are not soft. The European-minded commentators who have been comparing the United States to France and other countries torn by dissensions and weakened by decay, must now eat their words.

Dunkerque cut away the decadent qualities of the British and revealed the bone of grit and stamina. The Japanese onslaught has done more for us, for by nature—perhaps due to a sunnier climate—we are more given to anger and great surges of energy. And our collective power is many times that of the British.

THE AMERICAN MORALE problem has been solved by the Axis. But morale alone will not win wars. The fine-edged training which has been given to the Navy, the Marine Corps, Army Air Force and Regular Army, must be given to the National Guard and the new selectee divisions. The "cool confidence that comes from complete indoctrination for battle" must be supported by a superior flow of weapons of superior quality. For troops, business men, labor, and all other citizens, the mollycoddling days are gone.

All reports received in Washton—from Secretary Knox, from the Philippines, from Wake Island, from all parts of the United States—and the personal observations of the Army and Navy officers here, from the top down, lead to only one conclusion: in fighting spirit this generation of Americans compares favorably with its forebears. This, with our industrial capacity, technical excellence, weight of numbers, and proven allies, is enough.

Fair Enough

Labor Legislation

THE BRITISH seem to have preserved their freedom of debate and discussion under very dangerous conditions in the face of the enemy without impairing their unity. Their criminal courts still operate and their jailers continue to do business at their old stands.

I wonder if we will do the same, because we are more emotional than the British and some of the dispute which would carry over into the period of actual war as unfinished business have been conducted in a very angry spirit. We certainly were not united in our opinion of the Wagner Act and the closed shop a week ago when Japan attacked Pearl Harbor and the attack cannot be said to have settled the issues, which were fundamental questions of American freedom. If they are to be regarded as finally settled by this means then that must mean that they have been settled in favor of a very few professional union politicians and the few true-believing but mistaken union members, a scant five million of them, who support these men.

In that case these few politicians and this tiny following of actual toilers will have imposed the will of a small minority on a Nation of 130,000,000 people. This feat would be almost identical with that which often occurs in a store or plant which is in process of being "organized" by professional unioneers, many of whom are mere bounty-hunters, paid by the scalp, so to speak, so much for every member who is induced or compelled to join. In the store, or plant, a minority are "worked on" by the organizer and presently apply for recognition as a bargaining agency.

JUST as the two big national organizations now claim membership of ten millions, which is a false figure, the store or shop minority may exaggerate its strength but, regardless of its inferiority in numbers, may strike the enterprise to compel the majority to join and, by conspiracy with other unions, prevent the execution of the company's business. So the nonjoiners soon face the alternative of joining or losing their jobs and not only that but, having joined, they must continue in good standing in the union, as long as they live.

I have studied the Wagner Act, much other legislation and many court decisions and I am convinced that if the system which has been imposed by this movement is made permanent, we shall emerge from this war on Hitlerism with a labor system differing from Hitler's own only in trivial details. Yet, from the other side of the argument the answer is never one of intelligence or reason but invariably a cry of "antilabor" or "labor baiter" and this from adherents of organizations who have, themselves, in their union fights, condemned their opponents as dictators, tricksters and unconscionable mercenaries.

I NOTE also that editorial writers, commentators and orators who intend to take an objective view of this dispute constantly refer to these two big organizations as "labor," although they know the politics of the union and admit informally that these groups embrace only a small fraction of all labor in the country and include millions of unwilling, captive members brought in in chains with a price on their heads, duly collected by the man-hunters.

The pending Smith Bill is not a remedy at all, for it evades the fundamental question of the citizen's right to work and deals excitedly with strikes in the war industries. But this and similar proposals all dealing with war-industry strikes have been allowed to obscure the threat, indeed the establishment already, of dictatorial political controls over American workers which, after the war, would impose the first and most binding element of Hitlerism.

To the sincerity of genuine liberals and many union bosses I address no challenge, but their power of analysis, their foresight and their intelligence I seriously doubt. They are often abusive in debate and always intolerant and they will now add to the old cry of "antilabor" the new taunt of "disputer." But if their program becomes the permanent way the American Republic will become something else wherein the rights and dignity of human personality mentioned by Frances Perkins will be abolished in the name of freedom.

Controlling Prices

By Mark Sullivan.

To Defend Defense Bonds

OF THE ADJUSTMENTS we all make, many of them not yet realized, one of the most necessary is submission to price-control. By recent developments, including the coming of actual war, price control is made more essential, more immediately urgent, and more likely. Indeed it is now practically certain we shall have it, and soon.

One resistance to price-control came from wage-earners, or persons purporting to speak for them. This has been a serious impediment, because real price control was impossible, if wage-rates were to be left subject to increasing rises, by pressure of strikes or otherwise. Now, however, a conference of labor and industrial leaders, called by the President, is expected to set up a formula for stabilizing labor relations, for the duration of the war. Presumably, the stabilization will include wage rates. If this is done, it will remove the necessity for including wage rates under a general price control law. If the industry-labor conference does not accomplish this, then wage rates must be included in any price-control bill that is effective—and an effective one is imperative.

SULLIVAN

Practically all the resistance to price control has been group resistance, like this from wage earners, and also that from farmers. Group after group shied away from price control, because they were reluctant to give up possible increases in the price of what they had to sell, including labor; or they feared that other groups might get price increases, or they feared being left behind in a general price rise. That psychology of group resistance would be fatal. If not checked, it will lead to competitive price raising by groups, ending in certain disaster.

ON THE OTHER HAND, the reason in favor of price control is universal; it applies to every group, to practically every individual. This reason can be illustrated by a thing not always thought of in this connection—defense bonds. The defense bonds are being bought by everybody, in a fine spirit of patriotism. If there were any possibility of any development that might injure the essential value of defense bonds, that would be one of the serious calamities of war. And the essential value of defense bonds could be injured by lack of price control. To protect the value of defense bonds is symbolically the largest reason for price control.

Defense bonds will always be worth, in money, what the public pays for them. If a citizen buys a defense bond for $18.75 he can always turn it in to the Treasury and get back his $18.75 (plus, in future years, some interest). Nevertheless, unless we have price control, it is possible for the buyer of defense bonds to suffer detriment. The detriment may take place in the form of reduced purchasing power. The $18.75 which he pays now would not buy as much goods when he gets the money back. The dollars will always remain the same, but the things he can buy with his dollars could become less. This reduction in purchasing power is already taking place—Price Administrator Leon Henderson says it is taking place at the rate of 1½ per cent a month. This just must not be allowed to go on. It can be prevented by price control.

The duty is to defend the defense bonds. Defense of the defense bonds is at once national patriotism and individual self-interest. The wage earner, reluctant to give up the possibility of increase in his wage rate, must realize that he is also, in most cases, a purchaser of defense bonds. What he would gain through increase in his wage rate, he would lose in reduction of the essential value of his defense bond (and also, of course, in the general reduction of the purchasing power of money).

WHAT IS TRUE of the wage earner is true also of the farmer, of every class. All would suffer detriment, not only in respect to defense bonds but also in respect to life insurance, and in many other forms. Defense of the defense bonds is a large basis for national unity, based on self-interest as well as patriotism.

Also, price control would avert another possible danger—hoarding, followed by rationing, particularly of food. The average person, if he hoards at all, does so, not so much through fear of scarcity, as through fear of higher prices later on. This fear, price control can dissipate. There is no real likelihood of scarcity of food in America, and hence no likely necessity for rationing. That experience of other nations at war, such as England, we can escape. Scarcity might arise out of hoarding, but the motive for hoarding can be averted by price control.

As to articles other than food, such as raw materials for manufacturing, it may be desirable to have both price control and rationing. But as to food and perhaps clothing, the dangers of scarcity, hoarding and rationing can all be averted by sound price-control.

What is said here is about price control in principle. As to the particular form of the bill, there is not space here to make refinements. On the broad subject, there have been abundant and thorough hearings by committees of Congress.

Strategic Picture

By Barnet Nover

No Cause For Complacence

BEFORE the treacherous Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor the prevailing mood of the American people regarding the prospects of victory in a Pacific war was one of confidence to the point of complacence. It was assumed that we and our allies in the Far East would be able to make short work of the enemy.

NOVER

Then came Pearl Harbor, a simultaneous Japanese assault on Thailand, Guam, Wake and Midway Islands, Hongkong, the Philippines, Malaya and Burma. Our mood underwent a sudden and drastic change. The new mood was not one of defeatism. No American doubted for a moment that the Japanese would ultimately be worsted. But the hope of a speedy victory was shattered. The strength, the striking power and the tactical skill of the enemy, it became apparent, had been underestimated.

THE MOOD changed again during the second week of the Pacific war. Confidence returned. For this a succession of encouraging developments was responsible. First came the report of the sinking of two Japanese capital ships, one of them as the result of a hit by an heroic Army flier, Capt. Colin Kelly. Then came the inspiring news that a handful of Marines on Wake and Midway Islands had beaten back many attacks and, in the face of fierce odds, continued to fight on.

Further encouragement was to be found in the circumstance that many Japanese attempts to establish a firm foothold on the island of Luzon had been driven back with great losses and that the few places where the invaders had managed to land in the Philippines were remote from Manila and held only precariously. When Secretary Knox returned from Honolulu and made known the details of the losses we had suffered in the December 7 assault on Pearl Harbor, Americans learned that the dimensions of that catastrophe had fortunately been far more limited than was at first believed.

IT MUST not be assumed from these favorable developments, however, that the tide of conflict in the Pacific has turned or is about to turn. That is still a long way off. Much bad news is still in the offing.

So far the initiative has remained almost entirely with the Japanese. The Allies have everywhere remained on the defensive. They would, no doubt, have preferred to have it otherwise. They have no choice. The British in Malaya, Burma and Hongkong, the Americans in the Philippines and at Pearl Harbor have not been able to carry the war to the enemy because they have been too busy resisting Japanese assaults. And while the defenders have had the upper hand in some places, such as the Philippines, they have not done so well in other places, notably Hongkong and Malaya.

AT HONGKONG a Japanese assault speedily drove the British from the Chinese mainland at Kowloon to the rocky island fortress they are now desperately defending. How long they can continue to hold out is problematical. Already the British government is preparing its people for the ultimate loss of Hongkong. But then the British never expected to carry out more than a delaying action in that sector. And the longer they hold out at Hongkong the more of a crimp they will put into the Japanese time-table.

In this connection it is sad to recall how long it was after the Japanese attack on China before anything but the merest dribble of aid began to reach the Chinese armies from America and Great Britain. Had a large air force and considerable quantities of equipment reached Chiang Kai-shek in the days before the Pacific conflict began, the Chinese now attempting to drive a wedge into the Japanese lines at Kowloon might have a better chance of succeeding than appears to be the case. Again it is the old story of too late and too little.

THE MOST serious danger confronting the Allies is the one embodied in the Japanese drive south from Thailand to Singapore. Thailand's resistance was, at most, perfunctory and soon after the Bangkok government raised the white flag the Thai government allied itself with the conqueror. Thailand's military and air bases are now being used for the assault on Malaya as well as for a drive on Burma.

The distance between the southernmost points reached by the Japanese in Malaya and the great naval base and fortress of Singapore is still considerable—over 400 miles. But the danger to Singapore is not to be minimized on that account. The loss of the Prince of Wales and the Repulse was a terrific blow to the British. It upset the naval balance of power in southeastern Asia and made it possible for the Japanese to accelerate their offensive in Malaya.

The results are now apparent. Once Hongkong falls the Japanese might couple their drive on Singapore from the land side by an assault on Singapore from the sea. The only thing that would prevent such a development would be the dispatch of a sufficient Allied fleet to the British naval base to make Japanese naval operations in that area very costly, and a considerable strengthening of American bomber strength in the Philippines. From the latter vantage point the Japanese supply route as well as Japanese bases in Formosa and Indo-China could be subjected to attacks from the air.

IN THE MEANTIME the still obscure Japanese movements in the direction of Burma are worth watching. If Burma is conquered the last remaining supply route to the armies of Free China would be cut off and Chinese fighting power would be considerably reduced. The Allies must not allow that to happen.

The Chinese have remained in the field for more than four and a half years. They continue to immobilize a very large Japanese force. At almost any cost the Burma Road must be kept open. Next to the capture of Singapore and the acquisition of the oil fields of the Netherlands Indies, the cutting of the Burma Road and the isolation of the Chinese forces is a major Japanese objective. So while we have reason to be gratified by the successful defense of the Philippines and the blows dealt to the Japanese there and elsewhere we must not close our eyes to the dark spots in the Pacific picture, in particular the present drive on Singapore and the prospective drive on the Burma Road.

People Of Rumania Wanted No War With U.S., Says Davila

Following is a statement by Charles A. Davila, former Rumanian Minister to the United States:

The Rumanian dictatorial regime, based on totalitarian fascist principles, to which the preceding royal dictatorship, based on totalitarian fascist principles, had transferred its dictatorial powers on the sixth of September, 1940, has declared war on the United States of America. In this declaration of war the Rumanian people took no part.

Since the thirteenth of February, 1938, when it was robbed of its constitutional rights, the Rumanian people never had any possibility of expressing its will. In a recent bulletin of the British Information Ministry, Sir Reginald Hoare, the last British minister in Rumania, stated his opinion that 80 per cent of the Rumanian people are opposed to Nazi Germany. As a matter of fact, those 80 per cent, if not more, have been, and still are the followers of the Rumanian democratic movement. This situation is known also in the United States through direct information, based on reliable documents.

Under these circumstances it is my duty to state, in my quality of authorized representative of the Rumanian democracy, that the Rumanian people cannot be made responsible for this declaration of war: Rumania today is not a sovereign country; its present regime is nothing else than a puppet-government of Nazi Germany. It is significant that three days before the Rumanian declaration of war was presented to the American Minister in Bucharest, Berlin had already announced Gen. Antonescu's decision, which fact was tantamount to telling the Rumanian "Conducator:" "You shall know that you are now in a state of war with the United States." The same procedure was used against the other two reactionary regimes of Horthy of Hungary and Boris of Bulgaria. As could be expected, all these three regimes, organically attracted by Nazi Germany, followed suit, thus ignoring the feelings of their own people and endangering their future in a war that cannot be lost by the Anglo-Saxon democracies and their Allies.

Asks Moral Support

In this plight of my people, I have no right to appeal to the 400 thousand Americans of Rumanian origin for their direct support. The fact that the United States and Rumania fought together in the last war against Germany and her satellites; the fact that the Rumanian people had, like other peoples, its own heroes in the American wars like Capt. Pomut, commander of an Iowa regiment, gives me no right to ask American citizens to confuse their loyalty to the United States with their sentimental attachment to their country of origin. But I am certain that, knowing that the overwhelming majority of the Rumanian people prays for the victory of the Anglo-Saxon powers fighting for the liberty of the whole world, all Rumanian-American organizations will give us, the Free-Rumanian movement formed by Rumanian democrats abroad, all their moral support.

I can assert today that, had the Rumanian democracy not been suppressed, my country would have done her duty in the common struggle against totalitarian imperialism. In fact, it was the Rumanian democrats who prevented Gen. Antonescu's participation in the Axis aggression against Yugoslavia, in which unfortunately other neighbors participated; likewise the Rumanian democrats opposed openly the continuation of the war on Germany's side, once Bessarabia had been retaken, and many of them were interned in concentration camps for their courageous stand. For the Rumanian people the declaration of war against the United States represents a new tragedy.

Great Responsibility

My task and that of the Rumanians who will help me will be similar, if not equal, to that of the various Governments in exile whose countries have been occupied by the Axis powers. We shall endeavor to get the support of the American and British public for the Rumanian people informed of the never stopped fighting, against great odds, for the triumph of democracy everywhere. Through broadcasts we shall keep the Rumanian people informed of the real developments of the war and we shall direct them how to help in the common struggle. I do not doubt that, given their knowledge that we actually represent Rumanian democracy, they will follow our advice whenever a favorable opportunity should arise.

We are fully aware of the great responsibility which has been put upon us. In our efforts to secure a future of freedom for a united Rumanian people we shall never forget our duty towards all the countries which are sacrificing everything for the liberty of the whole world.

The Gallup Poll

Public Had Expected War With Germany For 18 Months, Past Polls of Opinion Show

By Dr. George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Dec. 16.—Declaration of war between the United States and Germany and Italy came as no great surprise to the American people. Although the public had hoped to avoid war with Germany and had at no time favored taking the initiative in carrying the war to the Nazis, nevertheless as early as 18 months ago a majority of voters were reconciled to war and believed that hostilities against Germany were bound to come sooner or later.

Moreover, after the invasion and conquest of France, a steadily rising majority believed that it was more important that Germany be defeated than that the United States stay out of war.

Those are the salient facts concerning American public sentiment as revealed in numerous surveys by the American Institute of Public Opinion over the last four years or more.

Even before Germany went to war against England and France in 1939, the American public had decided that, while it did not favor an all-out shooting war against the dictator powers, it should take all possible steps short of war to bring about the defeat of Hitler. The American attitude was neither wholly isolationist nor wholly interventionist; it was predominantly an attitude of self-defense, based on the conception that England was the first line of defense. Aid to Britain was thoroughly approved by the public, not in a spirit of offense or of carrying the war to Hitler, but purely as a measure of defense.

War Not Wanted

On the isolationist side stood the fact that, up to the sudden and unprovoked Japanese attack on Hawaii, the great majority of voters were opposed to all-out participation in a shooting war. Up to last week, the Institute had undertaken many public opinion surveys on the question, "Should we enter the European war now?" The latest polls on that issue before war began found only one person in every five, on the average, favoring war, and earlier studies had shown virtually the same result.

Yet the very same people who voted against carrying the war to Hitler nevertheless favored a whole series of steps which they conceived to be in the interests of national defense and of keeping Hitler away from American shores. The majority favored as polls showed, the lease-lend act, the occupation of Iceland, the revision of the Neutrality Law, the Navy shoot at sight policy and other measures of a similar character taken by the Administration.

Public thinking had been directed more consistently toward Germany than toward Japan, for the public had believed all along that Germany was the greater threat. Hence more voters expected war with Germany than with Japan. While 52 per cent thought, in early December, that we would go to war against Japan in the near future, 85 per cent thought, in November, that we would go to war against Germany sooner or later. Expectancy of war with Germany dates back to May, 1940, when 62 per cent of voters believed it would come.

At the outbreak of the European war in 1939, the American public was faced with a choice between two evils. On the one hand it did not want to go to war, but on the other hand it did not want Hitler to win.

In the early days of the conflict, polls showed quite clearly that fear of war was the more dominant in the public mind. The majority felt that staying out of war was more important than aiding Britain at the risk of war.

Toward the end of 1940, however, strictly isolationist sentiment began to decline. By December, 60 per cent thought that contributing to the defense of Hitler was more important to the United States than staying out of war.

The trend since that time follows:

"Which of these two things do you think is the more important—that this country keep out of war, or that Germany be defeated?"

	Defeat Germany	Stay Out
December, 1940	60%	40%
January, 1941	68	32
April	67	33
May	62	38
October	70	30
November	68	32
December (before war)	68	32

Some Nice Skylarking, Along About New Year's

'Arise, My Love' Stars Repeat in 'Skylark;' That Book Drive Necessitates Use of Truck; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

IT IS ONE OF THE AXIOMS of sport, as I seem to remember it, not to break up a winning team. Paramount, being good sports, evidently feel that way about it.

That, no doubt, is why Claudette Colbert, Ray Milland and Walter Abel are cast in the costeller and one of the leading male roles, in the order named, in the screen version of "Skylark," previewed yesterday by a quorum of the guys and gals of the newsprints. Paramount probably had in mind the hit they made in "Arise, My Love," and so did we as their new picture went gayly along. Paramount was right. The three of them have pretty thoroughly gone and done it again.

CLAUDETTE COLBERT

There is, of course, scant ground for comparison of "Skylark" with "Arise, My Love." Except that both are more or less frivolous love comedies, there is little enough resemblance between them—no common reaction of carefree young people to the sudden impact of war or any of that sort of thing. "Skylark" takes itself the less seriously of the two and perhaps for that reason will be deemed by many better entertainment than its predecessor—especially with Brian Aherne, Binnie Barnes, Mona Barrie and Ernest Cossart to provide the fillip to a gallery of splendid supporting roles.

At any rate, this picturization of the book and play by Samson Raphaelson, produced on the stage by John Golden with Gertrude Lawrence as star, will be found a nice, lively, domestic fuss—and I didn't say farce—when it comes along to the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater for New Year's week.

And in keeping with the spirit of the times—to pick up a paragraph that was nudged out of yesterday's paper—Managing Director Gene Ford, of the Capitol, is churning up an "A. B. C. D. Revue," a stage presentation in four scenes, for the week of January 15. The scenes—and what a smart guesser you turned out to be—will be American, British, Chinese and Dutch and it is just barely possible a dash of patriotic zeal will find its way into them somewhere, somehow. This stage production will antedate Artie Shaw and His Orchestra, now set back to the week of January 22.

Still at It on the Other Side

With characteristic fidelity to a self-imposed obligation, Leonard Rooke, the indefatigable stentor of the D'Oyly Carte Opera Company, keeps sending along the bulletins reciting the engagements of that sturdy organization in its native England. With perfect timing, the most recent one arrived yesterday morning, hot on the heels of the Shuberts' Gilbert & Sullivan Opera Co., at the National. If it is of any interest to the E Street visitors, the D'Oyly Carters were busy in Birmingham, England, the week of December 1 to 6, presenting "Iolanthe," "Patience," "The Mikado" and "The Gondoliers." Not that it matters. Just a coincidence.

Anyone still stuck with the gift problem and desirous of presenting a volume of light literary delight to any of his friends who can read, could do worse than pounce upon Peggy Wood's new autobiographical frolic, which she has slyly called, "How Young You Look." The only warning would be not to pick up this book unless you are prepared to finish it before the blackout. It's nothing you'll want to lay aside once you've started it. Along with Cornelia Otis Skinner, Miss Wood is one of the theater's glibbest and gayest phrase-makers. And besides that, she is wittily and wonderfully frank about why and how an artiste is made. They are not, it seems, born, as the popular fallacy would have it. It's nice, though, that Peggy Wood was—and boundless thanks to her, Jean Dalrymple and Farrar & Rinehart for my copy.

Dots and Dashes

Such widespread interest has been evinced in the drive for books for soldiers in the training camps, inaugurated by Loew's Palace Theater in conjunction with the premiere of "The Corsican Brothers"—and so little in the fact that they may be used as tickets of admission at the Palace tomorrow between the hours of 11 a. m. and 1 p. m.—that an Army truck has been commandeered to make collections . . . All you have to do is phone the Loew management where you wish it to call . . . And another thing. Loew's Capitol is in the market for a Santa Claus who can talk through a microphone and that miniature in the lobby to juvenile patrons these next coupla weeks . . . For pay . . . In addition to that $50,000 to the American Red Cross, James G. Blaine, chairman of the board of United China Relief, has acknowledged to Will H. Hays receipt of a check for $15,000 representing a further part of the profits piled up by "Land of Liberty," the film that committee wanted to condemn as pernicious "propaganda" . . . Denis E. Connell will be playing Artaban, the Median, for the twelfth season when "The Other Wise Man" opens in Luther Place Memorial Church on Sunday, December 28 . . . The Legion of Decency, after review of the revised version, has lifted the ban on Garbo's "Two-Faced Woman" and expressed its appreciation to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for its cooperation.

Parliament-satirizing "Iolanthe" was last night's offering of the Gilbert and Sullivan Opera Company at the National Theater. It was the only performance of the work in the newly organized group's week on E Street.

Principals in the political barb of the early 1880s included Florenz Ames, as the harried Lord Chancellor; Margaret Roy, as the forsaken lady of the title; Bertram Peacock, as her son Strephon, and Kathleen Roche, as the ward Phyllis. Robert Pitkin and Morton Bowe were the Lords Mountararat and Tolloller and John Hendricks was the philosophically lonely Private Willis. Helen Lanvin, as the Queen, Mary Roche, Grace Garnett and Marie Valdez were the other principals.

Today "The Pirates of Penzance" will be played at both the afternoon and evening performances. Tomorrow and Friday evenings the company will present the double bill of "Trial by Jury" and "H. M. S. Pinafore," and at both matinee and evening performances Saturday will repeat its opening offering, "The Mikado."

For years we've heard actors proclaim they wouldn't play this or that part because it might ruin their career. Many of them insisted and got permission to okay their stories, and lots of those who did, now wish they hadn't. I still maintain that most of our actors don't know when a role's good or bad for them. They're too busy playing their own parts to see the picture as a whole. Sam Goldwyn told me the other day that Ginger Rogers turned down the part Barbara Stanwyck made so outstanding in "Ball of Fire." Ginger didn't want to play in a picture with gangsters; yet she turns right around and plays one of the toughest murderesses of the year, "Roxie Hart." Sam was months persuading Gary Cooper that "Sergt. York" was the very thing the doctor ordered. Even Walter Brennan thought his part in "Rise and Shine" would just about finish him off. And after he saw it on the screen, he came and thanked Sam for persuading him to do it. I don't mean our people should be mollycoddles and do things against their will, but they should listen to men who back their own opinions with their own cash.

BARBARA STANWYCK

Eddie Arnold's on the board of practically everything, from the Screen Actors' Guild to the symphony orchestra. But when they wanted him on the board of education, Eddie chuckled, "I know when I've met my Waterloo. I'll just stick to the jobs I know something about."

Metro's talking about making "Svengali" with John Carradine in the old Barrymore role and Rise Stevens as his leading lady. Not bad casting . . . Paul Robeson, who made such a hit in England, is trying to get over here to do war benefits.

Nunnally Johnson almost gave Will Hays a heart attack when he sent over the script of "Roxie Hart" bearing this dedication on the front page: "To all the beautiful murderesses in our country."

Charles Laughton and Jon Hall have made a request of R. K. O. Both have a great many fans in Tahiti, Laughton because of "The Beachcomber," and Hall since "Hurricane," but Tahitians never get a chance to see pictures until they're very old. So the boys have asked that "Tuttles of Tahiti" be sent over there soon as it's completed.

Our first war casualty happened to "For Whom the Bell Tolls." Director Sam Wood took his technicians to the High Sierras for battle scenes. Final knockout blow from the air was to be filmed, and weatherman told them a terrific snowstorm was en route, so they worked against time. Everything had been planned to a gnat's eyelash, and the day the battle from the skies was to be played, all our planes were grounded.

Albert Einstein's 11-year-old grandson, Hadi, already has become proficient in the use of American phrases. When Hadi was asked whether he'd like to be an educated man, like his grandfather, the boy replied: "No, by golly. I hate arithmetic. Grandpa should learn how to speak slang, instead of messin' around with arithmetic—by jiminy" . . . Dr. Einstein turned to a friend and confessed: "You know that languages always have been by weakness. What do those words mean—'golly,' 'jiminy,' 'messin' around?'" . . . "That's slang," he was told. After Fifty Years of Trouping Hugh Herbert Hasn't Lost Face

By Frederick C. Othman
United Press Hollywood Correspondent

Hollywood, Dec. 16.—Fifty years ago last Friday the great actor, Maurice Barrymore, invaded hell's kitchen in New York looking for a dirty-faced urchin to take a part in "Roaring Dick and Co.," the mightiest drama of 1891.

Upon the sidewalk Barrymore spied a round-faced, blue-eyed, 4-year-old toddler, who said his name was "Hughie."

"Hughie what?" demanded Barrymore.

"Hughie Herbert," replied the youngster.

"And he hired me for 50 cents a performance," Herbert said this afternoon, "and I can tell you that 50 cents a day meant a lot to the Herberts. My father was a plasterer, when he could find work, which was not too often, and in 1891 in hell's kitchen a 50-cent piece looked as big as the moon."

The career of Hugh Herbert has been identified with the theater ever since and an interesting career it has been. He took time out on a universal sound stage to tell about it, while the juicers worried with a complicated gadget that lit a series of bulbs for a gag in a film called "You're Telling Me."

The Herbert has had his ups and his downs and his big moments and the biggest of all came the other day when a fellow actor asked him to look at a shooting script.

Is A One-Man Category

"I was reading along," Herbert said, "about the action and the dialogue and pretty soon I came to a line which said: 'At this juncture we cut to a man with a hot water bottle for a face; a Hugh Herbert type.'"

That set Herbert back on his heels. It was an honor at that. He is unique. There is no other actor with the eyes of a frightened rabbit, the hands of a ZaSu Pitts, and the woo-woo of a hungry owl. These things are his stock in trade, his exclusive stock, and they have earned him a fortune.

Life was tougher in the earlier days. Between apasmodic sieges of schooling, Herbert peddled newspapers, bell-hopped, and functioned as usher in a neighborhood stock theater.

"And then I remember the very first movie theater that the Loews ever opened," he said. "They advertised talking pictures. And this is what they did: They'd take a movie, cut out all the subtitles, and hand them to a Miss Chase and me. We'd study these titles. Then we'd sit down in front and watch the picture and we'd speak all the lines. Miss Chase would take the women's dialogue. I'd take the men's."

"It was good experience. Before I was through I could speak about any dialect there was."

Next he went into vaudeville.

In 1926 Warner Brothers called him west to write movie adaptations of playlets he'd used in big-time vaudeville. Hollywood used him as writer and director exclusively. He did much of the story for "The Lights of New York," the first talking picture. Then he wrote "The Great Garbo" for Eric von Stroheim and Betty Compson.

"And one day I found myself at a desk at R-K-O writing dialogue for a western which was on location in Montana," he said. "We'd send the script up as we wrote it. Ray Hatton was playing a tramp and he suddenly became ill and the director wired in for me. I don't know yet why he asked for me, but he did, and I played opposite Raymond Walburn in 'Danger Lights.'

"When I got back to Hollywood, the head of the writing department announced that I was fired. He said that henceforth I would function as an actor."

ENDS TODAY—GARBO IN "TWO FACED WOMAN"

'Dumbo' Starts Holiday Bills Rolling Today

RKO-Keith's

"DUMBO." Walt Disney's rare Christmas treat reveals the master of fantasy in the mood which brought forth "Snow White" and his earlier triumphs. "Dumbo" is the little elephant whose big ears make his life a series of pathetic, exciting and hilarious adventures. To compensate for "Dumbo's" insistent silence, there's a circus mouse, Timothy, who is overly voluble. Also on Keith's screen is the new "March of Time" release devoted to "Our America at War." Opens this morning.

Palace

"THE CORSICAN BROTHERS." Douglas Fairbanks, jr., plays the dual title role in this unusual yarn by Alexander Dumas, receiving its premiere engagement with this run. The story concerns twins, separated at birth, but bound throughout their lives by an emotional bond so that the feelings of one were instantly felt by the other. Ruth Warwick, Akim Tamiroff, J. Carrol Naish, H. B. Warner, Henry Wilcoxon, John Emery, Gloria Holden and Veda Ann Borg head the supporting company. Opens tomorrow morning.

Earle

"NEW YORK TOWN." Fred MacMurray, Mary Martin and Robert Preston play the leads in this comedy of unsophisticated folk in Manhattan. MacMurray acts a sidewalk photographer, Miss Martin a small-town girl he befriends and Akim Tamiroff a refugee painter. Lynne Overman, Eric Blore, Cecil Kellaway and Fuzzy Knight are featured. Billy De Wolfe, a meteoric comedian whose rise began in Radio City's Rainbow Room, headlines the stage revue which further offers Evelyn Farney; Whitey and Ed Ford; Eddie Sachs, the Redskins' baton swirler, and the Roxyettes. Mogul remains for another week. Opens Friday morning.

Capitol

"SWAMP WATER." Adapted by prize-winner Dudley Nichols from the Saturday Evening Post feature, this new film's setting is a moribund Georgia swamp, in which a young man and his dog find a fugitive who escaped jail six years previously after being convicted of a murder of which he was innocent. Walter Brennan, Walter Huston, Dana Andrews, Anne Baxter, Virginia Gilmore and John Carradine are featured. Bob Evans, the ventriloquist, heads the stage revue, with Helen Denizon, the Herzogs, Ted Lester and the Rhythm Rockets. Opens tomorrow morning.

Metropolitan

"THE BODY DISAPPEARS." This new mystery-comedy costars Jeffrey Lynn and Jane Wyman, telling of a scientist who is working on one of those formulas that turns into a half-baked disappearing drug. A mental hospital provides some of the setting. Supporting the stars are Herbert Anderson, Marguerite Chapman, Craig Stevens, Willie Best, Ivan Simpson and De Wolf Hopper. Opens Friday morning.

Columbia

"SHADOW OF THE THIN MAN." The William Powell-Myrna Loy continuation of their Mr. and Mrs. Nick Charles series continues into an extended re-run on F Street. A wrestling match, a baby and the inevitable Asta play important parts in their adventures.

Little

"LOST HORIZON." The well-loved James Hilton story returns with Ronald Colman playing the dreamer who found a better world and then lost it. Frank Capra directed this feature of some years ago, with Sam Jaffee, Margo, Isabel Jewell and John Howard in the featured roles. Opens this morning.

Pix

"SCARFACE." The first and often imitated gangster shocker continues through the balance of the week instead of giving way to an earlier announced revival. Paul Muni and George Raft have the leading assignments.

Trans-Lux

"ARMY CHAMPIONS." Army guns in action, as reported by Pete Smith, form the central short subject at the newsreel house. Other supplementary features include "A City Within a City," devoted to Radio City; "Hobbies," a "Passing Parade" feature; "Kaltenborn Edits the News" and "The Fox and the Grapes." Opens Friday morning.

Gayety

"LAFFS AND GALS." Rose La Rose arrives in the Capital for the first time this season as the star of this new burlesque offering opening Sunday afternoon. Eddie Lloyd and Irving Benson handle the chief comedy assignments, with Joan Collette, Mitzi Montay, Doris Karr, Harry Ryon and Bogash and Bardine in the other leading spots. Midnight performances every Saturday.

Mrs. Turover Speaks To Hadassah Chapter

In spite of the upheaval in Europe, groups of Jewish children are still going from Russia by way of Turkey to refuge in Palestine, Mrs. Raphael Turover told the Washington Chapter of Hadassah at its meeting yesterday.

Hadassah is now negotiating to move a group of Jewish children, stranded in southern France, to Palestine, said Mrs. Turover, who is a member of the national board and a former president of the local chapter. She spoke at the meeting at the Jewish Community Center.

Mrs. Jacob Ehrlich, who formerly lived in Prague, Vienna, and Palestine, traced the development of the Youth Aliyah movement, which arranges for the transportation, resettlement and training of Jewish young people coming from Europe to Palestine.

The Jews have suffered so cruelly that they can appreciate what the Bill of Rights means, Mrs. Ehrlich said.

Mrs. Louis Brandeis, widow of the Supreme Court Justice, sent a gift to the Youth Aliyah movement with a letter which Mrs. Turover read yesterday.

Mrs. Turover stressed that although the organization's first duty now is to America in the war effort, it would continue to support its work in Palestine.

At a defense stamps and bonds booth, $1300 worth was sold before the meeting started. Mrs. Henry Gichner, the chapter's chairman of American affairs, was in charge of the booth.

Registration of members for civilian defense tasks was conducted in connection with the meeting.

Mrs. Isadore Breslau, president of the chapter, presided.

Three Clubs Plan Holiday Parties at Y. W.

Christmas will be celebrated in pageant and song at the Y. W. C. A. this week when three clubs meet for parties.

"The Spirit of Christmas," a pageant depicting Christmas in other lands, will be presented at the dinner meeting of the Xenos Club tonight at 6 o'clock. Eleanor Wagar, chairman of the program, will be the narrator. Members of the cast are Veva Clausen, Elizabeth Ledbetter, Bobbe Costa, Josephine Naylor, and Frances Cox. Christmas carols will be sung by the music group of the club.

Ten children from the Georgetown Children's House will be entertained with games, songs and gifts by the All States Club tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock.

At 6:30 the club members will meet for Christmas dinner, to be followed by a music and worship service under the leadership of Ruth Lifgren. Edith Rogers, chairman of the social service committee, is in charge of the children's program in the afternoon.

Tomorrow evening the Blue Triangle Club will meet for dinner, after which the pageant, "Star Above the Clouds," which was written last year by Mrs. Lawrence Shepard, who is coming to the Washington Y. W. C. A. as general secretary January 1, will be presented by club members. Frances Hall will be narrator, and in the cast are Phyllis Chu, Helen Sunday, Esther Swenson, Nadja Chlepner, and Letty Moabito. The Elizabeth Somers Glee Club will provide special music for the tableaux.

Christmas Meeting Set by Chevy Chase Junior Women

The Junior Woman's Club of Chevy Chase, Md., will hold its Christmas meeting tomorrow at 8 p. m. at the clubhouse. As in the past, members will fill Christmas stockings, which will be turned over to the Montgomery County Welfare Board.

Mrs. B. Peyton Whalen, of Bethesda, chairman of the woman's division of the Montgomery Council on Defense, will be the guest speaker, discussing the importance of a conservation program.

The drama section, under the direction of Mrs. Robert Dunlop, will present a one-act play, "All's Fair," by Angela McDermott. The cast includes Miss Violent Karchem, Miss Elizabeth Whiele, Miss Sally McCormick and Miss Ann Burke.

The musical program will include songs by Lawrence Troth, baritone; a duet by the Misses Erroll and Elaine Essex, and Christmas carols by the club.

Christmas Party At D. A. R. Today

The clerical staff of the National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution, will hold its annual Christmas party at 3 o'clock this afternoon at the headquarters here.

Members will bring cash gifts, which will be pooled and given to the Central Union Mission. Each member will tie her gift, in an envelope, to the Christmas tree at the party this afternoon.

Mrs. William H. Pouch, president general of the D. A. R., and several other national officers are expected to attend.

Arts Club Dance Set for Tonight

The Arts Club will continue its series of square dancing programs at 8 o'clock in the gallery of the clubhouse.

Hosts at the club for the month are Mrs. Norman T. Anderson, Miss C. Virginia Diedel, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Lee Preu, Victor Eberhard and John E. W. Sohl.

Poetry Program To Feature Tea

A poetry program will be presented at the tea of the District branch, National League of American Pen Women, at 3 o'clock this afternoon at its studio.

The hostess, Mrs. Ida Elaine James, will be assisted by Mrs. Myrtle McDougal, Mme. Marie Claeys Garzia, and Mrs. Barbara S. Whitney.

The guest speaker, Miss Violet McDougal, will discuss a comparative study of French, Swedish and Chinese poems with translations. Poets of the District League who have published books will be presented by Miss Ivy Lindsley, who will tell how each book received its title. Selections will be read by Miss Alethea Todd Alderson, Mrs. Louise Wilson Dunwell, Mrs. Inez Barkley Kirby, Miss Anna M. Priestly, Mrs. James, and Mrs. Whitney.

Voters League To Dispense Information

The National League of Women Voters will perform a wartime service of gathering information about the Government and relaying it to the other citizens, it was decided yesterday at a special meeting of officers at headquarters here.

Leaders of local leagues throughout the country will be urged to serve as "custodians of governmental information for their communities" and all other members will be asked to enroll for certain hours of instruction each week to enable them to become "purveyors of information to the people about the people's Government."

Plans are now being made as to the type of information and the method of disseminating it.

Miss Marguerite M. Wells, president of the league, issued a statement yesterday about the movement for sharing the league's experience with a wider public. She said:

"Fitting government to its purpose has been the concern of the league for 21 years. The task is now raised to the nth degree. Stresses and strains upon democratic government like ours—a government upon which so much depends for victory—beggar description. So government must be tempered to its double task: to win the war for freedom and to retain freedom thereafter."

Bank Club Gives Christmas Party

The Bank Women's Club held its annual Christmas party last night at the Parrot tearoom, with a tree and the distribution of trinkets by a Santa Claus.

Two new members were welcomed into the club, Miss E. Lydia Martin and Mrs. Avlynne C. Helm.

Miss Mildred Woodcock, chairman of the committee on arrangements, was assisted by Mrs. Marie Seltzer, Mrs. Constance Jones, Mrs. Jones, Mrs. Mildred O'Donnoghue, Mrs. Eunice Thomas and Miss Helen Healy, president of the club.

Approximately 50 members were gathered around tables, decorated in Christmas greens and lighted candles, with the tree nearby trimmed with blue and silver lights.

U. D. C. to Install New Officers

Mrs. Harold Walbridge Robbins will be installed as president of the District Division, United Daughters of the Confederacy, at a ceremony tonight at Confederate Memorial Hall.

Other officers to be installed are: First vice president, Miss Oba Jan Gibson; second vice president, Miss Carolyn Rogers; third vice president and director of children, Mrs. Francis M. Hoffheims; recording secretary, Mrs. Seba Christie; corresponding secretary, Mrs. John D. Milligan; treasurer, Miss Viola Jones; registrar, Mrs. Benjamin Grady; historian, Mrs. Elizabeth Fred; custodian, Miss Kate Sexton; parliamentarian, Mrs. Fred Louis Volland; auditor, Miss Laura Embrey; chaplain, Mrs. J. A Last Peek at Her Night Guardian

The bashful lamb and waddling duck (shown above) are two of the creatures made to shine in the luminous pictures being offered by local stores for nurseries. Little ones will not feel so alone when they waken at night if they see these story-book companions near

By Martha Ellyn

Cherubic "Candy" Sinclair, wee daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank D. Sinclair, of the Dorchester House, is fascinated with her luminous bunny lamp. She is taking a last look at the antics of Brer Rabbit before she is off to sleepy town.

This lamp and matching pictures glow in the dark because they have been treated with luminous material. They glow several hours after lights are out, are recharged by every exposure to light and last indefinitely. The luminous treatment contains no radium, phosphorus or other poisonous material.

The decorations are of wide selection—lamb, duck, donkey, peasant girl, soldier, dog, chicken and Good Fairy. All pictures have one-half-inch frames tinted a harmonious off-white, covered with regular picture glass and neatly sealed in the frames.

Such an innovation in sleep-producing ways will give children great pleasure as they watch the frisky figures and think of nursery rhymes. These sprightly decorated ensembles should not be overlooked when shopping for gifts for the little ones.

Thrift Pointers

Orange Substitutes

Consumers who can no longer afford to buy oranges because of present high prices have a chance of several other foods relatively high in vitamin C content, according to the consumer division of the Office of Price Administration.

The most important other sources of vitamin C are grapefruit, canned tomatoes, spinach, raw cabbage, raw salad greens, turnips and rutabagas.

Potatoes, if cooked with their skins on, may contribute important amounts of this vitamin. Although not as rich a source as some other vegetables if eaten in liberal quantities they furnish enough vitamin C to warrant their inclusion among principal sources of this vitamin.

Cabbage and spinach would serve as particularly cheap sources of vitamin C this winter since they show considerable declines in price during the last few months. More of the vitamin will be supplied if cabbage is eaten raw and if the green leaves, often thrown away, are used. However, if it is cooked in a small quanity of water just long enough to be tender, some vitamin C is still retained.

However, if you must have oranges, here are some tips to aid you in buying them.

* * * *

Best quality oranges are firm, heavy, and well colored with fine-textured skin. Surface blemishes are no clue as to their quality.

Housewives are warned not to buy puffy or spongy oranges for they are usually light in weight, lacking in juice, and of poor quality.

One may tell decayed oranges by seeing if there are water soaked or soft areas on the surface. These areas are sometimes covered by a mold.

Other tips for buying oranges include: (1) Buy that variety which is in greatest supply at local markets. (2) Buy that variety which is in season and which is raised nearest to your market area. (3) Buy them by the pound instead of by the dozen. (4) Select your own.: (5) Do not handle roughly when buying. (6) Remember that appearance and quality are not always closely associated.

Become a Hermit to Cure Cold, Prevent It From Spreading

By Ida Jean Kain

WHEN IT comes to a cold, be a snob. You shouldn't have to take one from anybody, or risk letting anybody take yours. In either case, the safe course is to keep your distance, for the cold bug travels about 6 feet in ordinary conversation and twice that far in a vigorous sneeze.

It is not surprising to find a jump in the number of colds following Thanksgiving and Christmas. During the holidays people not only travel in crowds, but their susceptibility is increased by the tendency to over-eat and to become overly tired. It pays to shop early to avoid crowds and colds.

Be a Hermit

There is no excuse for the person with a cold to even consider carrying on her social activities. What we should all do is to take a firm stand and refuse to be around anyone with a cold. Then those who have them would stay at home—and a good thing that would be for all concerned.

When you find yourself seated next to someone with a severe case of the sniffles at a bridge party, don't you feel like saying, "I am sorry, but I am susceptible to colds, I am going home? What a shock that would be to the cold carrier. But from your standpoint it would be much more sensible that catching her cold and letting it make the rounds of your own family.

The working girl is in a somewhat different category. But the place for her when she has a cold is at home, not the office or store. Suppose you are shopping for a dress and the salesgirl or fitter sent to help you has a cold. You can do one of three things: Glance at your watch and leave hurriedly, ask for someone else to help you, or take your chances. Of course, if you shun others when they have colds, you have to be considerate yourself. That's only fair.

High Cost of Colds

Colds are expensive to employe and employer. It is estimated that the cost to the individual averages $15 annually, but the cost in time lost by workers suffering from the cold spread by one overconscientious member of the organization is incalculable. With the tremendous effort demanded of it for defense, industry cannot afford to be so handicapped.

Once you have caught your cold, rest is the best treatment. If you could spend two days in bed, your cold would not be so likely to hang on. Also, you would avoid passing it along to others. Drink plenty of liquids—a glass of water every hour—and follow a light diet. A sample menu is given below:

HOW TO FEED A COLD TO GET OVER IT.

BREAKFAST

MIDMORNING

LUNCH

MIDAFTERNOON

DINNER
Tomato juice; small omelet or scrambled egg; Greens; carrots and peas; mixed fruit cup.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Couple Who Left College and Well-to-do-Homes To Marry, at 18, Are Parents at 20, and Wouldn't Trade Their Lot for "All the Freedom in World"

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I read with interest your column of December 9, which was headed: "Two girls talk things over and reach conclusion that marriage, for most persons, means trading all freedom and fun for routine drudgery." While I have never written to you before, I feel that I must try to show these girls how wrong they are.

I agree with you, Miss Haworth, that "marriage is what you make it." My husband and I are just 20. We married at the age of 18, when we were both in college; and everyone said it wouldn't work. Both of us come from well-to-do families. We had always had everything we wanted. As a result, we found it "hard going," during the first months of marriage, to do without many things we desired and had been accustomed to. However, we stuck to our rule of doing without things we could not afford; and we seemed to grow happier with every passing day.

Now we have a 4-month-old daughter, and we wouldn't trade her for all the "freedom and fun" in the world. My husband makes only $25 a week—yet, as a result of good management, we have a nice (though tiny) apartment in the suburbs; few, but excellent, clothes; and a savings account. In addition, my husband is going to school at night, and when he finishes his law course (at the end of another 18 months), I am going back to finish my college course.

Our furniture and car are paid for—and that represents a great achievement in planning and saving. We have no bills outstanding. We pay as we go. We don't spend money foolishly; and still, we have what we want, within reason. We are not "in a rut." At least twice a month, we leave the baby with someone and go out "on a spree"—sometimes for dinner; or to the National; or dancing, or maybe just to the movies. We subscribe to good magazines and buy good books.

I do all the housework and take care of the baby. And it might be drudgery if I took that view of it; but I don't. For the time being, th[illegible] is my "career." I plan my work on a weekly schedule, and tak[illegible] pride in doing it well. My day starts at 6 a. m., and 10:30 p. m. often finds me ironing baby clothes. [illegible]ut Saturday is always a "short day," so far as housework is concerned; and on this day, I shampoo and set my hair, manicure my nails, etc.

I think the girls who wrote to you, in disparagement of marriage, have one important thing to learn, namely—that you get just as much out of the relationship as you put into it. Marriage is a "give-and-take proposition. For my part, I have never known any greater fun than making a cheerful, comfortable home; preparing balanced and appetizing meals; taking care of a happy, healthy baby; helping my husband "get ahead" in the world, and generally functioning in the role for which woman was born.

Speaking of "freedom"—isn't it proverbial that men value "freedom" more dearly than women? And since my husband willingly gave up his "freedom" to share life with me, and works from 7 a. m. to 6 p. m., and then goes to school at night, often studying until 2 a. m. in order to become an increasingly better "provider" for all of us—surely he deserves all the happiness, peace and consideration that I can give him.

Our marriage is a success. As I have said, my husband and I are very happy. But our happiness has been "achieved." It was not handed to us on a silver platter. We have worked hard for the things we have—but never have we counted our efforts as "drudgery;" and we would not trade our life together for all the "freedom" in the world. Sincerely,

MRS. H. D. S.

Should Gift Be Given Person Newly Met?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Three weeks ago, I met a young lady at one of our Army-post dances. Since then, I have seen her four times and have developed a great liking for her. Would it be correct to remember her with a Christmas gift on the basis of this short acquaintance? If so, what type of gift would be appropriate? Your suggestions will be greatly appreciated. Sincerely,

PRIVATE L. B. C.

Appropriate Gesture, In the Circumstances

DEAR L. B. C.: In the circumstances, it is quite correct to remember the young lady with a Christmas gift; and any feminine gadget, such as the post exchange has for sale, would be suitable. A large flat compact, for instance—possibly enameled in white, with the United States seal in bright colors—would no doubt please her very much. Or a lapel pin, fashioned in the insignia of your corps. Or a chain bracelet, festooned with patriotic emblems.

The gift should be modest in price and impersonal in kind, in view of your short acquaintance. And if it bears the imprint of the giver's Army affiliation, it will convey a nice compliment to the recipient—in the sense of symbolizing one soldier's grateful appreciaton of her amiability. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Prepare to Get Office Job

TO THE GIRL who wants to know how to get a job the best answer is "be ready for one!"

If you've spent long hours waiting to get office jobs, only to lose them to better-trained girls, learn shorthand. You can teach yourself—and it's an "Open Sesame" to office jobs of all kinds.

Pitman shorthand is simple. Instead of writing words letter by letter, you write symbols for the sounds in them. The sound "bee," for instance, is a stroke and a dot.

There aren't many sounds; taking a few symbols each day you soon learn them. Say the sounds as you write the symbols, so ear and pencil work together; then as you practice taking dictation you'll get the hang of it more easily.

For dictation, a friend might read letters to you, at first only a few words a minute, gradually working up to about 100. When you've attained that, then you're ready to say "yes" when an employer asks "do you take dictation!" And in your test you can prove it!

From our 40-page booklet, "Pitman Shorthand Self-Taught," you can learn the Pitman system in 15 step-by-step lessons and exercises. Has word-signs and phase-forms for speed in dictation, tells how to practice for business efficiency.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "Pitman Shorthand Self-Taught," to the NEW YORK OFFICE OF THE WASHINGTON POST, Home Institute, 100 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

The Gentler Sex——By Malvina Lindsay

A Free Woman

WEARING her hat of the winter before last, Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey, noted reformer, announced yesterday she had reorganized herself on a "defense basis."

Mrs. DeGoofey

"I had intended to appear today in a new spring hat," Mrs. DeGoofey told her press conference. "It has always been my ambition to have my spring hat before Christmas and this year I had a sweet little Duchess of Windsor chapeau picked out. However, the war has changed all that, and I shall have to wait now at least until February."

The intrepid president of the Do Something About It League said she had no general reforms to announce. "I have decided to reform myself first" she declared.

Will Snoot the The Nouveau Stylish

"For one thing, I expect to be the first woman in America to get into my old clothes," she continued. "As everyone knows, I always try to be in the forefront of fashion. And the day after Christmas I expect to be as snooty as possible toward all women who appear in new mink coats, diamond gadgets, and other booty."

The reformer declared she had completely simplified her life. "I will waste no more time," she said, "trying to keep up with the belt of the month, or the handkerchief of the week. I will no longer try to beat every other woman to the draw on the season's clothes, but will buy my spring clothes in May and my summer ones in July."

"But Mrs. DeGoofey," protested a public relations expert for the ear-ring industry, "don't you think it is a woman's first defense duty to be as glamorous as possible?"

"Not exactly her first," was the reply. "However, don't misunderstand me. I shall, of course, continue to be as fascinating and glamorous to men as possible, and I hope all women will be the same. But I do think we might do with a few less mad hats, sequins and bangles. If nothing else comes out of this war, I hope the women at least may learn to dress with a little restraint.

Low-Heel Crusade Is Planned

Mrs. DeGoofey called attention to her new low-heeled shoes. "I have always wanted to wear low heels," she said. "And I believe now that we can mobilize the women o' the country into demanding the manufacture of an attractive low-heeled shoe that won't look as if it were designed for a woman who went through life carrying a brief case.

"I am also hoping to see evolved as a defense measure an inexpensive handbag that will have a few subdivisions so that women won't have to waste the greater parts of their lives pawing for things they can't find."

"What about your Christmas plans, Mrs. DeGoofey?" asked a Santa Claus editor. "You surely aren't going to take the fun out of Christmas, are you?"

"No, just the bunions," was the reply. "This year I have had the courage to act on my own widely publicized theory that there is no inexpensive Christmas gift to compare with a crisp $1 bill."

"But what if you haven't a $1 bill?" asked the conductor of a poker column.

"In that case I would give a 10-cent defense stamp or failing that, a pleasant smile," was the reply.

No Time for Tea and Chit-Chat

Mrs. DeGoofey further announced she had put her time on a "social priority list."

"I am eliminating the mob tea and reception, and any kind of large party from my life," she said. "I am also eliminating the small party of the chit-chat variety. The time that women put in at such pursuits could, if translated into war activity, build a battleship a day.

"Furthermore, I have cut out social letter writing entirely and am using Uncle Sam's postal cards for virtually all my correspondence—excepting of course, my love letters.

"What is more, I have quit doing all the things people want me to do, going the places people think I should go, or being on committees for fear of making somebody mad, and all that sort of thing. I am being perfectly ruthless—"

"Just a minute Mrs. DeGoofey," asked a gadget pin editor. "What are your plans for defense work?"

"Nothing definite as yet. I have a few things I must get out of the way first. And that reminds me! I promised a friend faithfully to drop in at a cocktail party that a friend of a friend of hers was giving in connection with an exhibit of seventeenth century warming pans."

Rear View Gets A New Deal

Hollywood, Calif.—The typical Hollywood bustle may be merely a case of concentrated skirt fullness, but Milo Anderson of Warner Bros. believes it definitely turns the spotlight on the entire back silhouette. Accordingly, he is giving the back view a new deal in the extensive wardrobe he is creating for Jane Wyman to wear in a new picture.

With a brown crepe cocktail dress having a bustle suggestion he teams brown gabardine pumps with small gold nailheads scattered over the heels and back of the shoes. With another frock showing backward drapes Jane wears a scapular necklace that has matching pendants at both front and back.

Lady Halifax Urges British Here to Help

Lady Halifax has sent out a call to all her countrywomen in Washington to register at the British Embassy—to aid civilian defense here. Among those who probably will heed her call are a number of women who have been under fire in London, and who have been trained in civilian defense. They are therefore already prepared to give aid where it is needed in formulating and executing the defense program here, and Lady Halifax is doing her bit toward seeing that they have an opportunity to offer their services here.

All British women in the District—and that, of course, includes those from the dominions, as well as from England—are being asked to register at the embassy. The book will be open there beginning today from 11 a. m. until 2 p. m., and from 4 p. m. until 7:30 p. m., and on, during the same hours, until December 23. Each woman is also being asked to state the type of work she can do, and the hours she can devote to it.

Yesterday Lady Halifax—who may soon rival our own Mrs. Roosevelt in her multiple activities—took part in the overcoat committee contest yesterday at the La Salle du Bois. Winslow van Devanter was winner of the Paul Flato clip.

A brown ensemble trimmed with silver foxes was worn by Lady Halifax, who was a guest at Mrs. George Howe's table. Also at Mrs. Howe's "head" table were Mrs. Chauncey Parker, jr., Mrs. Cortland Parker, Miss Irene Boyle and Miss Sue Rosenberg, national chairman of the overcoat committee.

Seen at another table nearby with George Labrot was Mrs. Pearsons Rust, who olive-green hat and snood carried out the one-color motif of her high-necked olive-green dress. Black and gold made up Mrs. Peter Belin's ensemble. Also seen together were Mrs. Edward Foley, in blue and brown with a mink hat, and Mrs. Benjamin Thoron.

"Mr. and Mrs." combinations present were the Richard Southgates and the Edward Achesons. Bright green gloves furnished the budget note of Mrs. William P. MacCracken's brown outfit. Others glimpsed here and there were Mrs. Snowden Fahnstock, Mrs. Kent Legare and Hrs. Hendricks Eustis and Mrs. Jasper Dubose. Mrs. John Baker was there with several New Yorkers.

Olsen–Richardson Wedding Held

Mrs. Charles E. Richardson, of Woodfield, Bryn Mawr, Pa., was married at 5:30 p. m. yesterday to Lieut. Col. Everard F. Olsen. The ceremony was performed at the home of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Horace B. Smith by Justice James Proctor.

Col. Olsen is stationed in the Adjutant General's Department.

Miss Bunker Is Betrothed

Capt. Charles Waite Orville Bunker, U. S. N., and Mrs. Bunker, of New York and Washington, announce the engagement of their daughter, Eleanor Lemly Bunker, to Otis Theodore Wingo, jr., son of Mrs. Otis Theodore Wingo and the late Representative Wingo, of Fort Smith, Ark., and Washington.

Miss Bunker attended L'Ecole Vinet, in Lausanne, Switzerland; the Madeira School, and Vassar College, and studied with Miss Frances Robinson Duff in New York. Capt. Bunker, now commanding officer of the Naval Medical School in Washington, was in command of the Naval Hospital in Brooklyn from 1937 to 1941.

Mr. Wingo attended Washington schools and graduated from Princeton University in 1933. He is now director of Public Opinion Analysis. His father served in the House of Representatives from 1913 to 1930, and his mother was a member of Congress from 1930 to 1933.

Parties Planned For Miss Dodd, Mr. Robertson

Several parties are being planned in honor of Miss Joan Dodd and David Atholl Robertson, whose marriage will take place at the home of her mother, Mrs. Jouett Shouse, on January 1. A reception will follow at the Shouse home on O Street.

On Friday afternoon Miss Patricia Prochnik, who will serve as a bridesmaid, will entertain at a shower in honor of Miss Dodd. On Sunday Miss Barbara Putzki, who arrives home from Smith College on Saturday, will be hostess at a luncheon party in honor of Miss Dodd and her fiance. Mrs. Shouse will be "at home" in the afternoons from Christmas until New Year's to her friends.

Miss Putzki will serve as maid of honor at the wedding and matron of honor will be Mrs. Cuthbert Russell Train. The remaining attendants will be Miss Prochnik, Miss Elizabeth Stewart Richardson, Mrs. John Conway Hunt and Mrs. John Murray Robertson, sister-in-law of the prospective bridegroom.

Miss Greene Is Married To Mr. Roberts

Preston Road Christian Church in Dallas, Tex., was the scene of the wedding yesterday of Miss Anne Lois Greene, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Leigh Greene, of Chevy Chase, Md., and Franklyn Milton Moss Roberts. The Rev. Patrick Henry officiated for the 8 o'clock ceremony before an altar banked by woodland greens and Southern smilax. Tall ivory tapers stood at either side.

Bride Wears Heirloom Lace

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore an ivory satin gown designed with a fitted basque bodice featuring a deep round yoke of sheer marquisette outlined by shirred bands of satin. Heirloom rose point lace from her mother's wedding costume made a quaint Victorian cap from which fell a cape of the same lace draped softly over a tier of imported bridal illusion. She carried a colonial bouquet of white violets.

Mrs. Manuel Rodriguez de Aumente was costumed in silver and crystal green. A halo brim of silver braid was held by a wreath of rose leaves. Miss Mary Ann Bennet, the junior bridesmaid, wore pale pink silk net over pink taffeta with tiny net ruffles in pastel shades on the full skirt. The bride is harpist with the Dallas Symphony Orchestra and harp instructor at the Hocaday School, and her attendants, all harpists, wore chiffon dresses in pastel shades with tight-fitting lace bodices.

Couple to Establish Home in Texas

John F. Raney, of Ottumwa, Iowa, was best man and ushers were Lendray Greene, of Dallas, Tex., and Patrick Gallagher, of Houston. The reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Hunter. The couple left later on their wedding trip. New Orleans was their main destination, and they will make their home in Houston and Dallas. The bride attended Birmingham Southern College and Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia. She studied under Carlos Salzedo. Mr. Roberts, who is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Thomas Roberts, of Ottumwa, Iowa, attended William and Mary College and the University of Iowa.

Merry Group Gathers At Mrs. Letts' Party

Despite Absence of Her Daughter, Who Was To Be Honor Guest, the Affair Is Successful

It was a gay group that gathered yesterday afternoon "after 5 o'clock," for cocktails in the apartment of Mrs. Frank Crawford Letts, at the Fairfax Hotel. Though the party was to be in honor of Mrs. Letts' daughter, Mrs. George McLaughlin, jr., of Lake Forest, Ill., the guest of honor was missing. She had been visiting Mrs. Letts here when the war broke out and hastened back to her war work in Lake Forest.

Mrs. Letts, who received in the drawing room of the apartment, was gowned in street length black crepe, fashioned with a front panel of copper lame. A sprinkling of diplomats, Army and Navy officials and many residential Washingtonians stopped in for a chat and a warming drink or so.

Thruoghout the house were masses of yellow chrysanthemums, and a low bowl of them centered the tea table in the dining room, which was lighted by four tall ivory tapers in silver holders.

Off in a corner a small Army and Navy engagement seemed to be under way, as Rear Admiral Charles E. Courtney and Maj. Gen. Blanton Winship refought the Battle of Pearl Harbor. In the meantime Mrs. Clarence Aspinwall (a symphony in navy blue) and Mrs. James F. Mitchell (also in deep blue with matching accessories) were seated on the divan in an intent discussion over what kind of war work to go into to be of most help.

Diplomatic Set Is Represented

From the diplomatic set came the former Austrian Minister and Mme. Edgar Prochnik; the wife of the First Secretary of the Argentine Embassy, Senora de Pardo, who wore a short fur jacket over her dark wool frock, and the wife of the Argentine Secretary, Senora de Schilingo, whose dark blue frock was accented by a light blue blouse.

Mrs. John Lord, a popular San Francisco hostess, came in with Mrs. George T. Marye, and was renewing acquaintance with Mrs. Thomas Bell Sweeney. Mrs. Walter Denegre, who topped her dark outfit with a green hat, arrived with Mrs. Mitchell Palmer, who set off her black frock with a hat of bright red.

Mrs. George T. Pettengill, wife of the Commandant of the Navy Yard, Rear Admiral Pettengill, was explaining that since her husband has been put in command of all Potomac defenses, he has informed her that he won't have time to leave the navy yard, for one single evening, and so she is cancelling all social engagements for him.

Gen. Corbin Explains Military Insignia

To his inquiring hostess, Brig. Gen. Clifford Corbin explained that the felt insignia worn on the shoulders indicated the unit to which the man was attached.

Still others in the gathering were Arthur Bradley Campbell, who arrived with Clarence Hewes; Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mrs. Sidney Cloman, Col. and Mrs. John C. Mechem, Miss Patten, Mrs. Malcolm McConihe, Mrs. Archibald Davis and many more.

Miss Benson To Be Feated Over Yuletide

Parties are already filling the holiday calendar of Miss Elizabeth Benson, who will arrive tomorrow from Wellesley College to be with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Benson, for Christmas and her debut two days later. The occasion will be a tea at the Benson home, Birdwood, at 10 West Underwood Street in Chevy Chase from 5 to 7 o'clock December 27.

Meanwhile on her engagement book already is the dance Mr. and Mrs. Robert Jones will give in her honor Saturday night, December 20, at their home. Then, on the next day Col. and Mrs. G. W. S. Musgrave will give a party at their home in Laurel, Md.

Miss Benson will share honors with Miss Barbara Vickery, who is to make her bow December 22 at the Sulgrave Club; while Miss Betty Frost will be hostess at a luncheon for the two debutantes on December 26. Several other parties, still in the planning stage, will be given for Miss Benson after the first of the year, including one January 3 at the Army and Navy Town Club which Miss Hallie Jones will give. In preparation for a career on the operatic stage, Miss Benson is now studying music at Wellesley.

Miss Colquitt Is Honor Guest Of Miss Shorb

In compliment to Miss Delphine Colquitt, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph C. H. Colquitt, Miss Dorothy Shorb entertained at a luncheon yesterday at the Woodway Lane home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Paul E. Shorb.

Around the table, which was centered with a bouquet of lilies, white chrysanthemums and yellow snapdragons, were Miss Jacqueline Knapp, Miss Alice Ingersoll, Miss Helen Dunigan, Miss Barbara Vickery, Miss Marjorie Souby, Miss Marian Hamilton, Miss Margaret Hill, Miss Betty Frost, Miss Mary Frances Rollow, Miss Betty Buchanan, Miss Ann Buchanan, Miss Elizabeth Shepherd and Miss Betty Warden.

War Won't Cancel Debut Party of Miss Willebrandt

Returning on Friday from Bucknell University for her debut party December 23, which her mother, Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, "will emphatically not call off," Miss Dorothy Willebrandt will spend the yuletide season in the Capital.

Recalling the Washington of the last war, Mrs. Willebrandt, who was formerly Assistant Attorney General, remembers that during the first month of our part in the struggle, several parties were called off and many persons were horrified at the thought of seeming frivolous, by entertaining. Then, Government organizations, alarmed at the jugubrious mien of its officials, literally begged Capital hostesses to give parties. And, having their patriotic duty pointed out to them, the hostesses responded with such fervor, that Washington was gayer then than at any time in the memory of oldtime inhabitants.

So, Mrs. Willebrandt, feeling sure that such will be the course of events again, is going on with her plans for her daughter's teadance at the Sulgrave Club.

Mrs. Willebrandt has just returned from a week's stay in Los Angeles.

Miss Allen Debut Dance Canceled

Owing to the war, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Henry T. Allen have canceled the debut tea they were to have given for their daughter, Miss Jocelyn Allen.

The party, which was scheduled for December 28, was a tea-dance in the ballroom of the Officers Club at Fort Myer, where Col. Allen is stationed.

Civilian Defense Boosted at Tea By Mrs. Hoskins

Civilian defense received another boost yesterday when Mrs. Harold Hoskins entertained at a tea in her home on O Street. Cohostess during the afternoon was Mrs. Adolf Berle, wife of the Assistant Secretary of State. On hand in their snappy uniforms were several feminine lieutenants, recent graduates from the Massachusetts Civilian Defense School, who are planning to open a similar school in Washington.

Some 50 or so were invited to the tea and among them were Mrs. Stanley Reed, Mrs. Paul McNutt, Mrs. Watson Miller, Mrs. Barry Bingham, Mrs. Patrick Hurley, Mrs. Jouett Shouse, Mrs. Benjamin Dorsey, Mrs. Claude Swanson and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper. The lieutenants include Harriet Sinclair, of Warrenton; Hazel Lourie, Glen Russell, who will direct the school, and Helen Hastings Haverson.

Senate Ladies Luncheon Club Starts Wide-Ranging Program of War Work

That "closed corporation," familiarly known as the Senate Ladies Luncheon Club yesterday started a program of war work that should make anybody sit up and take notice. Starting an all-out schedule to aid national defense in general and civilian defense in particular, the ladies met, at the suggestion of Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, president; discussed what should be done, and straightway started their bandage-rolling in earnest.

Not that they haven't been working regularly at meetings all these years. They have. I understand most of the bandages used in charity wards of District hospitals have been turned out at those Tuesday morning get-togethers ever since the close of the last World War. But now, with the growing need for every woman to do her full patriotic duty, the club is reverting to the type of activity its founders had in mind when the organization came into being back in April, 1917.

"To work for our country, and to foster friendly relations between the wives of Senators"—was the dual reason that it came into being, and its program has been carried on, along something of the same lines, ever since.

Mrs. Marshall, First President

Old-timers tell me that one morning shortly after the declaration of the first World War, Mrs. Key Pittman called up a few of her friends and suggested that the Senate women gather to see what they could do to serve the country. On April 18, a handful met at the Willard Hotel; listened to the call to order voiced by Mrs. Pittman; and then buckled down to the business of getting themselves organized. Mrs. Claude Swanson was elected temporary chairman, while Mrs. Henry F. Ashurst served as recording secretary.

Out of that meeting came a plan for action—work for the Red Cross; and a name—the Senate Ladies Luncheon Club, with Mrs. Thomas R. Marshall, wife of the Vice President, as president of the organization. In order to expedite the program each week, each woman arrived each Tuesday with a box luncheon under her arm and a will to work until she dropped in her tracks, if necessary.

After the war, the tension of toil naturally relaxed, and the women settled down to a weekly meeting—accented with just enough Red Cross work to give them an excuse for getting together. Soon somebody was pointing out that they might as well feature the luncheon phase of the club; and from then on some six or eight members were appointed as hostesses to provide the meal each week.

Volunteers for D. C. Defense

But now—it's back to box-luncheons again, along with garment-making, knitting, and bandage rolling, not only for the hospitals but for any place they may be needed in civilian defense. Mrs. Peter Goelet Gerry has been appointed general chairman of the national defense activities, with Mrs. Edward R. Burke as cochairman. Subcommittees are headed by Mrs. Guy Gillette, in charge of bandages; Mrs. Elbert Thomas, general Red Cross sewing; and Mrs. Robert A. Taft, knitting. Plans were made, also, for the opening of the work rooms twice a week—Tuesdays and Thursdays—from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m., in order to double the volume of production.

Also in the course of the meeting several club members signed on the dotted line to work for civilian defense for the District. In the group volunteering for this special phase of activity were Mrs. Wallace herself; Mrs. Cordell Hull, Mrs. Walter George, Mrs. Claude Pepper, Mrs. Allen J. Ellender, Mrs. Joseph O'Mahoney, and Mrs. Lister Hill.

Strictly Social: All work and no play makes you know what, so following the special meeting of the Senate Ladies Mrs. Walter George gathered in a small group of guests for a luncheon in the Senate dining room. Mrs. Hull was there; also, Mrs. Morris Sheppard, Mrs. Wilton J. Lambert, Mrs. Otis Bland and Mrs. Jack Beall.

Although it was especially planned that way, the get-together turned out to be something of a fare-well-for-a-while fete for Mrs. Sheppard, and a welcome-back-to-Washington for Mrs. Beall. Mrs. Sheppard left yesterday afternoon for Texarkana, Tex., where she will spend the holidays with her parents and her son-in-law and daughter. Mrs. Beall, meanwhile, recently arrived here from her home in Dallas, Tex., and has taken an apartment at the Shoreham for the season.

Miss Harriman To Vacation Here

Miss Harriman's debut which had been set for December 20 was canceled when Col. Harriman received orders which were to transfer him to Newport. However, the Harrimans are remaining in Washington now due to a recent reversal of the earlier orders.

Ralph S. Hills Feted at Party

Mme. Van Kaathoven entertained at a dinner party last night at her home. Honor guests were Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Snowden Hill.

Also at the dinner party was Mrs. Harry Black who arrived in town from White Sulphur Spring, W. Va., on Monday. Mrs. Black, who has been living in Southampton, Long Island, has taken an apartment at the Anchorage for a month.

WE'RE CARRYING ON!

ONE PICTURE is worth 10 thousand words . . . and the cartoon above, you'll agree, bespeaks its full quota and then some about our present situation! Let's face it unemotionally—and ruthlessly stamp out the triple menace which has suddenly threatened our shores!

Now that war—declared and real—is here at long last, it's going to last long . . . make no mistake about it! From now on there can be no thought save that of winning it. And we are going to win it, of course—unquestionably!

Our Army, our Navy and our Air Service are of the finest calibre in the world! You know it—and so do I!

Our National Defense measures stand on the threshold of the mass production stage! You know it—and so do I!

Our American Womanhood—with the armed forces, in defense work, and in the home—is the greatest morale force on earth! You know it—and so do I!

Today all that has to be done is to go to work in earnest and with unflagging zeal! Obviously there is but one way in which this can be properly done . . . That's by Cooperation . . . between Government and Capital—between Capital and Labor—between the Public and All Three! . . . The Four Horsemen of Victory!

By cooperating together the elements which make up this great democracy are invincible! And both you and I have important support to give!

As for me and the entire Eastern Air Lines organization, the way is crystal-clear . . . we're carrying on! With implicit confidence in the armed forces of the country, and with a full realization of the strategic importance of air-transportation to National Defense, the Great Silver Fleet, and the men and women behind it 24 hours a day, are already cooperating to the utmost . . . by maintaining regular schedules and increasing flights to meet emergency demands —by operating all equipment at maximum efficiency!

In our position, we feel that is the fullest and most helpful effort which we can make. Just keep ever in mind that this time cooperation will win the war! And you, yourself, may have your turn to cooperate by giving up your seat on a Silverliner—or any airliner—when the emergency demands it.

So let's finish the job that somebody else started and achieve a total Victory by everybody carrying on!

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Defense Agencies To Get Best Workers

Selective Service of Government employes was ordered yesterday by President Roosevelt. The Presidential order gives defense agencies priorities on the services of experienced Federal workers under certain conditions. Its objective is twofold: (1) To place all of the 1,450,000 Federal workers in the job where they will be of the most service to the Government and (2) to meet, as the executive order brought out, "the critical shortage of persons qualified in certain occupations and professions essential to the successful prosecution of the national defense program."

Under the order, it's predicted that hundreds of experienced stenographers and typists, as well as engineers, administrators and other employes, will be transferred to key defense agencies such as War, Navy, OPM and OEM. The transfers will be from nondefense agencies and agencies that aren't so closely connected with defense, though they are listed among the defense agencies.

For that matter even National Archives has been called a defense agency, as has nearly every other Federal agency. A new list of defense agencies probably will be made up for the purposes of the President's order.

Civil Service Commission is charged with carrying out the order. The commission will request the transfer of persons who are qualified for defense work and who can be replaced by their respective agencies. However, no transfer can be made without the approval of the employe and the department concerned, but the commission's request must be tantamount to an order if the transfer system is to become effective.

The employe will be given job protection just as Uncle Sam gives it to his employes who are drafted for military service. After the emergency, a transferred employe may be reinstated in his old job or one similar. He must make application within 40 days after the emergency. If his old job no longer exists—and some of the nondefense jobs won't—the employe will be placed on the Reemployment List which will give him preference in filling vacancies.

Adjusts Inequalities

The new Ramspeck bill that would iron out inequalities in the Classification Act was given the green light yesterday by the Administration. William H. McReynolds, the President's administrative assistant on personnel, told the House Civil Service Committee that the bill was in accord with the President's program, that it was a sensible approach to correcting the evils of the Classification Act and that the act as it was constituted violated in some cases the principle for which it was adopted—equal pay for equal work.

Budget Director Harold Smith told the committee by letter that enactment of the bill would be a "far-reaching improvement" in the Federal personnel field. His assistant, Edgar B. Young, explained that the gross cost of the bill would be $19,898,000. The net cost, he said, would be $4,130,000. He estimated that 130,000 Federal workers would be given pay raises if the bill is approved, 157,000 in the field and 23,000 in Washington.

The bill calls for a raise in the base pay of all custodial employes. The gross cost, Young estimated, would be $15,128,000. Custodial employes each would average more than $100 annual increase. Young said it would cost $1,714,000 to raise the base salaries of subprofessional employes, $345,000 to raise salaries of part-time custodial employes such as char workers, $2,000,000 to boost the base pay of guards from $1200 to $1500 and $700,000 to readjust the higher salary brackets from $5600 to $9000. In the higher brackets, Young estimated that 1800 employes at the most would be benefited.

Gen. Philip Fleming, Federal Works administrator, whose agency recruits guards and custodial employes, pleaded for immediate enactment of the bill. He explained that his agency was experiencing great difficulty in recruiting personnel at existing salary levels.

In the Senate, the subcommittee of the Civil Service Committee approved the Ramspeck retirement bill that would bring several hundred thousand additional Federal workers under the Civil Service Retirement Act. Chairman Bulow has called a full committee meeting for Thursday to consider the report

No Prosecutions Expected

FBI agents launched an intensive search for saboteurs last Saturday when high voltage wires connecting Bonneville Dam power station in Oregon with the Columbia power line, were short-circuited. The culprits, it was announced yesterday, were cows with itchy backs. They scratched them on guy wires of poles supporting the line. Shaken, the lines came together and were short circuited.

His Horse Won

A dutiful nephew in Charles Town, W. Va., yesterday sent $5 dollars to his uncle in Washington. The money, with a telegram, was sent to Uncle Sam, U. S. Treasury Department, Washington. The wire read: "Merry Christmas, Uncle, keep smiling." It was signed Edward Matthews, care of the Charles Town race track. The nephew said he didn't want any defense stamps.

Stop Talking and Get Busy, Bolles Warns Defense Units

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

Col. Lemuel Bolles, director of the District Defense Council, yesterday called upon the various defense units here to "settle their squabbles" and get busy with daily training programs.

"It is time to quit running around and talking, and to concentrate on the defense of each city block," he declared. "In 99½ per cent of the cases, organization is proceeding perfectly, but we have been called in on a few rifts that should have been settled by the communities involved.

"Each community has self-government in its defense setup and will continue to be given free rein as long as the machinery runs smoothly."

The senior warden in each defense district was urged to hold daily schools for his deputy wardens "until each knows his job thoroughly."

Specifically each senior warden was asked to arrange without delay for the following:

1. Complete organization of his post, including detachments of fire watchers and messengers.
2. Division of day and night shifts of workers into watches of one warden each. A watch should not be over six hours for one person. A duty roster should be established and maintained for this purpose.
3. Establishment of a warden post. He should use the Air Raid Handbook in setting up the post and proceed immediately even though all equipment specified is not available.
4. Completion at the earliest date possible of his sector map.

Other civilian defense developments yesterday:

A mass parade of approximately 20,000 civilian defense volunteers will be held here "early in January," Commissioner John Russell Young, defense coordinator, announced.

A permanent control warden post for the Capitol and Stanton Park area was established. The post is "underground on the Capitol ground" and can be reached through the Capitol telephone exchange. Deputy Air Raid Warden Bill Armstrong will be at his desk each evening until 10 o'clock to register additional volunteers, and would like to receive them by telephone. Boundaries of the area served by this underground post are from Capitol Grounds to Ninth Street Northeast and from East Capitol Street to H Street Northeast.

Specifications for nine air raid sirens for the District were completed and bids will be accepted soon. The sirens will be operated by gasoline motors, in order to run independently of the District's supply of electricity.

All colored organizations were called to an emergency conference, to be held at Shiloh Baptist Church, Ninth and P Streets Northwest, Friday, at 9 p. m., to hear addresses by Commissioner Guy Mason and Col. Harry Atwoood, and to discuss defense organization. Dr. Edward F. Harris and the Rev. W. H. Jernigan called the meeting.

Anderson A. Murphy, chairman of civilian defense for the American University Park area, announced a permanent office had been set up in room 123 of the women's residence hall at American University to receive volunteers from 9 a. m. until 7 p. m. daily. Mrs. Charles H. Pardoe has been appointed office manager, and the telephone is Emerson 4009. Warren W. Shoemaker has been appointed chairman of the subcommittee on housing for the area; D. O. Woolf, chairman of the subcommittee on feeding, and Mrs. George F. Look, chairman of the speakers' committee.

6. All persons residing in the Lincoln Defense Area—which is between O, K, Eighteenth, and Twenty-sixth Streets Northwest—were asked to attend a meeting at Francis Junior High School, on N between Twenty-fourth and Twenty-fifth Streets Northwest, at 7:30 p. m. tonight if they wish to register for air-raid warden service.

Residents in the Anacostia civilian defense area are urged to attend a mass meeting tonight at 7:30 p. m. in the Anacostia Jr.-Sr. High School, Sixteenth and R Streets Southeast, John J. Watson, chairman of the executive committee announced.

Dupont Circle Area Sets Up Defense

Virtual completion of the civilian defense setup for the Dupont Circle area was announced yesterday as names of persons assigned to posts were disclosed.

The following assistant deputy air raid wardens have been appointed by Moran F. McConihe, deputy warden: Max Tendler, E. H. Threadgill, Thomas W. Sandoz.

The following zone wardens have been appointed: Col. G. E. Kumpe, L. S. Wesley, J. Regan, R. S. Thurman, A. E. Cook, jr., E. M. O'Sullivan, A. W. Gray, James F. Mitchell, James S. Styles, Wolcott Waggaman, Kenneth N. Watson.

Mrs. George Lewis Catlin was appointed registrar.

Chairmen of subcommittees announced by William Clark, chairman of area civilian defense committee include the following: speakers, George H. Smith; publicity, Mrs. Ellen D. Nester; public meetings, Mrs. Lester Buchanan; educational and recreational welfare, Augustine Todd; emergency housing, Mrs. Arthur McArthur; first aid committee, Mrs. Robert Kintner.

Cleveland Heights Perfects Plans

Members of the Cathedral Heights-Cleveland Park Citizens Association met last night in St. Alban's Parish Hall, Wisconsin and Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, and devoted their meeting entirely to perfecting of their air-raid warden organization.

Names of permanent wardens for sectors were announced. They are as follows: Sector No. 2, the Rev. Paul Yinger, 3400 Lowell Street Northwest; sector 3, Kenneth Smith, Washington Cathedral, Woodley 3500; sector 4, Camdon R. McAtee, 2813 Thirty-fourth Place Northwest, Woodley 8098; sector 5, William L. Bush, 3534 Fulton Street Northwest, Woodley 5357; sector 6, Maurice Folson, 3919 Fulton Street Northwest, Woodley 1854, and sector 7, Thomas M. Sloan, 3133 Thirty-eighth Street Northwest, Woodley 6025.

Sector 1 has not yet been organized it was said. Samuel Scrivner has been appointed deputy warden for the area with headquarters in the Washington Cathedral office annex, Wisconsin and Massachusetts Avenues Northwest, Woodley 3500.

Hampshire Heights Talks Protection

The Hampshire Heights Citizens Association last night turned its meeting over to discussion of protective measures to be taken in the area in event enemy bombs drop here.

Donald Lamborne, assistant deputy air-raid warden, gave a survey of what has been accomplished so far by defense volunteers and announced that the air-raid program in the Hampshire Heights area is now 75 per cent completed.

The association adapted a resolution supporting the membership drive of the Federation of Citizens Association which begins February 21.

Salvation Army Offers Raid Services

The Salvation Army has offered the District Defense Council its local facilities in event of an air raid here. Maj. James A. Longino, divisional commander, S. A., explained that the organization personnel was skilled in emergency feeding and emergency housing. Locations of the Salvation Army's units are: 606 E Street Northwest, 715 I Street Northeast, 733 Eighth Street Southeast, 1075 Thomas Jefferson Street Northeast, 1501 Seventh Street Northwest, 528 First Street Northwest, 622 Fifth Street Northwest and a large Evangeline Residence at 1330 L Street Northwest. All are staffed with personnel holding Red Cross first-aid certificates.

Deanwood Group Studies Defense

Two hundred fifty residents of Deanwood last night attended a civilian defense meeting of Area 35 in Deanwood School and organized emergency committees.

Mrs. Maria Yancey was named chairman of the feeding committee; J. B. Shumate, housing, and H. B. Chinn, information and publicity.

Patrick Tolliver, area deputy warden, announced that a warden organization class will be held Friday at 8 p. m. in his home, 4909 Sheriff Road Northeast, with classes to follow on Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings at 8.

It was announced that the old vacant First Baptist Church, Forty-fifth Street at Sheriff Road, had been acquired for use as an emergency relief and hospitalization center.

Power Lines Here to Be Connected

In a wartime step to insure adequate electric power in nearby Virginia, the Federal Power Commission yesterday ordered the immediate installation of an interconnection between the Potomac Electric Power Co. and the Virginia Public Service Co.

The commission said the interconnection would be made through a heavy-duty cable under the Potomac River from the Potomac Power Co.'s facilities in the District to a spot near the new War Department office building. Facilities of the Braddock Light & Power Co. will be used for delivery of the current.

The commission's order declared existence of a power emergency in the northern area of Virginia and specified that "in no event shall compliance be delayed pending determination of the terms or conditions of any agreement between the companies affected."

In the exercise of its emergency powers, the commission announced it would prescribe what compensation should be made by either one of the companies to the other in the event there was a failure "to agree upon the terms or conditions of any arrangement which may be necessary or appropriate to the execution of this order."

The interconnection will increase by approximately one-third the power available to the Virginia Public Service Co., which serves an area in which essential defense sites, important Government buildings, and Army posts are located. These include the new Navy building in Arlington, the naval torpedo plant in Alexandria, Fort Belvoir, the Arlington Cantonment, the Washington National Airport, the new Quartermaster Corps warehouse near Alexandria, and the new War Department Building.

The Virginia Public Service Co. has been heavily taxed to supply adequate current because of the construction of hundreds of new homes and the Government's vast building program in the nearby Virginia area.

About a year ago there were several successive power failures that focused attention on the power shortage in northern Virginia. V. P. S. officials had a new 15,000-kilowatt addition to the power plant installed last winter. Another such addition is in order, but its installation may be delayed because of difficulty in obtaining materials, W. E. Wood, utility president, said.

Wood declared that his company would be "willing to cooperate with the Federal Power Commission in every way" and said he would consult OPM immediately to obtain the necessary materials for the interconnection.

When the interconnection is completed, the Virginia Public Service Co. will be able to call upon the resources of the Potomac Electric Power Co. up to 30,000 kilovoltamperes of power and energy to relieve the Virginia emergency.

Dr. Hager Cites Need for Teachers

Dr. Walter E. Hager, president of Wilson Teachers' College, yesterday reminded students that "in this time of emergency there will be a desperate need for teachers. In the last war, he said, the need became so great that posts were given to people ill prepared, and education suffered for years afterward.

He pointed out that acute shortages already exist in rural areas and that this year from 5000 to 10,000 emergency certificates will be issued permitting inexperienced and unprepared people to teach. He also stated that enrollment in teacher education institutes has decreased 11 per cent. For these reasons he urged students to continue their studies.

200 More Officers In District Urged

Appointment of 200 additional policemen was urged last night by the Citizens Forum of Columbia Heights. The resolution requested that 75 of the extra police be assigned to Tenth Precinct station, and that a patrolman be permanently assigned to Fourteenth Street and Park Road Northwest.

In a second resolution, the association called on the Capital Transit Co. to place into operation along Fourteenth Street, a car which would make a direct run to Union Station.

Maj. Edward J. Kelly, chief of police, discussed the relationship of citizens and police; and Dr. Lyman F. Kebler spoke on the Bill of Rights. A third speaker was A. J Driscoll, president of Mid-City Citizens Association. The invocation was offered by Dr. Robin Gould, pastor of Asbury Methodist Church.

Engineers to Get Special Training

A special defense committee made up of experts was formed last night to train engineers in the procedure they should follow in the event of air raids at the monthly meeting of the District Chapter of the National Association of Power Engineers.

The meeting was held in O'Donnell's Sea Grill, 1209 E Street Northwest. C. W. Jones, president, was appointed chairman of the new defense committee. William C. Stickler presided at the gathering. Movies were shown of the national convention of the organization

D. C. Butcher Gives Uncle Sam Choice Cut of Day's Receipts

Sam Paper, freckled-faced, good-natured butcher, who was born in Poland 43 years ago and now operates a meat market at 831 Fourth Street Southwest, thinks that "the United States is the greatest country in the world."

Yesterday, Paper walked into the Treasury Department and handed Uncle Sam $34.84 which amounts to one day's wages for himself, his wife and five employes.

"It is little enough," he said, "but it it will help keep Hitler away from us, I would give more.

"Please," he told the clerk, "make with it a special fund. If everyone would do it, we could give Uncle Sam a billion-dollar christmas present."

Paper, who lives at 304 Park Road Northwest, was naturalized at Fort Meade as a soldier in the first World War.

"I heard a radio speaker Sunday night say," he continued, "that if each of us would give Uncle Sam a day's wages, we could have 10 more bombers to beat the Axis. For that, I would give anything. So, I talked it over with Sophia—that's my wife—and she said 'go ahead, Sam. It's a fine thing.'

"So, five of my workers gave also. But, I don't want any publicity. The only reason I tell you this, is that I hope other people will do the same. We should do everything to help democracy."

Paper's employes, who shared in making the gift, are Joseph Turner, Max Cosman, Joseph Willis, Silas Sutton and Joseph Grosso.

Five Women Lieutenants Form New Defense Training School

Public Classes Closed

Red Cross to Train 20,000 In First Aid for Victory

In an all-out effort to rush first-aid training of approximtaely 20,000 volunteers for protective civilian defense service in Washington, the District of Columbia Chapter of the American Red Cross is closing classes to the general public for the time being.

Instructors from various parts of the country are being brought to the city to help in the training, Dr. Roy Lyman Sexton, chairman of safety services for the chapter, announced last night.

At the same time classes are under way for air-raid wardens, air watchers, demolition squads, auxiliary firemen and auxiliary police, and others will be conducted for two or three representatives from various Washington business organizations. These representatives will in turn set up first-aid units and instruct personnel in their own organizations.

Dr. Sexton issued a call to all managers of large apartment houses, hotels, department stores, Government buildings, and similar establishments to select these representatives immediately.

Training Instructors

If there are persons in the establishments who already have passed standard and advanced Red Cross first aid training courses, it is advised they be selected to take a 15-hour instructor's course "beginning immediately."

"For those persons who have not had any Red Cross first aid instruction, classes will be organized to take these people through a 45-hour training course that will enable them to teach standard and advanced first aid courses," Dr. Sexton's statement read.

"It is highly important that we have first aid detachments assigned to every floor of every wing of every building with customary first aid stations," he declared.

The 45-hour course will begin Friday and be given in morning, afternoon and evening sections, with class time lasting two hours. As a usual procedure, one representative for each 100 employes should be elected.

Must Have Sanction

"Please be advised," Dr. Sexton said, "that no one will be accepted in these instructor courses unless they have a definite place to teach and have the sanction of their organization. No doubt, the instruction will have to be given on official time."

Dr. Sexton pointed out that 750 public school teachers in the District are under first aid instruction at present and will be qualified as instructors "in the near future." When they are, he announced, the school system will be thrown open and the general public accepted for classes.

First aid offices during the past several days have been besieged by applicants for training. Between 10,000 and 15,000 persons are being trained in more than 200 classes in progress throughout the city now. These classes will continue until the course is completed.

A special "refresher" course for members of the District of Columbia Medical Society has been requested of the Red Cross, Dr. Sexton said. This course will be given, and "before long there may be as many as 1100 doctors teaching within their own communities."

When the public courses are opened again as many as 25,000 student can be accommodated each month, Dr. Sexton declared. It is "highly important now, however," he said, that OCD work be pushed to the limit.

Here's Tips on Window Taping To Reduce Air Raid Damage

Every household and business establishment in Metropolitan Washington should be concerned with the best ways to treat their windows in order to keep breakage to a minimum during air raids.

Defense officials and booklets used in London suggest the following methods of treatment:

1. Place one-half inch mesh wire netting over whole of window on the inside.
2. Paste over glass on inside any light-colored cloth, such as cheese cloth or curtain netting, sticking it on with paperhanger's or flour paste.
3. Coat the glass with varnish, wait until "sticky" stage, and then press cloth or curtain net into it, finishing the treatment off with a second coat of varnish.
4. Tape the windows with sticky cloth tape, criss-crossing it so that no space wider than 4 inches is left. Strip treatment not so good unless the strips cover whole surface of the pane. Strips of ordinary paper give hardly any protection.
5. So-called anti-splinter lacquers, if used, should be renewed often. When using the varnish treatment, be sure varnish is of oil variety and not a spirit varnish nor a cellulose lacquer.

It is best to have as few windows as possible in the refuge room, would be ideal to replace the glass with some flexible glass substitute. If refuge room is in basement, or other places where feasible, sandbags can be piled over windows for protection.

Any film of some "tough material that can be made to adhere strongly" is good for window coating. Cellulose hydrate film and transparent or translucent wrapping material have been found useful in England.

While none of these treatments may prevent the glass from breaking, all of them will break the flight of glass splinters and keep down injuries from flying glass.

Washingtonians have been urged by defense authorities to seek some other tape than adhesive tape needed by medical authorities. It is felt that many of the other tapes and means of treating windows are just as effective and will save medical supplies.

(This is fourth of a series in simple defense jobs all can undertake, in an effort to make their homes and their community more secure against possible air raids.)

New Defense Training Unit To Start Today

The Women's Defense Training School, a new organization to teach men and women the fundamentals of civilian defense, will open for enrollments this morning in the rear of 2118 Massachusetts Avenue.

Cooperating with the District O. C. D., five women graduates of the Massachusetts Women's Defense School, having the rank of lieutenant, will be instructors. They will also be assisted by Red Cross teachers.

These women are Lieuts. Marces E. Hoverson, Helen C. Hastings, Harriet M. Sinclair, Glenn Russell and Hazel Lourie.

Courses in air-raid warden training and motor corps will be given both mornings and evenings, five days a week. They will include instruction in blackout driving, mechanics, gas defense, first aid, stretcher drill, fire fighting and general air raid precautions.

Morning courses will run four hours a day for three weeks, and evening courses will be three hours a day for four weeks.

Sponsors of the school are Mrs. Jouett Shouse, Mrs. R. Keith Kane, Mrs. Blaise de Sibour, Mrs. W. Chapin Huntington, Mrs. Charles Frederick Wilson, Mrs. Morris Cafritz, Mrs. Gilbert J. Rowcliff, Mrs. Robert R. Wallach, Mrs. Camden McAtee and Mrs. Watson Miller.

Petworth Students To Conduct Census

Plans for a census of the Petworth area to begin this afternoon were announced before 1000 residents of the community last night in Macfarland Junior High School. The meeting was conducted by the Petworth Citizens Association.

Macfarland pupils will fan out into every block of the area after school today to obtain information vital to the civilian defense program there. The data will give air-raid wardens and their assistants accurate knowledge about the number of persons—adults and children—in each block.

Webster Frye, Petworth deputy warden, announcing the census last night, said the air protective organization was nearly completed. Permanent headquarters are established in the Petworth Branch Library, and volunteers have offered to keep it open 24 hours a day.

Gunner F. C. White of the United States Navy demonstrated methods of protection against gas attacks and incendiary bombs.

Fight Looms On 1-Cent D. C. Gas Tax

Opposition to increasing the District gasoline tax only 1 cent, instead of 2 cents, is expected on the floor of the Senate today when Senator Burton (Republican), of Ohio, presents the Senate District Committee's recommendation for a 1-cent raise, making the total local tax 3 cents per gallon.

The House several weeks ago passed a bill providing a 2-cent raise in the tax, although the House District Committee recommended an increase of only 1 cent.

Senator O'Daniel (Democrat), of Texas, defeated an effort to bring the gas tax bill to a vote yesterday when he called for a quorum. After majority leaders had talked with him, he withdrew his request, but it was agreed to postone consideration of the bill until today.

O'Daniel Stresses Need

The District gasoline tax is "a matter of importance to every Senator and should be given thorough consideration," Senator O'Daniel declared. While he would not state directly that he favors an increase of 2 cents in the tax, it is understood the he is opposed to raising the rate only 1 cent.

The bill as presented by Senator Burton further amends the House-passed measure by making the tax effective until June 30, 1951, instead of June 30, 1949. It would go into effect January 1.

Senator Burton declared on the floor it was the finding of his District subcommittee that the Whitehurst highway improvement program for Washington could be completed within ten years under a 1-cent increase, which would finance the program, while a 2-cent increase would enable its completion in eight years.

Late yesterday Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, District Committee chairman, requested the President to withhold his signature from the District "blackout" bill after Renah F. Camalier, committee adviser, discovered that the wording of the measure did not give sufficient authority to the Secretary of the Treasury in that no specific fund was carried.

Amendment Sought

Senator McCarran today will sponsor a concurrent resolution asking the President to return the bill to Congress to add a clarifying amendment. The amendment will provide in substance that one million dollars may be drawn out of "any funds of the United States, to the credit of the United States, not otherwise appropriated," Senator McCarran said.

Meanwhile the House yesterday approved minor Senate amendments to two District bills and sent them to the White House. One measure will enable the District to share to the extent of $2,500,000 in Lanham Act funds for the construction of water, sewer and fire alarm improvements. The other bill reduces from 18 to 14 the age limit on children allowed to act in local theaters for limited periods of time each week.

Marble Buildings Here Make Fine Targets

All these white marble Government buildings in Washington make excellent air targets, even in a blackout, Representative Bradley (Republican), of Michigan, told the House yesterday in a one-minute speech. He suggested that the buildings be camouflaged by a thorough spraying with dark gray paint.

17-Year-Old Boy Indicted for Manslaughter

A 17-year-old minor was indicted for manslaughter by the District Grand Jury yesterday, after Juvenile Court Judge Fay Bentley had waived her jurisdiction over the youth.

The boy is James Bell, jr., Negro, held jointly with Eugene Patterson, 19, for allegedly beating to death Robert Scott, 42, on November 7. The boys told police that Scott had previously attacked Bell's mother.

The charges against those indicted were:

Grand larceny—John C. Shymansky, 29; Robert D. Everett, 21, Negro; Helen Everett, 23, Negro. Violation of national motor vehicle theft act—Oliver Davis, 32; Eugene L. Sutherland, 21. Embezzlement—William L. Robinson, 31, Negro. Forgery and uttering—Fred J. Nichols, 32, and Robert A. Murphy, 50, both also charged with false pretenses. False pretenses—James F. Boyer, 46; John A. Jones, 49, Negro. Housebreaking and larceny—John C. Shymansky, 29; Joseph H. Griesmer, 28; Robert A. Gordon, 26, Negro. Robbery—Eugene L. Sutherland, 21; Henry J. Zyvicki, 23; Clarence B. Lewis, 32; Herbert L. Wilson, 19; Horace A. Ellis, 24, Negro, six indictments; Melvin Johnson, 20, Negro, three indictments. Unauthorized use of automobile. Robert D. Gould, 19; Joseph Goodwin, 32, Negro; Harry R. Leathers, 24; Lawrence B. Posey, 27; Carmen J. Mesgrosal, 23, two indictments; Thomas R. Miles, 21, two indictments; Zelda M. Bridges, 19, two indictments; Paul H. Davis, 21, Negro.

First-degree murder—Charles F. Scott, 40, Negro, for the death of Thelma B. Mason, 27, Negro, as a result of revolver wounds received at 1815 Rizzs Place Northwest on November 20, 1941. Manslaughter—James Bell, jr., 17, and Eugene Patterson, 19, both Negroes, for the death of Robert Scott, 42, Negro, as a result of a beating received in the 600 block of Callan Street Northeast. Canal knowledge—Harry B. Sparks, 66. Assault with a dangerous weapon—Tom McKissic, 47, Negro; John T. Brashears, 42, Negro; Ham Rollins, 31, Negro; Robert Hinnant, 23, Negro; Bernard Cook, 19, Negro; Carl King, 28; Preston Diggs, jr., 47, Negro. Assault with intent to rape—Peter Henry, 21, Negro. Violation of the numbers law—Alexander B. Hurd, 48, Negro.

Larceny from the United States—Vester Harper, 27, Negro. Arson—Fred F. Hooks, 29, Negro. Grand larceny—John Henry Fisher, 66, Negro. Impersonation—Edward W. Cooke, 37. Perjury—Roy Cain Brown, 31. Violation of the numbers law—John Edward Curry, 20, Negro; Angelo Tilghman, 36, Negro; Herman Sussar, 41. Assault with a dangerous weapon—Joe Bright, 31, Negro. Robbery—Herman Hawkins, 26, Negro; Samuel L. Hawkins, 28, Negro; William W. Bates.

200 Children to Get Christmas Gifts Tonight

"Flying squadrons" of Washington Gas Light Co. employes will take Christmas bundles of toys, candy and warm clothing to the homes of 200 underprivileged children here tonight.

This will take the place of the third annual Christmas party for such children, ordinarily staged by gas light employes and sponsored by Washington Gas Light Post 44, American Legion.

Contributions from employes this year have been turned to purchase of the bundles to be delivered by employes leaving at 7 p. m. from the rear of gas light offices, 411 Tenth Street Northwest.

—but now she rules the 'waves!'

MRS. G. WILKINS was sadder than sad,
Far bluer than blue was she;
Her Beauty Shop business was sweller than swell—
But she needed more help, you see.

FOR MUD PACKS and facials and permanent waves
Her customers raised such a din
That Mrs. G. Wilkins, once plumper than plump,
Was fast growing thinner than thin!

"NOW LISTEN, G. WILKINS," a matron exclaimed,
In a voice that was louder than most,
"You'd have new hairdressers quicker than quick—
If you called up The Washington Post!"*

"A 'HELP WANTED' ad! Four nickels a line!
"It's faster—it's easy—it's thrifty!"

Congressmen, Writers, Radio Men Sworn In

A group of 33 members of Congress, newspaper and radio men and merchandising executives were sworn in yesterday as members of the District auxiliary police force, by Maj. Edward J. Kelly, superintendent of the Metropolitan Police Department.

Sixteen members of the House District Committee receive the oath of allegiance. Maj. Kelly told the Congressmen that they will be assigned to headquarters staff of the corps of 6000 which is being assembled to aid the Metropolitan force in the event of air raids or other war contingency.

"But," said Kelly, "being in an advisory capacity does not prevent you from going into the streets to be of assistance in time of danger."

Thirteen newspaper, radio and merchandising executives also were sworn in by Maj. Kelly, to serve as members of the Public Relations Unit. They will be under command of Norman C. Kal, advertising executive, who was placed last week in charge of the Public Relations Unit.

Those sworn in were H. R. Weaver, advertising director of the Times-Herald; Crosby Boyd, assistant secretary-treasurer of the Evening Star; Don Bernard, advertising manager of The Washington Post; Nathan Seidel, president AAA Letter Service; Lawrence J. Keller, WING; Kenneth H. Berkeley, general manager WRC and WMAL; A. D. Willard, jr., general manager WJSV; William B. Dolph, WOL; Earl D. Baker, business manager Washington News; Norman Reed, WWDC; Otis T. Wingo, director Public Opinion Analysts; Alvin Q. Ehrlich, advertising executive, and James H. Simon, president Simon Distributing Corporation.

Four newspaper reporters covering the District Building also were administered the oath as members of the headquarters staff while Commissioner John Russell Young looked on. They were Don Warren, the Evening Star; Roger Young, the Daily News; Samuel Shaffer, the Times-Herald, and Howard F. Wentworth, The Post.

Policemen, Firemen Deferment Sought

Selective Service deferment of all District policemen and firemen will be requested this week by Commissioner John Russell Young, it was announced last night.

Washington, it was pointed out, is one of the few cities which have not as yet asked a blanket exemption from military service for its Police and Fire Department members.

"The front lines of the present war," said Young, "extend into every city. I think we should retain our trained men in both Police and Fire Departments. They are needed as much—if not more—right here at home than they are in the armed forces."

War of Words Hits Capital's Restaurateurs

Unless history reverses itself, it's an au revoir to Italian spaghetti, German sauerkraut and dachshunds, and Japanese goldfish.

For side by side with America's war of blood against the Axis has begun the war of words.

Many Washington restaurants, for example, are now selling "American spaghetti" instead of "Italian spaghetti."

In the last war the most famous change in the name of a food was that of sauerkraut to "liberty cabbage." Several restaurateurs indicate that they will make the same menu change in this war.

Albino's New Italian Restaurant, 918 Seventeenth Street Northwest, a heavy vendor of spaghetti, changed its name last week to just Albino's Restaurant. "No more Italian spaghetti," says the proprietor, Joe Zanbale. "We make it the same way, but we call it American spaghetti from now on. We want to win this war—beat Mussolini."

Torino's Italian Restaurant, at 909 H Street Northwest, is not "Italian" any more either. When a reporter asked a waiter there by what name they call their spaghetti now, he replied: "You just ask for Benny. Whichever way you like it—we make it."

Carley's Rathskeller, at 1809 Nichols Avenue Southeast, is serving no German dishes. "Yessir," said the proprietor, "we're specializing in Irish food."

At the Cherry Blossom Restaurant, 912 Fourteenth Street Northewest, James Protos, the owner, is still debating whether to change the name. "All kinds of cherries make a blossmo," he said thoughtfully. "They don't have to be Japanese. But I don't like the name now either," he added.

Pretzels in Danger

Protos, born in Greece, discontinued using German and Italian names for food several months ago. "It's just spaghetti meat sauce and gravy cheese," he declared.

Happy about the war and not concerned with words was Ming Yee, a Chinese, who works at the Smiling Buddha restaurant, in Bethesda. "We have no Japanese food," he laughed, "but if we have a Japanese customer, we'll take good care of him."

Other restaurants with Hungarian and Rumanian names admitted that they may change their names. One owner commented that the only change in the menu would be an increase in prices.

L'Escargot's, French restaurant on Connecticut Avenue, has dropped all French names from its menu. "But it's only a facilitate service—not politics," said Jack Varela, the manager. "We are an American restaurant serving French food."

And food with Axis names are not the only things being changed in America's war of words. Dachshunds, as in the last war, may become "liberty dogs." Even Gilbert and Sullivan's "Mikado" may suffer a change. Although almost sure to be retained in the American language, are the Australian crawl, the Dutch treat, the Turkish bath, the Swedish massage, and Chinese food.

On the way out may be Vichy water, Vienna roast, Bismarck herring, Hungarian goulash, German silver, German measles, and Japanese ivy. Also to go may be pretzels, which in the last war Cincinnati classified as "crooked as the Kaiser," before outlawing them.

NEW ROOSEVELT HOTEL COCKTAIL LOUNGE. Carpenters and decorators are busy as diligent bees and ants in the Roosevelt Hotel. They're constructing a new cocktail lounge seating 250 people. If they keep up their present rate of speed, it'll be opened on New Year's Eve. Manager Leo Graves, of the Roosevelt, has his fingers crossed, but he's hoping, believing and working for the New Year opening . . . A name for the new lounge will shortly be selected and a New York band booked for dancing. The Roosevelt Hotel is under the same management as New York's Lincoln and Edison Hotels and may be expected to follow a similar policy in its entertainment. We can't tell you much about the decor of the new spot except that it'll have a sleek modern background of bleached wood.

Remember Lady Vine, the chic and cordial singing hostess, who added so much to the Starlight Roof last summer? She'll return to Washington on January 8, will spread sunshine around the Cafe Caprice.

"THE EYES OF TEXAS, ETC." Layton Bailey, gregarious Texan maestro of the Metronome Room, hopped down to Congress lately to view the Texas Senators and Representatives in action. Later, while lunching with Representative Lindley Beckworth, of his home State, Layton met several other members of the Texas delegation . . . That evening the whole bunch trouped up to Metronome to relax after declaring war a couple of times in one day. Layton said, "I went to the Capitol to look at the Texans and now the eyes of Texas are upon me."

"DADDY!" Dick Koons, band leader in the Mayflower Lounge, has added a new chorus to his arrangement of "Daddy." The addition is William Howard Koons, who arrived Sunday night at Georgetown Hospital. Mother, child and Dick are all doing beautifully, thank you.

CHANGE SHOES, NOT PARTNERS, is the newest dance thought. A debbie brought a pair of bedroom slippers to the Versailles the other eve, changed into them from her evening slippers for the lively polkas and riotous rushes. Her theory was that high-heeled slippers are suitable only for sedate waltzing.

Madelyn White, exquisite blond dancer recently seen at Paul Young's, will return there on January 8. She's now featured at the snazzy Dunes Club at Pinehurst, N. C.

NEPTUNERY. "Talent Try-Outs" in the Neptune Room have centered so much attention that the spot's fine professional entertainers have not been heard about sufficiently.

MARJORIE HYAM, who supplies the girlish charm element to the Stylists, new attraction at El Patio

The "revolving rhythm" of the Harding-Moss-Joyce Trio is smartly original. We still can't get over the way that Dick Moss beats the conga drum, shakes maracas and plays piano at the same time. And Billie Joyce's voice sounds like an accordion when she sings "Swanee River" . . . Ranido's Islanders inject shots of boogie-woogie serum into other haunting Hawaiian airs.

PALMS WITHOUT SECRETS. Two perfect M's are formed by the lines on the hands of Violinist Ralon, of the Madrillon. Whether this makes his palms easy to read we wouldn't know, but Ralon says that last year a palm reader told him exactly what was going to happen to him this year. And plenty happened!

TWO-IN-ONE. The Hi Hat's Cavaliers change their instrumentation as well as their manner when they switch from sugary love songs to jovial tunes. When they're going romantic, they use violin, piano and guitar. For swingy tunes they use piano, guitar and accordion.

Dancer Melba, now at the Shoreham, has a bead and sequin dress weighing 15 pounds, says that she doesn't wear it for a minute longer than necessary while dancing. We'll bet she doesn't get weighed in it, either.

YOUTH SPEAKS UP. Maestro-Emcee Bill Strickland, of the Lotus, is expecting his son, Bill, jr., home from military school for the holidays. But he's pondering young Bill's declaration of rights in which he says he's not going around with his dad at Christmas time. It seems that young Bill got irked last year after a dozen people looked him up and down and said to his father, "Great Scott! Bill, have you got a boy that big?"

ABOUT MUSIC MAKERS. Ray Richardson, Rainbow Room saxist and also a licensed aviator, has a feeling that it won't be long until he'll be doing his flying in uniform . . . Every member of Phil Vidal's Rumba Band in the Copocabana is a Porto Rican except for the bass player who's a Mexican . . . Leader Ralph Hawkins, of the new Crossroads, has promised us to write a piece for this column some day about his experiences while playing for Artie Shaw. Will that be a saga! . . . Songstress Sylvia Gould, of the Plymouth is "someone to watch." She was good when she started at the Plymouth a couple of weeks ago, has improved a hundred per cent since . . . Accordionist Beverly Stull, of Burt's Trans-Lux, is the only entertainer whose picture appears in the new telephone book. Her smile gives "oomph" to one page of this practical tome . . . Saxist Ray Donahue, of Pete Macias' Lounge Riviera Band, has been looking younger every year for the last five years. His explanation of this phenomenon is unglamorous. He says "I guess I live right" . . . Dena Larena, prima donne, of the Balalaika, has the prettiest stems in town, though she covers 'em up with formal evening dresses. But wait until she takes a notion to do her roguish "Buolltchki" song about the girl who sells Russian doughnuts—and also flirts.

Nancy Murchison, the pretty and gracious new hostess at Restaurant "222," is the daughter of Claudius Murchison, head of the Cotton Textile Institute. She's only 21, but no end interested in the restaurant business.

FEATS IN STEPPING. Corinne, who's dancing with Cordano in the Pall Mall Room, plays "Souvenir" and "Kammenoi Ostrow" on the violin while she does waltz whirls. She never misses a note . . . The Troika's agile Karavaeff kicks out with both feet—at the same time! We have a feeling that he'll land on his chassis some night. But it hasn't happened yet.

NEW "JIVIN' JACK SPECIALS. The Casino Royal's "Jivin" Jack Schafer is now singing about Santa Claus in his "Yes, Yes, Yes" song. He's also popped out with two hilarious parodies, "I Must Have Been a Beautiful Baby" and "Climb Down Off My Knee, Sonny Boy."

GLAMOROUS SURROUNDINGS. A glorifying pink light bathes the white horses, the painting of nymphs and Carmen Cavallaro's keyboard in the Cosmos Room . . . And the pink-lighted windows of La Salle du Bois spread glamour all around Eighth and M Streets . . . The Caribbean mural at the staircase foot in the Viking becomes twice as beautiful if you look at its reflection in the mirror across the room . . . You'll find glamour undiluted (Esquire variety) in those weird works of art that line the Brown Derby entrance.

Take it easy about the war, boys, the Mayfair's infallible prognosticator, says the Jap power will be smashed by April; that the whole war will be over by this time next year.

'GALE'S A CYCLONE. Winter and summer, spring and fall—the Nightingale rambles along at a steady 125 m. p. h. as a prize suburban dancery. Jack Maggio's band is fine as they come. Comedy songs by Tommy Bingley.

Dr. Sanford Moss, Army to Receive Air Trophy Today

Dr. Sanford A. Moss, General Electric engineer of Lynn, Mass., today will be awarded the 1940 Collier Aviation Trophy, jointly with the Army Air Corps for "outstanding success in high altitude flying by the development of the turbo-supercharger."

Vice President Wallace will award the trophy at the Capitol at 12:30 p. m., and will accept for President Roosevelt a life membership in the National Aeronautic Association, which annually awards the trophy "for the greatest achievement in aviation, the value of which has been demonstrated by actual use during the preceding year."

Past recipients have included Orville Wright, Glenn H. Curtiss, Glenn L. Martin, Donald W. Douglas and Howard Hughes.

P. J. Kyle Named Air Corps Officer

Paul J. Kyle, of Washington, received his commission as lieutenant in the Army Air Corps December 12 at the graduation of his class of the Advanced Flying School, Barksdale Field, Louisiana. Lieut. Kyle is the son of Mrs. Josephine T. Kyle, 731 North Danville, Arlington, Va. While in Washington he was employed in the Treasury Department, and attended George Washington University.

POVICH

There will not be a single swooning case among American League batters who learn today that, officially, big Thornton Lee, of the Chicago White Sox, was the best pitcher in the league last season. The averages merely authenticate what the athletes had suspected all last summer when they were facing the left-handed delivery of the Thorny One.

Jimmy Dykes is now entitled to one more smirk. He has come up with, in Lee, a pitcher who outpitched Bob Feller over an entire season and he found that sort of a fellow where he got most of his other talent—off the scrapheap. When the Cleveland Indians decided Lee would never be a big league winner, Dykes stepped in a few years ago and took 1941's leading pitcher off their hands.

Dykes had to juggle matters a bit to get Lee. He arranged a three-cornered deal in which Cleveland obtained the veteran Earl Whitehill from Washington which, in turn, received Jack Salveson from the White Sox. Dykes ended up with the left-handed Lee. He didn't give up much. Salveson didn't even survive the spring training trip with Washington, and Whitehill ended up as a coach for Cleveland.

The only distinction Lee had gained with the Indians was an uncanny ability to beat the Washington Club. During one season, a few years ago, Lee won only four games in a Cleveland uniform. All four were at the expense of the Nats. He couldn't beat anybody else, apparently; at least, not until he joined the White Sox when, under the magic ministrations of Dykes and Coach Muddy Ruel, Lee discovered he could lick the league.

Lee Labored With Panchless Club

That was a considerable feat by Lee, incidentally, in leading the American League both in earned-run averages and percentage of victories. His 22 wins and 11 defeats was the league's best pitching record and he was the only man, aside from Feller to win more than 20 games. That they were well-pitched victories is attested by his earned-run average of 2.37 per game, in contrast to Feller's average of 2.15 earned runs.

When it is considered that Lee was working for the positively worst hitting club in the league, his achievement is even more amazing. With the White Sox, Lee had to labor for his victories because they got precious few runs for him. He used to be a fast ball pitcher once upon a time, but he came up with a curve ball and control that was, perhaps, the league's best. In contrast to the six walks per game issued by Feller, Lee averaged only three passes, giving the lie to the theory that a lefthander is necessarily wild.

Lee's performance isn't the only source of glee for Dykes, however. Early last summer, he acquired another young man from Cleveland, who has done very well for Dykes along the pitching line. The young fellow is Johnny Humphries and while he pitched in only 14 games, he had four shutouts and an earned-run average of 1.85.

Feller didn't exactly disgrace himself by his performance last season, either. He won 25 games and lost 13, and it could have been the finest year of his career if he hadn't run into an amazing slump in the last half of the season. The blunt fact is that Feller could only break even in his last 20 decisions of the year.

Newsom No. 1 Overpaid Pitcher

Buck Newsom proclaimed himself the league's highest-paid pitcher last season, you remember, saying his salary was in excess of the $35,000 earned by Feller. Now it develops that Newsom was the most overpaid. He won only 12 games and lost 20, that latter item constituting a league record for the season. That was quite a feat, losing 20 games for a club that had the hitting power of the Tigers, but Newsom was equal to it.

Long before the official pitching averages for the season were released, it was well known that the Tigers bosses had fallen out of love with Newsom. At the recent Chicago meeting, for instance, they tried to peddle him to the Nats and were not asking much in return. They offered him, also, to the Red Sox who, badly as they need pitching talent, did not view their need as critical enough to acquire Bashful Buck.

Washington's pitching last season was only slightly better than the club's composite record. The Nats tied the Browns for sixth place in the league standing, but the Washington pitchers won undisputed possession of sixth place in the pitching averages. It wasn't the fault of Alex Carrasquel, Dutch Leonard and Sid Hudson who had earned-run averages of less than 3.5 per game, but the Nats' plight of last season can be better understood from the figures that show such as Ken Chase, Vernon Kennedy and Bill Zuber allowing an average of more than five earned runs per game. It was apparently a happy idea when Chase and Kennedy were traded off last week.

A Man Hunt With Gridmen Involved

New York, Dec. 16.—The greatest man hunt of recent history is taking place these days in the New York offices of Alexis Thompson, the rich blade who owns the Philadelphia Eagles of the National Football League.

CONSIDINE

Thompson is in sports to stay, though he and his associates dropped about $80,000 in their first fiscal year in the pro football business. Next year, says this shrewd young Yale blue, they'll lose about $10,000. After that they'll make money, which is their only reason for being in sports. They're all fans, notably Thompson, but their approach isn't altruistic. And no one is going to take them for a ride.

Thompson has installed a filing system of football talent the likes of which no one ever had. He has the name of every football senior in the country, and a case history of that player's outlook on pro football, his vital statistics, his ability, his failings, his Army draft status, and everything else of importance about him, including the telegraphed opinions of coaches and sports-writers in the player's territory.

The young executive, who operates a thriving drug business for a vocation, does not plan to make sports his avocation. Hence his elaborate sifting of all available football talent. He has bales of clippings about tons of players. Every All-America team published this year is carefully filed, and the proper notations made on the case histories of those players honored on the first, second or third teams.

Undergrads Come Later—If Possible

Pretty soon, Thompson is going to extend his enormous filing system to include juniors, sophomores and freshmen, and follow them through school by way of clippings and other comment. At the main desk in this dangdest file room in sportsdom sits Earl "Greasy" Neale, coach of the Eagles.

After perusing his vast files for weeks, and reducing everything to a scientific weighing of checks and balances, Thompson will go to the annual pro football draft meeting in Chicago this week—and when the time comes for him to make his first choice of all the talent in the country, he'll pick Bill Dudley, of Virginia, who has stood the test not only of a grid season and the many All-America selectors, but also the tougher test of Thompson's filing system.

Thompson's Eagles lost a heavy chunk of money this year, but made the biggest percentage gain in attendance and receipts in the National League. Next year, he says, he'll begin giving Philadelphia a winning team and by the following year the Philadelphians will be paying freight for what is at the moment a noble experiment.

Willy Will Interpret for Tankmen

The South American swimming team which makes a tour to Washington, Goldsboro, N. C., Pittsburgh, Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland, Buffalo and Troy between now and the middle of January, have an excellent translator in their own member, Willy O. Jordan. Jordan speaks flawless English. Learned it in school in his native Brazil. He's 100 meter breaststroke champ of his country. He says the biggest thrill he has had in sports was training in the pool of a blacked-out ship, en route to New York.

Maria Lenk, the Brazilian girl who holds the world's record for the 200 and 400 meters breaststroke, and breaststroke champion of South America in all distances, is a school marm.

A recent piece of ours, suggesting that Buddy Baer and Billy Conn are the only two heavyweights with the equipment to beat Joe Louis, has brought a cold blast of scorn from Jack Hurley, manager of Lem Franklin.

Whereinell do you rate Franklin, who offers to fight Conn, Baer and Nova and who guarantees to knock them all out?" writes Hurley. "Lem cannot be ruled out of any ranking, just because he is not one of those pampered and petted by Mike Jacobs. Let me tell you that he is a real good fighter, good enough to knock out Joe Louis and all of Joe's panty-waisted stooges. Look what he did to Abe Simon and Tony Musto, compared with what Joe did to the same fighters. Musto said after the fight that, if anything, Franklin hit him harder than Louis did, and while he might not be as fast he punched just as cleanly."

Georgetown Crushes A. U. Quintet, 76-33

A Hoya Stoops—and His Team Conquers American U.

Bornheimer Stars With 23 Points

Small Crowd Watches Local Rivals Clash At Tech; Losers Are Unable to Stem Tide

By Bill Burnett

What was billed as a tight game, involving local rivals and with anything liable to happen, developed into a demonstration of "The Art of Making Baskets in Large Quantities" last night at Tech gym as Georgetown's five, with a blazing scoring streak, used a bewildered American U. club as its subject.

The score was 76-33, quite high enough to please the most point-hungry fan in the small crowd.

In addition, however, those who came early were treated to a freshman display of the same subject, with the Hoya frosh working on Catholic U.'s yearlings to the tune of 68-13.

The varsity game was a battle for approximately two minutes, after which it was only a question of how high the lying Hoyas would soar. As soon as Bill Bornheimer and Ken Engles found the range, it went very high, indeed.

Bornheimer finished up with a grand total of 23 points, despite several pardonable misses. He connected from every conceivable angle of the floor, from every position the human body is able to assume. He was seconded by Engles, whose main talent as he rang up 15 points was directly under the basket. Don Martin, of the clever passing duo of Martin-and-O'Grady, kicked in with 13 points in addition to a brilliant floor game.

Eagle fans, who kept the fact quiet later on, still had some hopes in the first half when A. U. plowed out of a 12-2 deficit and made it 12-8 midway of the period. It was a false hope, though. The entire starting five of the Hoyas took a turn at the rim, and at half-time the Eagles were trailing, 30-18.

In the final second before intermission, O'Grady, passing from out of bounds at the A. U. end of the

Bruins Blank Canadiens, 4-0; Tie for Lead

By the United Press

Boston, Dec. 16.—The Boston Bruins regained a first-place tie in the National Hockey League race tonight by pinning a 4-0 shutout on the Montreal Canadiens before more than 10,000 fans at Boston Garden.

Boston's triumph, gained by two goals in both the first and final periods, deadlocked the Bruins with the idle Toronto Maple Leafs.

Red Hamill, strong-armed winger, pounded in two tallies, the second immediately after he flattened a charging Canadien with a vicious check. Flash Hollett and Milt Schmidt also counted markers, and Bill Cowley was credited with three assists.

Americans Lose 10th Match in Row

New York, Dec. 16 (INS).—A goal by Alex Shibicky in the overtime period of a National Hockey League contest tonight gave the New York Rangers a 3-to-2 victory over the Brooklyn Americans who suffered their tenth defeat in a row.

Shibicky netted the clincher while Egan was serving time for talking back to the referee.

The Rangers knotted the count at 2-all at 16:40 of the third period when Raynor handled Mac Colville's high shot carelessly. Warwick tore in and poked the rubber into the net.

Kaplan, Rossano In 8-Round Draw

New York, Dec. 16 (U.P.).—Irwin Kaplan, 153¼, Los Angeles, drew with Vinnie Rossano, 147¾, New York, in the eight-round feature bout at the Broadway Arena tonight before 4500 fans.

Roman Alvarez, 140½, New York, drew with Jimmy Pierce, 137¼, Vancouver, B. C., in the six-round semifinal.

Sports Coup Is Engineered By Sugar Bowl

By the Associated Press

New Orleans, Dec. 16.—Sugar Bowl sponsors who have raised one husky football fixture today adopted a war orphan and thereby acquired college football's first post-season double-barreled climax.

The Fordham-Missouri game in the big Sugar Bowl January 1 will be followed by the East-West all-star scrap in the same setting January 3.

The New Orleans Mid-winter Sports Association and Tulane University agreed to assist the Shriners in staging the East-West tilt, San Francisco's annual New Year's Day attraction driven from the Pacific Coast by war's alarms.

Since the Rose Bowl tilt was moved from Pasadena's 90,000-seat stadium to Duke University's stands which hold about 50,000, the 73,000-seat Sugar Bowl now might have the two biggest post-season crowds. The stadium long has been sold out for the Fordham-Missouri meeting.

After Tulane made available its stadium, the Midwinter Sports Association offered "every facility at its command to make the East-West game a grand success." Ticket prices and other details were withheld pending conferences with Shrine officers en route here.

President A. N. Goldberg of the association said he hoped 30-cent tickets could be arranged for service men in uniform. A game between two service teams had been scheduled by the organization for January 3 but was cancelled.

In the past the All-Star game has been played for the benefit of the

No Bowl of Roses

Duke Asked for It—Now Everything's Confusion

Ticket Seekers Resemble Corn in Popper; Nobody Knows Nothing About Nothing

By the Associated Press

Duham, N. C., Dec. 16.—Duke's multimillion dollar campus took on all the aspects of a gay madhouse today in hectic preparation for the transplanted Rose Bowl game between the Blue Devils and Oregon State.

After a series of hit-and-run interviews with harried coaches and players, these developments emerged from the maelstrom: The demand for seats made all other ticket rushes at Duke look like a dull day in a bargain basement. Three long queues trailed from windows in the athletic department. Everything was so confused that no one seemed very sure how many tickets—they cost $4.40 apiece—had been sold.

Coach Wallace Wade, who is always worrying about something, was worried that "a lot of people are going to be disappointed." The ticket supply just can't meet the demands, he said, even though the seating capacity of Duke stadium is being expanded to accommodate a record crowd of 55,000.

The lads who will be the most disappointed are those who usually see the Duke games on complimentary tickets. There will be no Annie Oakleys except for the working press and radio.

Add Penfield, the sports publicist who made the announcement, looked really happy about it because it would have taken a stadium stretcher to make room for all the free ride boys.

The University of North Carolina, Duke's hottest rival, is cooperating like a bosom buddy. The friendly enemies from Chapel Hill will be hosts to the visiting Oregon squad and also will lend Duke their temporary bleachers.

The Duke players say they're not disappointed that they won't get a trip to the West Coast, because now they can go home for Christmas. The boys will take a six-day holiday starting Saturday.

Owners Keep 1400 Horses At Santa Anita

Arcadia, Cal., Dec. 16 (U.P.).—Protesting that England continued its horse racing meetings under even greater war dangers, owners of 1400 of the Nation's top thoroughbreds kept their horses in local stables tonight, hoping the Army would lift its ban from the Santa Anita track.

Management of the track, where the world's richest racing program was scheduled to start on December 31, tonight sought a reconsideration by Lieut. Gen. John L. DeWitt, western defense commander, on his order that the opening of the race meeting be postponed.

Jerry Geisler, chairman of the California Horse Racing Board, and Charles H. Strub, general manager at Santa Anita, both expressed hope that the Army would reconsider, although Strub said he had no other choice than to keep the track closed until clarification of De Witt's order.

Pending word from Gen. De Witt, owners and trainers marked time and virtually none has made plans to ship his animals to other tracks. Those desiring to ship their horses to Florida or New Orleans for winter meetings will have difficulty obtaining horse express cars because the Army had requisitioned most of the cars for military use.

Mauriello Flattens Turner in 1st Round

New York, Dec. 16 (A.P.).—James D. Turner, the 219-pound Dallas, Tex., fighter lasted less than a round tonight in Tami Mauriello's debut as a heavyweight.

Mauriello weighing 182¾, floored the big Texan twice in the opening seconds with hard rights to the jaw, and when Turner appeared unable to defend himself Referee Al Reich stopped the bout.

In the eight-round semiwindup Curley St. Angelo, 129¾, New York, outpointed Joey Stack, 128¾, Philadelphia.

Hockey Eagles Win, 5 to 3, From Sea Gulls

By Jack Munhall

The Washington Eagles defeated the Atlantic City Sea Gulls, 5-3, last night at Riverside Stadium for their first 1941 victory over the "resort roughies." The triumph was the Eagles' ninth against eight defeats and boosted their percentage over the .500 mark for the first time all season.

There was no riot this time between the bitter rivals who put on a honey in their last local appearance. Probably that was because there never was enough players on the ice at one time to start it.

Tooting like the traffic officer at 4:30 at Fourteenth and F, militant Mel Harwood dished out the local record-tying total of 19 penalties for an aggregate of 59 minutes while 2200 fans booed.

Penalties Aplenty

High penalty scoring honors of the evening went to Atlantic City's Greg Kirby, who compiled four minor and a ten-minute misconduct, giving him the total of 18 minutes in the pokey, which was at least twice the time he spent on the ice.

Pugnacious Paul Courteau, the Eagles' center, tried to keep up with Kirby, but succumbed to the latter's whirlwind finish. Paul could roll up only two minors and a major for 14 minutes. The other lead-

Maryland Seeks Penn's Riblett As Football Coach

Philadelphia, Dec. 16 (A.P.).—Two assistant football coaches at the University of Pennsylvania may accept offers from other schools, it was disclosed today.

Howard Odell, backfield coach from Sioux Falls, Iowa, has been approached by the University of Washington and the University of Wisconsin, while Paul Riblett, end coach, is being sought by the University of Maryland.

Wisconsin wishes Odell to become assistant to Harry Stuldreher. Washington is seeking a head coach since Jimmy Phelan resigned last week. Maryland would like Riblett as head coach.

At the recent Penn football banquet George Munger, head coach of the Red and Blue, declared he had "the best assistant coaches in the country" in Odell, Riblett and Rae Crowther, line coach, but added, "we may have to fight to keep them next year because their fame is spreading."

Florida Tracks Draw Nation's Top Horses

Only Whirlaway Missing as Southern Season Nears; Wholesale Influx Will Be Checked

Miami, Fla., Dec. 16.—All the big names of the racehorse world—except Whirlaway—already are listed for such important Florida stakes as Hialeah's $50,000 Widener Cup and can stretch their running legs here if the war drives them from California.

But while the elite of thoroughbred society is assured entry to the big events, racing leaders say there can be no wholesale exodus of run-of-the-mine horses from the war-threatened West Coast to Florida's tracks.

The trouble isn't stable room, because many of them would find quarters. The view of racing leaders is that only a limited number of horsemen can make their feed bills in Florida's 96-day season at Tropical and Hialeah. Hialeah limits the horses at its meet to about 1200 and Tropical makes arrangements for 700 to 800.

"If we try to spread the butter too thin, there won't be enough for anybody," said one track official.

The war threat to the West Coast racing arose after plans were far advanced for Florida's season, opening Saturday at Tropical. Hialeah already had set $800,000 in purses for the period from January 14 through March 7 and Tropical had more modest offerings for its split season.

Charles S. Howard and W. L. Brann, among others who planned to race in California, paid "complimentary" nominating fees in the Florida lists, even though they did not plan to follow up these payments. Thus they opened the way for Challedon, Kayak II, Pictor, Mioland, Porter's Cap and such name horses to appear here.

Warren Wright sent Whirlaway—horse of the year—to California this year for a crack at the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap and the all-time record for money winning. Whirlaway was not nominated for the Widener and the other big Hialeah stakes, lists for which closed last week.

State Loses Millions In Taxes

Racing, Rose Bowl Cancellations End Prospects of Big Season of Play

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Dec. 16.—Southern California, it appears, is going to be a playground strangely without sports this winter. That realization has brought the full impact of the war to the home folks about as convincingly as blackouts and air-raid warnings.

Not all the uncomplimentary things said here about the Japanese have been confined to the Pearl Harbor incident. The sports-minded population can blame Nippon for absence of the Pasadena Tournament of Roses, the Rose Bowl football game, Santa Anita's winter horse racing program—absence, in fact, of all events that would attract 10,000 or more persons.

The loss in revenue is considerable. The State collected $1,439,566.64 in taxes from the Santa Anita race track last season and approximately $3,500,000 from all California tracks. Santa Anita employes will lose one million dollars in wages.

Pasadena estimates that $1,362,000 would have been spent there New Year's Day to see 62 floats in the parade and the football game.

Southern California's tourist business is a 100-million-dollar enterprise for the six months from November through April.

That it will suffer some goes without saying. But the all-year club voices confidence people still will take winter vacations and that they'll head West despite the war.

The loss, officials of this publicity organization believe, can be confined chiefly to the comparative handful of wealthy Easterners who come to the coast for the races alone.

All-Clear Given Duke for Big Game

Durham, N. C., Dec. 16 (U.P.).—Duke University's Blue Devils today celebrated news that the War Department had okayed the playing of the Rose Bowl in Durham with a heavy workout.

There was contact work in every phase of the practice session as the Duke team prepared to give Oregon State an interesting afternoon in Duke Stadium.

Beavers Select Chapel Hill Camp

Corvallis, Oreg., Dec. 16 (A.P.).—Oregon State College will make its Eastern division Rose Bowl headquarters at Chapel Hill, N. C., Football Coach Lou Siner said today.

He added that Beavers would leave Portland Friday night for the game with Duke University, working out at Chicago and at Washington, D. C., Tuesday.

The 32-player squad has been offered the facilities of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and will remain there until shortly before the New Year's Day game.

Bob Montgomery's Manager Refuses Jolson's Offer

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Dec. 16.—Frankie Thomas, manager of Lightweight Bob Montgomery, today turned down Commedian Al Jolson's offer to buy the Negro boxer.

"While I am only a poor man and could use the money," Thomas said, "I couldn't think of continuing in business as a fight manager without Bob."

Jolson wired Promoter Herman Taylor from Miami Beach, Fla., yesterday, asking that Taylor attempt to arrange the sale of Montgomery's contract.

The actor-singer said he believed Montgomery was "very promising."

Colorful Oklahoma Aggies Meet Colonials Here Tonight

Game Starts At 8:45 at Riverside

Colonials to Match Zunic Against Aggies' Big Star, Eggleston, In Big Attraction

Those sharpshooting, ball handling smoothies from the Midwest, the Oklahoma Aggies, will help George Washington University bring big-time basketball back to Riverside Stadium tonight in the season's first intersectional game at 8:45 p. m.

The third annual visit to Washington will be the fourth stop on an Eastern tour for the Missouri Valley Conference contenders, who have beaten Niagara and St. Joseph's and lost to C. C. N. Y. to date. They opened their season at home early in the month with a 16-point triumph over Texas Tech.

Coach Bill Reinhart's Colonials have a little matter of revenge for 1939 and '40 beatings at the hands of Coach Henry Iba's crew, both by 38-33 margins. Last year G. W. led 19-11 at halftime and was ahead for 19 minutes of the second half but the Aggies tied it at 33-all in the last minute and won easily in overtime.

Eggleston Heads Visitors

Iba has five lettermen and three subs back from last year's squad which won 18 out of 25. Outstanding among the Aggies who are returning to Riverside are Lonnie Eggleston, who holds three Aggie all-time scoring records. Johnny Newman, Charles Scheffel, Bud Milliken, Jack Taylor and Gene Bell. Lou Steinmier, 6 foot 5 sophomore center who was all-Kansas as a scholastic, will be new to the lineup as center. Vern Schwertfeger, Gene Smelser and Leroy Floyd, who gained all-conference mention last year, are missing from the 1940 visitors.

Another of Art Zahn's crack George Washington freshmen clubs, tabbed as better than last year, will meet Calvin Coolidge in a preliminary tonight at 7:15. Coolidge has been tabbed the dark-horse club of the inter-high series.

The George Washington students will attend a pep rally tonight at 7:15 behind Lisner Hall. A permit to march to the stadium behind the band and cheer leaders was denied as the police escorts could not be spared from national defense activities.

G. W. Stands Pat

Reinhart anticipates no change in his G. W.. starting five, which has been working well into the evening in the Colonial gymnasium since the rather shaky start against Wake Forest Saturday night, which finally turned into a 52-to-27 victory for the Colonials.

Matt Zunic, who right now is the District's outstanding ball player; Bobby Gilham, the senior guard; Roy McNeil, G. W.'s Cinderella man; Joe Gallagher, with McNeil a local product, and Ed Gustafson, the big sophomore center, will be in there at the start and for replacements Reinhart has the best subs in years, five juniors and five sophomores led by those Evansville (Ind.) youngsters who are pressing for first team berths, Jim Myers and Ji mBausch.

Oklahoma supporters will be led by a Congressional delegation while judging from the advance sale and general interest the game looms as a near-ellout of 5500.

The Aggies spurted in the second half to beat both Buffalo's Niagara and Philadelphia's St. Joe, two potentially powerful Eastern clubs, while against C. C. N. Y. in the Garden Saturday they were on even terms at the half but fell back in the last period. City College is touted as the best team in the New York sector, however.—M. W. W.

Columbus U., C. U. Play Home Games

Columbus University will make its basketball debut against Potomac State Teachers College and Catholic U. will resume Mason-Dixon Conference competition with Maryland State Teachers in a pair of home games tonight.

The Columbus Explorers back in the court picture after a ten-year absence, will play all home games at Tech High at 8:30 p. m. The visitors from Keyser, W. Va., have split even in two games thus far, beating the Petersburg Collegians and losing to Morris Harvey.

Carmen Pirro's sophomore club at Catholic U. will be after its third conference triumph against the Towson team and will rule as the favorite. The Teachers were badly beaten in their initial start. C. U. game time is 8:45, following a freshmen preliminary.

Mostly Local

Coach Ben Kail's starting lineup for the Columbus will likely be an all-local affair. The Explorer roster is dominated by local talent with Ed Gharrity, of West Philadelphia, Frank Vanderhoof, Greenwich, Conn., and Tom Stack, Stamford, Conn., the only out-of-town candidates.

Acky Viana, Central; Gerald Burns, Western; Nick Fillah, Central; Howard Hancock, Eastern, and Bob Berry, Tech, figure prominently in deciding the first five of the Explorers. Also Lenn Stanton, a bridegroom of last Friday, Joe Essex, who leaves school for the United States Navy January 8, and John Reges, the former St. John's courtman.

Impressive Drills

Potomac State, which lost half its games last year but most of them by five points or less, has six veteran's of last year's traveling squad back. Columbus has been impressive in scrimmages with local college, sandlot and high school teams and if the former scholastic and sandlot league stars get working together the Explorers should win.

Catholic U.'s young club still needs lots of work, as evidenced by the 30-point loss to Loyola Monday night, but the Cardinals figure to finish among the top teams of the tri-State circuit as the Baltimore Loyola outfit is undoubtedly the class of the circuit. The Towson game is the last before the holidays for C. U.

East West Game Squad Rosters Are Completed

Minor League Head Sends Note of Cheer

By the Associated Press

Johnson City, Tenn., Dec. 16.—A note of cheer over the 1942 minor league baseball outlook was sounded today by Judge W. G. Bramham in a letter to Ross Edgemon, president of the Appalachian League.

"We do not claim to know what is ahead for baseball, but we feel safe in saying the outlook is no more gloomy than that of any other line of endeavor—in fact, not so much so," said the chief of the minor league.

"Baseball ever has been and ever will be ready to respond immediately to the wishes of the Government, but we believe by keeping our clubs and leagues intact, we will render a real service," the executive continued.

"No tents should be folded until necessary. We should be more attentive to seeing that our operations are conducted on conservative and sane financial lines. There is every reason to believe that if we keep our league intact, the Federal, State and municipal governments as well as our patrons will appreciate and support our efforts. So let us face 1942 with confidence."

N. T. S. Boxers Enter Golden Gloves Bouts

No fewer than 12 representatives of the National Training School will step out in the novice class Friday night when the ninth annual Golden Gloves boxing tournament enters its semifinal round with 37 bouts, 25 novice and 12 senior, at Uline's Arena, 8:30 o'clock.

National Training School, now odds-on favorite to capture the novice team title, faces two eliminations, however, inasmuch as boys of the same team are paired against one another in two events.

At 118 pounds, Eugene Miller, one of the outstanding favorites from National Training School, is to box Teammate Bill Hodges, while at 135 pounds, George Espina, also of National Training, engages Bob Martindale, a close friend on the same squad.

These fast friends and team members, it is predicted, will produce some of the hottest mixing of the night, and may steal the show from the other events.

Other National Training School entries scheduled to appear Friday are Albert Graziana and Charley Rockinberg, 118 pounds; Emmett Painter, 126 pounds; Gilbert Amador, 138 pounds; Milton Hurley, 147 pounds; Walter Payne and Edward Ryan, 160 pounds, and Jim Hughes, 175 pounds.

Friday night's bouts will be offered in a two-ring setup for the first time locally. Ring No. 1 will be the regular Uline setup and No. 2 a special ring installed by the Capital Traction Co.

Louis, Baer Sign for Bout Jan. 9, Then Leave for Training

Champion to Donate Purse to Navy Relief; Both Fighters, Optimistic, Drill in New Jersey

By the United Press

New York, Dec. 16.—Joe Louis and Buddy Baer signed a contract for a world heavyweight championship rematch on January 9 before the New York Boxing Commission today, and promptly left town for their New Jersey training camps to begin serious work.

Both the champion, who weighed 218, and the California challenger, who weighed 230, said they would shuck off about 10 pounds and stated that they were "very happy to be fighting for such a fine cause as Navy relief." Louis will donate his entire purse—40 per cent of the gate—to the Navy.

"I am very glad to do what I can to help America in the war," he said seriously. "I think it will be a good fight; at least the last one we had was."

Baer, who had Louis on the floor in their Washington bout but was knocked out a few rounds later, said he figured to be better because he had gained experience. He will train at Lakewood while Louis will work at Greenwood Lake. Neither will return to the city until time for the bout.

The commission also approved the physical condition of Lightweight Champion Lew Jenkins and Challenger Sammy Angott, who are scheduled to meet in a title contest at Madison Squrre Garden Friday night.

REMEMBER PEARL HARBOR!

Thomsen Remains As Head Coach At Arkansas U.

Little Rock, Ark., Dec. 16 (AP).—The University of Arkansas board of trustees decided today to retain Fred C. Thomsen as head football coach.

A resolution adopted without negative vote said:

"Resolved that the board has fully considered the coaching situation . . . and under all circumstances surrounding the matter does not feel warranted in taking any action with reference thereto."

Chairman J. G. Ragsdale said several days ago that a poll of trustees had shown a majority in favor of replacing Thomsen.

Thomsen, whose $8000-a-year contract expires June 30, 1943, recently announced his readiness to step out if paid the salary called for by his contract.

Arkansas won two games last season but none in the Southwest Conference of which it is a member.

Packers' Nonmatching Jerseys Cost $100 Fine

Chicago, Dec. 16 (AP).—Elmer Layden, commissioner of professional foootball, said today he had fined the Green Bay Packers $100 for sending players on the field wearing jerseys on which the numbers did not match those on the program in Sunday's playoff game with the Chicago Bears.

Layden said Andy Uram and George Paskvan, Packer backs, wore numbers other than those identifying them in the program. He added that the offense would mean an automatic fine in the future.

Terp Boxing Team Tryouts Set Today

Coach Bobby Goldstein will hold public tryouts for his Maryland boxing team candidates, today at 7 a. m., at College Park, it was announced yesterday. Seven varsity and three freshman bouts are on the card.

Little Hoyas Are Honored At Banquet

Amid a surrounding of congeniality that dispelled the critical times, Georgetown Prep honored its football warriors at a banquet last night at the Garrett Park School before a gathering of 230 football-loving sportsmen.

The annual affair, at which athletic awards were presented members of four grid teams and the school's ambitious boxers, struck a new note of the responsibility that boys of Georgetown Prep must face in the present-day crisis.

Speeches by Jack Hagerty, Georgetown University coach; Tommy Keating and Joey Gardiner, former mentors of the Garrett Park School, and Orrel Mitchell, present coach, marked the after-dinner program.

Londos-Lewis Feud Renewal Looming Here

The possibility that Ed (Strangler) Lewis, the erstwhile world's heavyweight champion who does a comeback—or at least he hopes to—tomorrow night at Turner's Arena on The Washington Post Neediest Family Fund wrestling show, may be rekindling an ancient feud with his one-time rival, Jim Londos, developed yesterday.

Promoter Joe Turner announced that he had received word from Londos that he would be East in the next few weeks, and this raised speculation that Turner might direct his attentions toward such a bout.

But if Lewis and Londos are to meet, the Strangler first must hurdle Big Jim Henry, the former Green Hornet, tomorrow night in a one-hour battle.

Lewis, before retiring as undefeated world's champion years ago, had engaged Londos in no less than 15 matches. Some were before crowds that ranged as high as 35,000, and each time the Strangler proved the master.

Now that Lewis has taken up the challenge of The Hornet and is confident that he can still do a lot of fine wrestling, local fans, according to Turner, wouldn't mind a revival of a Londos-Lewis feud. Turner, however, made it clear that if The Hornet won, he would be given serious consideration for a bout with the Greek.

Lewis looked like the strangler of old last Thursday when he stepped out of his role of referee to apply a punishing headlock to big Jim Henry when the latter accused him of giving too quick a count in the match with Sandor Szabo.

The supporting card for the show of which 10 per cent of the proceeds will be turned over to The Post Neediest Family Fund, was completed yesterday.

Leo Numa, former University of Washington fullback will be pitted against Stanley Pinto, the Bohemian Bomber. Eddie Newman, New York villain, will take on Fred Carole; Pat Fraley, Coast veteran, will meet Paul Boesch, Long Beach, Long Island, in a semiwindup; Plummer will take on the former Colgate All-American footballer, Len Macaluso, and the United States Navy champion, Sailor Sammy Simms, will test Jim Austeri, of New York.

Tickets, priced at 65 cents, $1.10 and $1.50, are on sale at Turner's Arena, Fourteenth and W Streets Northwest. The first bout will not go on until 9 p. m.

Bears Vote Title Purse to Go 39½ Ways

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Dec. 16.—The Chicago Bears, who will meet New York's Giants here Sunday in the National Pro Football League's title play-off, voted today to split their end of the championship purse 39½ ways. They also voted $15 apiece to each of 20 Wrigley Field groundskeepers.

Full shares will go to 33 players, Trainer Homer Cole and five coaches—George Halas, Hunk Anderson, Luke Johnsos, Paddy Driscoll and Jack Manders. A half share went to Trainer Andy Lotshaw, who joined the Bears after ending his baseball chores with the Chicago Cubs.

Owner-Coach Halas immediately turned his portion back to the squad and resumed his worrying over the game, in which his Bears will strive to become the first team to repeat as world champions.

Buffalo Bisons Make Hockey Debut Tonight

Goalie Bert Gardnier Will Start for Lions Against Invaders at Uline's Arena

Goalie Bert Gardiner, most recent newcomer to the Washington fine-up, will make his debut with the local club against the Buffalo Bisons, who invade Uline Arena tonight for the first time for a hockey game beginning at 8:30.

Formerly of Les Canadiens in the National Hockey League, Gardiner will replace the Lions' regular net tender, Paul Gauthier, who will have his first rest in many weeks.

The hosts will combat the Bisons' strong attack with a starting line containinig two of the first six high scorers of the American Hockey League—Louis Trudel, now on top with 30 points, and Stu Smith, in sixth position with 21 points.

The Bisons began their season badly, losing seven straight games in a row, but snapped out of their slump in surprisinig fashion to mark up a winning streak of seven games before they were halted. One victory was over the Lions on the Buffalo rink.

"Ching" Johnson, Lions' coach, will start Bert Jenks and Leo Lamoureau, the sensational first-year duo that may emerge at the end of the season as the best defense combination in the league.

Allan (Pete) Shields, who has three stitches taken in his tongue after the Saturday game in Philadelphia, has had little solid food in the intervening play, but may join the line-up if he feels strong enough to play.

Barons Bow To Coolidge Five, 35-29

Watkins, Reserve, Scores 15 Points, Leads Winners; Waterman Is Star

Clinging to the remnants of a lead which several times reached 14 points, Calvin Coolidge High five turned back Bethesda-Chevy Chase, 35-29, yesterday at the winners' gym.

Jimmy Watkins, a lanky reserve, proved the Colts' margin of victory with one of the hottest scoring streaks in scholastic ranks this season. Starting with a single-pointer in the fading seconds of the first half, young Watkins rang up 11 straight points for the victors. He missed only two of his lengthy tosses in the third quarter, providing all the Colts' scoring in that session with the exception of Richie Waterman's pair of charity points at the end.

Watkins registered 15 points for honors in that department. Waterman's total of 8 was one better than Bethesda's best, credited to Dick Poerstel.

The Barons had plenty of chances, but were sadly "off" in their shooting as hostilities began. They trailed, 8-4, after one period and by 19-11 at intermission. Watkins' work was enough to build their third-quarter deficit to 31-17.

A last-quarter rally, during which the Barons tallied 12 points to Coolidge's 4 and accounted for the last 8 points of the game, wasn't enough as Bethesda dropped its first decision in four outings.

Hargett, Dove Roll 157 for Pin Honors

Gene Hargett, of A. H. Cohen, and Frank Dore, of Sun Krisp Nuts rolled identical games of 157 in the Men's Major League at Clarendon last night to lead for high game, with Frank Nalls, Mutual Insurance, taking high set honors with his fine 399 set and sparkling his team to a pair over McGonegal Plumbers and high team game of 635. McGonegal, even with their two losses, posted high team set of 1751.

Ice Palace

"Boots" Petiti's 145-354 led the Ladies' Commercial League at the Ice Palace and made it possible for her Northeast Trucking team to win a pair from the Ice Palace girls even though the latter posted team highs of 512-1448.

Silver Spring

Paul McKay, of Coffman Realty, with 163 and Tody Brown, of Valdenar Landscapers with 409 were the best pinsmen in the Georgia Avenue League at Silver Spring, both teams sharing in the team highs when the first named had a 626 game and the latter a 1749 set. Arbaugh's Restaurant, E. C. Keys and Steve's Barbers won respective sweeps over Takoma Engineering, Carter-Lanhardt and Hiller Motors.

Convention Hall

Both R. Spiker, of Painters No. 2, and J. Harris, of Ironworkers, had 138 in the Washington Building Trades Council League at Convention Hall, while a 360 set by Olson, also of the Ironworkers, led the play. The Ironworkers had 568 for high team game with the Plasterers and Cemet Finishers rolling high set of 1622.

Ray Moore, of U. S. Engineers, with 149, and Tom Galleher, of Hydrographic, with 380, were the best pinsmen in the Navy League at Arcadia. The Field Service boys garnered the team honors with a 605 game and 1727 set. The Navigation team won the first half of the league race by a two-game margin over Design Division.

Brookland

"Slim" Luckett, Brightwood, helped his team win all three games from Amity No. 2 in the Odd Fellows League at Brookland with individual highs of 156-422, his team going ahead and posting highs with a 610 game and 1757 set. The Golden Rule boys dropped the odd tilt to Metropolis to dive into third place and the present leaders are Amity No. 1 and Covenant, who are tied.

Shirley Povich To Make Address

Shirley Povich, Washington Post sportswriter, will talk at the Silver Spring (Md.) Board of Trade Sports Night program to be given in connection with the annual banquet of the board tonight at 6:30 o'clock at Indian Spring Golf Club.

Others on the program will include Bill Coyle, Washington Star commentator, and Stanley Field and Lew Gorin, table tennis experts.

A nominating committee, composed of Fred L. Lutes, Winship Green, Lee Robinson and Shirley Workman will present a slate of officers for election. President J. D. Draper has asked each member to bring a gift of canned goods or clothing for the Community Christmas House of the Silver Spring Lions Club.

Final Swim Meet Plans To Be Mapped

Final plans for the exhibition of South American Swimming Champions who will swim against a picked South-Atlantic team in the Shoreham Hotel pool Monday nght will be mapped tonight at a meeting of the District A. A. U. board of managers at the Central Y. M. C. A., 1736 G Street Northwest.

A. Earle Weeks, president of the local body and chairman of the committee in charge of arrangements, expects to announce the personnel of the District team by Thursday at the latest, and promises that it will be strong enough to give the visitors a thorough test.

Meanwhile, preparations are being made for the installation of 300 seats at the pool to accommodate spectators. Tickets are priced at $1.10 and can be obtained from Weeks at his home, 3727 T Street Northwest. Proceeds will be used to defray expenses of bringing the team to Washington.

The visitors arrived in New York Monday and were greeted by Mayor LaGuardia with the mixed metaphor "We're in the same boat and we must swim together."

The team's tour is under the direction of the Office of Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs in cooperation with the National A. A. U. and affiliated groups. Its itinerary will take it as far west as Chicago as far south as Goldsboro, N. C. It was hoped to include Florida, but a booking in Pittsburgh, December 27, will prevent this.

Swedish Angel, Bruns To Meet Again Monday

Through popular demand of hundreds of local wrestling fans, Bobby Bruns, American claimant of the world's heavyweight championship, has been re-matched with the Swedish Angel (Ollie Olafsen) in a one fall finish affair at Uline's Arena Monday night.

Greenbelters Bow, 30 to 20, To White Tide

Its third consecutive setback was suffered by Greenbelt High cage team yesterday at Eastern gymnasium, where the host White Tide launched its 1941-42 season with a 30-to-20 victory.

Twelve players were used by Eastern, which was without the services of two eligible veterans, but the game was by no means one-sided. The Tide took an 8-to-2 edge in the first quarter, but saw that fade to a 15-to-10 margin at the half Gradually, however, the winners drew into the clear and won handily.

Neil Craig and George Pigott topped the winners' scoore with 9 and 8 points, respectively. Buck's 8 counters proved best for Greenbelt.

Victors Leap to Early Advantage, Lead 14-8 at Half Time; Vinson High Scorer

The veteran basketball forces of Woodrow Wilson High fulfilled all expectations yesterday as they romped over a host Georgetown Prep five, 40 to 17, at Garrett Park.

There was no real contest after the first few minutes. Wilson jumped into an 8-to-1 advantage in the first eight minutes and was ahead all throughout. At the half it was 14 to 8, and after three-quarters it was 24 to 16.

With Don Hillock, the Tigers' high scorer of last season, sitting out more than a quarter, little Freddy Vinson walked away with scoring honors. He hung up 16 points, and Bill Jawish was second with 12. Hillock got only 8.

Richmond Leads All-High Choices

John Marshall Has 3 Places, Jefferson 2 on Squad; Danville, Granby Place Two

By the Associated Press

Charlottesville, Va., Dec. 16.—Richmond schools, John Marshall and Thomas Jefferson, dominated the 1941 Class A All-State high school team announced today by the Virginia High School Literary and Athletic League with three and two places, respectively.

Also winning two berths each on the all-star team were Danville and Granby, of Norfolk, while Roanoke and Maury, of Norfolk contributed one man each to the line-up.

The 15 Class A coaches voted highest individual honors to Jack Ittner and Edward Saxby, of John Marshall's undefeated eleven. Ittner, a standout tackle for the Justices for two years, and Saxby, the Justices' high-scoring back, ran about even in being returned as the only repeaters.

Norfolk's Granby team held the best defensive record of the season. A 6-6 deadlock with Thomas Jefferson kept Granby from sharing the title with John Marshall in the Norfolk team's third year of competition.

Rams Concentrate On Pass Defense

New York, Dec. 16 (AP).—Fearing Missouri might have been playing possum with its passing attack the past season, and aware of his team's weakness on passes, Coach Jimmy Crowley concentrated on aerial defense as he sent his Fordham Rams through a three-hour workout today in preparation for their Sugar Bowl game with the Tigers January 1.

Dummy scrimmage and signal drill made up the remainder of the workout, which saw two sophomore backs, Benny Babula and Sammy Ososki, seeing considerable service.

Capital Store Sales Up 20% In 11 Months

Washington department store sales in the first 11 months this year showed a 20 per cent gain over the same period last year, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported yesterday. November store sales here were 17 per cent heavier than in the same month last year.

A record-breaking year in retail sales is virtually assured as the 1940 volume was the largest ever recorded here. The Reserve Bank's survey includes sales of seven reporting stores here.

The Fifth Federal Reserve District also showed a gain of 20 per cent in retail sales in the first 11 months and a 16 per cent increase for November. South Carolina led the district with a gain of 27 per cent in 11 months and other States in the district showed gains as follows: Maryland, 20 per cent; Virginia, 20 per cent; West Virginia, 18 per cent, and North Carolina, 17 per cent.

Accountants to Hear G-Man

Inspector Lee R. Pennington, of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, will address the Washington Chapter, National Association of Cost Accountants, at a ninth anniversary meeting today of the group. Mr. Pennington will speak on "Investigative Accounting."

Following his talk a motion picture, "Men of the FBI" will be shown to members and their guests.

Mr. Pennington received a B. S. degree in mechanical engineering from Maryland University, and the B. C. S. and M. C. S. degrees in accounting from Southeastern University, of this city. He served in the last World War as a first lieutenant in the Fifth Division of the Army and holds the Army's Silver Star and Purple Heart decorations. On May 6, 1929, Mr. Pennington entered the service of the FBI and is now stationed at headquarters in Washington as administrative assistant to J. Edgar Hoover.

D. C. Business Briefs

In tribute to the late John F. Wilkins, the Washington Stock Exchange adjourned yesterday. Mr. Wilkins, who died Monday, was a member of the exchange and a former publisher of The Washington Post.

Defense Bond Questionnaire

Q. Since there are no quotas or fixed amounts to be raised by any particular Defense Savings activity, how does a payroll allotment plan work?

A. A payroll allotment plan is designed to make it simple for employes to save systematically by setting aside a stated amount each pay day to buy Defense Savings Bonds. How much any employe should buy in this manner is entirely for him to determine.

Q. Are Defense Savings Bonds a good liquid investment for a small farmer who has a little surplus cash, but may need it later?

A. Yes. Should he require the money he can get it back any time 60 days after issue date of his Series E Bond. Meanwhile it is as safe as the Government of the United States.

Note—To buy Defense Bonds and Stamps, go to the nearest postoffice, bank, or savings and loan association; or write to the Treasurer of the United States, Washington, D. C. Also Stamps are now on sale at retail stores.

Special Group Sets Tobacco Minimum Wages

A 40 cents an hour minimum wage in all branches of the tobacco manufacturing industry would be established under recommendations yesterday of a special wage-hour committee.

The committee, of employe, employers and public representatives, voted unanimously to apply this minimum to the manufacture of cigarettes, snuff, chewing and smoking tobacco.

By a vote of 10 to 4, it recommended the same minimum be put into effect for plants preparing leaf for final processing, such as stripping plants.

The recommendations now go to Acting Administrator Baird Snyder, for hearing and argument before a wage-hour division examiner.

The wage-hour division estimated the 40 cent minimum would mean pay increases for between 5000 and 5500 employes in tobacco factories and for about 36,000 in plants preparing tobacco for manufacture.

Treasury Spends 10 Billion in Six Months

Treasury expenditures this fiscal year passed ten billion dollars yesterday with more than half the year yet to go.

The Treasury said that from July through December 13, it spent $10,056,519,075, of which $7,200,650,058 went for defense.

If the spending rate is maintained, as the Budget Bureau expected, the current fiscal year ending next June 30 will be the most costly in United States history. Spending already is within $2,700,000,000 of all that was spent in a full 12 months last year.

Defense costs not only accounted for about 72 per cent of all the money that went out, but was slated to take an even larger share under the pressure of actual war conditions. Lately, defense spending was at the rate of $1,500,000,000 a month, and is expected to go to two billion dollars per month soon.

In spite of the recent tax bill, which has not gone fully into effect, revenues lagged with a total of $3,407,662,957, leaving a deficit of $6,648,856,118 in the approximately five and a half months of the fiscal year.

That was the main reason that the Federal debt soared to a new record high of $55,353,198,137.

Peppermint Oil Prices Advance Dollar a Pound

New York, Dec. 16 (AP).—Peppermint oil prices in New York jumped $1 a pound today, bringing levels $2 above those of a week ago.

Dealers attributed the sharp increase to the cessation of menthol imports from Japan, the principal source of supply. Menthol, widely used for medicinal purposes, is extracted from peppermint oil. Imports from Japan had been extremely small in the past six or eight months, but China supplied a fair quantity.

Quotations today were $6.75 a pound for natural peppermint oil and $7.25 for redistilled oil at New York.

Wholesale Egg Prices Drop Another 3 Cents

New York, Dec. 16 (AP).—Egg prices in the wholesale market here declined another 3 cents a dozen today following a like setback Monday. Mixed colors, fancy to extra fancy brought 36½ to 28 cents a dozen, and whites, resales of premium marks, sold at 40 to 42½ cents.

Reduced consumption caused by a sharp rebound in prices last week together with increased receipts, especially from the West, accounted for the sharp drop.

Dr. Schwarz Quits As Vice President Of Gen. Aniline

New York, Dec. 16 (AP).—Dr. Ernst Schwarz, former executive of I. G. Farben, the German dye trust, has resigned as a vice president and a director of General Aniline & Film Corporation, a company spokesman said today. Schwarz made no comment.

Directors of General Aniline & Film asked resignations from Schwarz and Dietrich A. Schmitz last Friday, at the same time accepting the resignation of H. Aickelin, another director. Schmitz recently was replaced as president of the corporation by John E. Mack, who nominated President Roosevelt at the 1932 and 1936 Democratic conventions.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Dec. 16 (AP).—Grain and soybean prices were bid up sharply at the opening today but the volume slackened off later and extreme gains were reduced before the close.

At the top limits wheat prices advanced 1½ cents above the previous close, while corn rose ⅝ cents and soybeans 4½. Much of the early strength was associated with the psychological effects of the removal of Commodity Exchange Administration price limits on soybean futures. The ceilings were imposed last Thursday and since the bean prices had declined 12 cents.

Closing prices for wheat were ⅛ to 1 cent above Monday's final levels, with December at 1.24⅝@1.24⅞ and May at 1.27⅝@1.28¾. Earlier May wheat had sold up to 1.28¾. Corn closed ⅛ to ¼ higher, December 78¼, May 80@81⅛; oats were ½ to ⅞ up, rye 1 to 1¼ higher, and soybeans unchanged on the December delivery to 2¾ cents higher on the deferred contracts. Lard was unchanged to 2½ cents a 100 pounds higher at the ceiling limits.

Award Is Made Of $2,000,000 Area Offering

The Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission yesterday sold two bond issues of a million dollars each to an investment syndicate headed by Phelps, Fenn & Co., of New York City, which was represented by the Washington brokerage firm of Ferris Exnicious & Co.

The New York company's bid was the highest of four submitted. The bond issues were offered to the public later in the day.

One issue, sold for the purpose of financing construction of a dam and filtration plant on the Patuxent River, brought a premium of 5.7 cents per $100 and will bear interest at the rate of 2.5 per cent annually.

The other issue, the revenue from which will be used to provide water and sewer main connections in Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties, brought the same premium, but will bear interest as 2.6 per cent.

Both issues are dated January 1, 1942, and will mature serially from 1943 to 1982.

A total of $81,952.23 of the second issue will be allocated for water and sewer connections to the Federal office buildings under construction at Suitland, Md. The Federal Government will contribute $152,431.75 toward the total cost of $234,384.

Prince Georges County's share of the water and sewer bond issue fund will be $329,435.10 and Montgomery's share $360,734. The sum of $109,830.90 will be set aside for contemplated extensions not yet requested.

Pennsy Issue Awarded

Philadelphia, Dec. 18 (AP).—The Pennsylvania Railroad Company announced today that $18,465,000 of equipment trust certificates, series M, bearing dividends at the rate of 2¾ per cent annually, have been awarded to Solomon Brothers & Hutzler, New York.

The certificates will be issued by the Fidelity-Philadelphia Trust Co., turstee, the company added, and will mature $1,231,000 on each January 1 from 1943 to 1957, inclusive.

Utility Bonds Go Begging

Indianapolis, Dec. 16 (AP).—The deadline for bids of forty-two million dollars of series D bonds, bearing 3¾ per cent interest, offered by the Public Service Company of Indiana, Inc., passed at noon today without any purchasers for the securities.

C. B. S. Boosts Pay Of 980 Employes

New York, Dec. 16 (AP).—William S. Paley, president of Columbia Broadcasting System, announced salary increases ranging from $104 to $221 annually for all employes earning $75 a week or less.

Late Reaction Erases Advance in Stocks

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 16.—The stock market pulled its recovery punches late today after scoring an assortment of selective advances in the forenoon.

The list again derived little inspiration from the war news but early gains of fractions to a point or so were notable among steels, coppers, aircrafts, oils and specialties which stand to benefit from broadening of the arms program.

Weakening of motors, mail orders and a number of other leaders helped put brakes on the forward drive and extreme upturns were cut or transformed into losses at the close.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was off .1 of a point at 37. Tax selling in a number of low-priced issues expanded the day's volume to 1,225,593 shares compared with 1,110,340 Monday. It was the seventh consecutive full session in which turnover topped the million mark.

The report of Secretary Knox on Hawaiian naval casualties was well received in Wall Street but it was hardly a bullish influence. Russian successes against the Nazis and the ability of United States forces to fight off the Japanese in the Philippines were encouraging marketwise but were offset by the threatened fall of Hongkong to the Mikado's invaders and the cloudy outlook for the British in Malaya.

Automotive and rubber company stocks still were depressed by the possibility of heavy curtailment of normal output in both industries. Mail orders faltered in reflection of the outlook for shortage of merchandise as the result of defense priorities.

Among stocks hitting new 1941 bottoms were General Motors, Chrysler, Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck, Allied Chemical and International Telephone. The last named came out on one transfer of 26,400 shares, off ⅛ at 1½, a new year's low.

In arrears were U. S. Rubber, Goodrich, Goodyear, American Telephone, Dow Chemical, Union Carbide, Johns-Manville, Eastman Kodak, J. I. Case, N. Y. Central and Great Northern.

Bonds were as uneven as stocks although some rails were resistant. Commodities were generally higher. At Chicago wheat was up ½ to 1 cent a bushel, corn ⅜ to ⅝ advanced and hogs 10 to 25 cents down. Cotton finished up 10 to 30 cents a bale.

First Dividend Since '28 Voted By Seiberling

By the Associated Press

Akron, Ohio, Dec. 16.—The Seiberling Rubber Co. announced today declaration of the first common-stock dividend since 1928—a payment of 25 cents a share to be made January 15 to holders of record December 27.

Directors also declared an initial dividend of $1.04 a share on the company's Class B preferred stock, payable the same date.

The dividend action, said President J. Penfield Seiberling, "was somewhat in the nature of a vote of confidence in the ability of our Nation to put Japan in her place."

He told directors the crude rubber supply situation is "somewhat confused and the needs of war will cause some temporary dislocations in the rubber industry," adding:

"These dislocations should iron themselves out shortly and the industry, I believe, will proceed on a 'full-speed-ahead' basis."

Associated Gas Trustees Plan Three Systems

By the Associated Press

Pennsylvania Electric Co. as part of the Associated Gas & Electric Co. announced steps have been taken designed to create three major utility systems out of the present properties.

One of the proposed new systems would operate in New York State and northern Pennsylvania, a second in eastern Pennsylvania and New Jersey, and a third in western Pennsylvania.

The trustees, Willard L. Thorp and Denis J. Driscoll, said they had:

Filed an application with the Pennsylvania Public Utilities Commission calling for the issuance of $32,500,000 of bonds and 34,000 shares of preferred stock, by the Pennsylvania Electr Co. as part of an extensive refinancing plan aimed at the development of an integrated utility system for western Pennsylvania.

This plan provided for the merger into the Pennsylvania Electric Co. of the following companies: Clarion River Power, Erie Lighting, Logan Light, Heat & Power, Solar Electric, Youghiogheny Hydroelectric and Associated Maryland Electric Power. Pennsylvania Electric Power Co. is a subsidiary of Associated Electric Co., a principal subholding company of A. G. E. Corporation.

Under the second plan, filed with Securities and Exchange Commission, steps were proposed for ultimately refunding or recapitalizing NY-PA-NJ Utilities Co., the major subsidiary holding company of A. G. E. Corporation.

An application was also filed regarding the proposed purchase from Northeastern Water & Electric Corporation for $1,500,000 of all the securities of General Utilities Co., Ohio Northern Public Service, and Western Reserve Power & Light Co., all Northeastern electric utility companies operating in Ohio. This purchase was proposed as part of a general program under which the trustees would sell the common stock of Northeastern Water to John H. Ware, jr., and Penn-Jersey Water Co. for about $3,800,000.

Brewers Meet Sphas Friday At Turner's

The bitter feeling that exists between the Washington Brewers professional basketball team and the Philadelphia Sphas, American League champions, is due to burst out Friday night at Turner's Arena when the two teams meet in a benefit game.

The Sphas are coming to town determined to erase the stigma of that 46-39 defeat handed them by the Brewers in Philadelphia a few weeks ago—the first setback in seven home games for the champs.

But there's another reason, too, for this none-too-friendly attitude. And that is the way Petey Rosenberg, former St. Joseph's College star with the Sphas, and Ben Kramer, erstwhile Long Island University captain, now with the Brewers, feel towards one another. Last season they engaged in some lively fisticuffs in two games in Philadelphia, and also squared away before being separated in a second half league game in Washington.

Their rivalry goes back to their college days when Long Island and St. Joseph's fought it out, with Rosenberg guarding Kramer, and vice versa. There has been little love between the two, according to Coach Mack Posnak, of the Brewers.

It developed yesterday that Cy Kaselman, ace of the champion Sphas for 10 years, may be playing his last game for the team here Friday. Kaselman has enlisted in the Army, and that probably is one reason why Coach Eddie Gottlieb, of the Sphas, has been dickering for Moe Dubillier, of the Brewers. Kaselman, South Philadelphia product, has made 90 per cent of his foul attempts, and is one of the best floor men with the champs.

court, chalked up the most freakish of Georgetown's shots. His long toss to Charley Schmidli was high—just high enough to hit his basket and flip through. It didn't count, despite the protestations of Hoya rooters.

The final result showed A. U. scored one point to each three of the Hoyas' in the second half, but to spectators the session was all Georgetown. Using only one sub until less than five minutes of play remained, Georgetown scored every time it got the ball—which was obviously often.

When G. U. reserves finally took over with the score 65-26 in their favor, they had only to stand on their feet to clinch the Eagles' slaughter.

Charley Kligman, former Central High stalwart, topped the losers' weak attack with 10 points, all from far out. That was two better than the record of "Bing" Byham, veteran center.

Coach Biff Jones of Nebraska, head of the West team, announced his squad would train in Baton Rouge, La., at Louisiana State University, where he formerly coached. Jones was one of the original "guarantors" who put up cash to assure success of the Sugar Bowl in its beginning, but he has never brought his team to play in the classic.

OUT HUNTING . .

With Jack Bell

It may seem strange to many of the present generation, but the word "conservation" is actually very new—at least in its present usage.

It was in 1907 that Gifford Pinchot, then chief of the United States Forest Service, and President Theodore Roosevelt collaborated in popularizing the word to represent the safeguarding of all of the Nations natural resources.

Prior to that time desultory safeguarding efforts had been made by individual States and by the Federal Government, but not in a unified program. The greatest progress, of course, has been made in the past decade.

Conservation, often defined as the wise use of natural resources, has been also explained as ". . . a sustained effort to make good the mistakes of our pioneer forefathers, who were content to take all they could get out of their immediate environment and then move on to fresh fields of exploitation." Says another: "Conservation is taking throught for the future."

For many years it was felt that all that was necessary to protect the resources of the State and Nation were to pass a lot of laws and then enforce them. And that is still one of the best methods of preserving the natural resources of our country. But the surer, though somewhat slower, method is by educating both the present and coming generations to appreciation of the need for conserving our natural resources.

If we pause for a minute and look back over the pages of history, we will see that the rulers of Egypt, Persia and the Near East all lived in the splendor of their era; today the lands which they ruled and cultivated are arid wastes.

Yet we, an educated race, really believe, as a group, that this story book tale is a misfortune and will never beset us.

Let us look back on the hysteria of the last World War—the denuding of our forests, overgrazing, overcultivation, and general exploitation of our Nation's natural resources. Today we have the dust bowl, soil erosion, and floods—as a direct result.

Any step that is taken in the conservation of our great land materially benefits us as a human population. What is essential for the replacement of a suitable habitat and environment for wildlife will affect us humans—that preservation of what we have is essential to continued existence.

Trumpeters Rally

The rare trumpeter swan, which was on the verge of extinction, apparently is holding its own, though conservationists are alarmed at the slow rate of increase.

The interest aroused by Secretary Harold L. Ickes, and other conservationists in 1934, stayed the threatened extermination of the trumpeter swan and resulted in an increase of the scant remnant. Disappointment, however, is reported in the small gains made by the swans during the last few years, and renewed and increased vigilance urged.

There should be a normal increase annually of at least three cygnets to a pair, according to naturalists, but the actual increase has been substantially smaller than this expectation. With the exception of five that have been transplanted to other wildlife refuges, the entire population of trumpeter swans in the United States during the breeding season was in Red Rock Lakes National Wildlife Refuge, Montana and Yellowstone National Park, Wyo. A recent census revealed that 190 birds that showed up last year had increased by only 21, making the national total only 211.

Hunters Responsible

Survival of this rare, stately species, it is emphasized, depends on the continued watchfulness of sportsmen for many an open season to come. The loss of only one bird often means the loss of an entire breeding pair, because the trumpeter swan mates for life and seldom takes another companion when its mate is killed.

Last fall, when the waters of Red Rock Lake were frozen, an adult trumpeter swan unable to fly was captured and penned up with another swan already in captivity. The two birds lived together all winter in apparent harmony.

This spring a male swan, apparently the mate of the captured female, appeared at the pen and remained there. Immediately, the penned female swan began attacking her fellow captive and trying to get out. Since she appeared able to fly, refuge personnel released her, and she and her mate calmly glided off together.

Eagles Beat Sea Gulls, 5-3; Many Penalties

ing "badman" was Pete Horeck, of the Gulls, with three minors.

There was someone in the penalty box for every second of the second period, which is undoubtedly a record, for there is no improving on it.

Washington, with its new goalie, Craig McClelland, making a satisfactory debut, hopped off to a 2-1 lead in the opening period and never relinquished it.

Following the match Washington Coach Redvers Mackenzie announced that he was letting Atlantic City have Leith Dickie, who was the Eagles' regular goalie before McClelland was acquired.

In reserve to McClelland the Eagles will have Carl Howell who is returned from Atlantic City where he was on loan.

Crowd-pleasing Freddy Weaver, the little blond terror, and Courteau and Roland Bleau were the moving spirits of the Washington attack, with Bleau showing great improvement in his skating and stick handling.

Ullyot Starts Scoring

Kenny Ullyot started the scoring with one at 5:16 for Washington when Kirby was sitting out the first of his penalties. Keith Allen got another one for the Eagles, at 12:47 with the help of Courteau, and again with Atlantic City a player shy.

The Sea Gulls cut their deficit to 1-2 on Horeck's marker at 14:02 as Horeck eluded Rollie McLenanhan's attempted poke check, shot the puck to Center Tom Burlington and flicked the return pass into the nets. There were seven penalties in this period, six in the next and as many in the third.

The nearest the boys came to a fight was early in the second period when Alec Cunningham, Gulls' winger, cracked Weaver over the head with his stick. He drew no blood but he did draw a major high sticking penalty and Washington capitalized on it as Art Thompson made the score 3-1 ith the collaboration of Les Hickey and Don Durno. This was at 7:23.

Odie Hollowell chalked up another for the Eagles at 13:53, with Tom McCormack assisting, but just when it appeared the Sea Gulls were out of the running they flashed back with a pair of quickies by Burlington, one of the smoothest players in the circuit who got loose to score at 18:39 and repeated unassisted at 19:52 to pull his team to 3-4.

Johnstown Wins, Ties N. Y. for Lead

Johnstown, Pa., Dec. 16 (AP).—Johnstown climbed back into a tie with New York for first place in the Eastern Amateur Hockey League tonight by scoring a decisive 4-to-1 triumph over the Rovers.

With the count deadlocked at 1-1 going into the second period, Vitarelli, of the Bluebirds, took a neat pass from Marzo in front of the net and blasted it past Goalie McGill for the deciding goal.

Johnstown got a freak goal in the third period when McGill blocked Coombs' shot only to let it fall off his glove into the net.

Princeton All-American In 1898-99 Dies in Fire

Corvallis, Oreg., Dec. 16 (AP).—Arthur R. T. Hillebrand, an All-America football tackle at Princeton in 1898 and 1899, died Sunday in a farmhouse fire.

The blaze also was fatal to his sister-in-law, Mrs. H. H. Hillebrand, and his nephew, Homer, jr., 13. His brother, H. H. Hillebrand, sr., also a former Princeton athlete, escaped with minor burns.

Contract Bridge

In the national team-of-four game at Richmond, Va., B. Jay Becker and Harry J. Fishbein, who were teamed with Phil Abramsohn and Morrie Ells, bid and made six diamonds on today's hand.

Actually, with a heart opening, six diamonds cannot be fulfilled; declarer has to give up a trick to the king of trumps and also lose a heart, as he is unable to develop sufficient discards in time.

Today's Hand

The bidding:

Opening lead—6 ♠.

Amusingly enough, while Fishbein and Becker bid and made six, the opponents, holding the same cards against Abramsohn and Ells, went down one at five, losing two hearts and a diamond.

Becker made six easily with the favorable spade lead. The queen went on from dummy, West's ace was trumped. Becker now took the diamond finesse and lost. But he won the heart return with the ace, drew the remaining trumps and discarded dummy's losing hearts on his own good clubs. He could now ruff his two card losers or ruff one and discard one on the spade king. He lost only the king of diamonds.

Fishbein was pleased with the bidding. He was delighted with Becker's show of confidence over his three-diamond call. "He knew I must have a powerful hand for my jump rise," said Fishbein, "so he ignored the double and went right to six diamonds. A beautiful bid!"

West's double was for a takeout, of course, as he could support a spade or heart bid from East.

When S. Garton Churchill, of Washington, and Waldemar von Zedwitz held the North-South cards they stopped at three no trump and made six. Here is how they bid the cards:

Von Zedwitz		Churchill
North	East	South	West
1 D	Pass	2 N T.	Pass
3 C	Pass	3 N T	Pass
Pass	Pass

Zedwitz paused before he passed his partner's bid of three no trump. He was considering bidding four clubs and trying for a slam at one of the minor suits.

In the play, a low spade was opened and Churchill won with the king. He entered the dummy with the queen of clubs and finessed the diamond.

West won and, apparently fooled by Churchill's false-card of spade honors, led another low spade. This trick was taken by declarer's queen, and he claimed the remainder of the tricks. He lost only the diamond king. Here, too, a heart opening would make a great difference in the result.

"Is that a business call?"

Listen! with Glynn

If citizens of any foreign countries throughout the world should remain in doubt about America's position in the war, it certainly won't be the fault of the Columbia Broadcasting System's short-wave stations.

The two 50-watt CBS international short-wave transmitters, WCBX and WCAB, from New York and Philadelphia, are now in 24-hour-a-day operation, broadcasting America's version of the news in 10 languages to the far corners of the world. The languages are English, French, German, Spanish, Portuguese, Italian, Dutch, Swedish, Serbo-Croat and Polish.

And, since the start of the Japanese-American hostilities, the number of short-wave broadcasts has increased 400 per cent.

The usual short-wave programming to foreign countries before Sunday, December 7, called for a ratio of something like 75 per cent entertainment and 25 per cent news. Now that proportion has been exactly reversed, and it's 75 per cent news and 25 per cent music and entertainment—which latter percentage also stands for severe curtailment if news of paramount importance develops while it's on.

Thanks to CBS's powerful short-wave transmitters, too, the world has been privileged—insofar as it's allowed—to hear the inspiring words of President Roosevelt the three times he has spoken since the war began.

And then they've been multiplied nine times, in that many different languages.

Jury to Probe Jap Activities Up to Attack

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

The special grand jury on Axis agents yesterday turned its guns on the Japanese propaganda machine which operated in the United States up to the day the bombs fell on Pearl Harbor.

Using channels similar to those of the Nazi operatives, which were discovered in the last three months of the inquiry, the Japanese circulated antiinterventionist material which questioned the wisdom of aid to China and advocated that America keep "hands off the Far East."

Sought by the grand jurors and Special Prosecutors William Power Maloney and Edward J. Hickey, jr., are the Japanese agents—both American and alien—who carried on these operations without registering and revealing their connections at the State Department, as was required by the peacetime Foreign Agent Registration Act.

Action Sped on New Law

Meanwhile, on Capitol Hill action was speeded on a new law, sharpening the teeth of the regulations against foreign propagandists and broadening the definition of an "agent" to fit the realities uncovered by the grand jurors. Introduced in both House and Senate several weeks ago, the measure is expected to be useful under war conditions, providing a weapon against enemy operatives who might succeed in keeping clear of the stringent laws against sedition.

The House bill, which was offered by Chairman Hatton W. Sumners of the Judiciary Committee, is due to come before the committee today, having already been approved by a subcommittee.

First witness called by Grand Jury Foreman John S. Gorrell here yesterday was Ralph Townsend, former writer for Scribner's Commentator, antiinterventionist magazine of Lake Geneva, Wis., and its companion weekly, the mysteriously financed and violently anti-British Herald.

Townsend was at one time a consular officer in China. In recent years he has written sympathetically of Japan's ambitions in Asia, urging a conciliatory attitude on the part of the United States.

Reports from San Francisco, Townsend home until he joined the Lake Geneva group this year, were that he had numerous connections in Japanese commercial and government circles there.

From this it was conjectured that he would be able to give the grand jurors valuable information in the current inquiry.

Townsend pledged support to the national war effort and said he would do all he could to help. After being questioned most of yesterday, Townsend was ordered to return this morning.

Catherine Curtis Testifies

Briefly a witness yesterday was Catherine Curtis, national chairman of the Women's National Committee to keep the United States out of war, which Miss Curtis said was "now defunct, murdered by the Japanese on December 7."

Miss Curtis said the committee was formed in 1939, as a revival of the National Committee for Hands Off the Supreme Court, which flourished in 1937. In its antiwar role the committee published a pamphlet attacking the Lend-Lease Act. Large quantities of this work were sold to Frank B. Burch, Akron, Ohio, lawyer whom the grand jury indicted for acting as a German propagandist. He pleaded guilty, admitting he handled this pamphlet for the German consul in Cleveland, was fined $1000 and escaped a prison term only because of his age.

Called as a witness this afternoon is Prof. Kenneth Scott, of Western Reserve University, Cleveland, who also wrote for Scribner's.

Navy Extends Recruiting Drive To CCC Youth

In an effort to keep the Navy on a volunteer basis, the Navy yesterday extended its recruiting campaign among enrollees of the Civilian Conservation Corps.

Secretary of the Navy Knox announced that CCC Director J. J. McEntee had approved a request that Navy recruiters be permitted to visit the camps. Movies showing life in the Navy will be shown at the CCC camps as a part of the drive, he stated.

"It is highly desirable for today's two-ocean Navy to be maintained as a volunteer service," Knox said. "A ship at sea is too small a place to maintain discipline and efficiency among men, some of whom may not wish to be there."

Pearl Harbor Attack Forecast, Dies Declares

By the Associated Press

Chairman Dies (Democrat), of Texas, said yesterday the House Committee investigating unAmerican activities had information months ago "indicating the planned attack on Pearl Harbor and Manila" but had refrained from holding hearings on the matter at the Administration's request.

Dies told the House the committee had obtained a map from a former Japanese diplomatic official in Hawaii which, Dies said, showed the location of American ships then in Pearl Harbor, the range of the aerial patrols from the island and other military information.

The Texan said that his committee brought the information to the attention of the Justice Department and announced that unless there was official Administration objection, public hearings would be held on the matter. Dies read a letter from the Acting Attorney General at the time stating that both President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull had taken the view such hearings would be "inadvisable." Whereupon, Dies related, the committee called off the hearings.

Although he said that now was "water over the dam," Dies declared the Administration had not been "alert in dealing with Fifth Column activities" and asserted there still are many "100 per cent pro-Nazi" persons at work in the Nation's defense industries.

REMEMBER PEARL HARBOR!

Auto Industry's First Plane Plant Will Be Opened Soon After January 1

The first Army bomber comprised of parts made by the auto industry will roll off the lines of the new Government assembly plant at Kansas City, Mo., soon after the first of the year, several months ahead of schedule, the OPM announced yesterday.

The bomber, a B-23, two-engine model, will come into the world without benefit of scheduled ceremonies to mark the beginning of construction. The event was cancelled, the OPM said, by the urgency of the work at hand.

Work is also being speeded on the four other bomber assembly plants which will draw on the auto industry for parts and subassemblies. These are located at Tulsa, Okla.; Fort Worth, Tex.; Omaha, Neb., and Willow Run, Mich. They will be in production by 1942.

In another development designed to speed military production, the OPM announced a conference beginning today between W. H. Harrison, OPM production director, and 40 machine tool makers. Primary purpose, it was indicated, is to rush production schedules by "a substantial increase" in the number of manhours to be worked each month.

The Supply Priorities and Allocations Board yesterday approved a plan for tripling the country's present refining capacity of 100-octane, aviation gasoline. SPAB was understood to have granted the highest priority ratings to the project, which will be carried on by present members of the petroleum refining industry. Some of the expansion will be Government financed, it was said.

The program calls for lifting production of the aviation fuel from a present rate of something less than 50,000 barrels a day to 150,000 barrels a day, said to be "enough and more than enough" for future expanded military demand under the victory program.
